Casting is under way at the Louis Burston Studio for the first David Butler picture under the Burston contract.

Al Blake, a pictureman for eleven years, has opened the Cave Cafe on South Spring Street. It is a little Bohemian place, somewhat different.

The Digest of the Motion Picture Industry
NEW YORK TRIP
It is now assured that Charles Ray will pay his first and long-deferred visit to New York, accompanied by Mrs. Ray and several members of his studio staff. While there, Mr. Ray will make various scenes for his new story, "Smudge."

ON PROGRAM
One of the features of the entertainment program is to be offered those attending the Associated First National Pictures convention in Chicago to be held presently, will be the exhibition of J. L. Frothingham's recently completed photoplay, "A Bride of the Gods."

GIVE "MOTHER" DINNER
The mothers of Mr. and Mrs. Hal E. Roach were honored guests recently at a dinner given at the Ambassador Hotel by Mr. and Mrs. Hal E. Roach when the following from the Roach Studios and their mothers were present: Harold Lloyd, Mildred Davis, Marie Mosquini, Director Fred Newmeyer and Charles Stevenson.

TALMADGE TO TOUR ORIENT
Norma Talmadge has perfected plans of an extended tour of the Orient. Before leaving she will make a picture on the West Coast.

ARROW HEAD HERE
W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow Film Corporation, arrived here recently to confer with heads of the producing organizations releasing through the Arrow. Accompanying Mr. Shallenberger was Morris R. Schlank, whose productions are also handled by Arrow.

CAROONIST USES SEMON
Jack Collins, the cartoonist who succeeded Larry Semon on the New York Evening Telegram, is now drawing the daily syndicated comic strip depicting the adventures on Fanay Fillum, the Blum fan. In one of the cartoons Larry Semon appears.

RESTING
Alice Terry is spending a short vacation at Mount Lowe previous to starting work in Rex Ingram's new Metro production of "The Prisoner of Zenda."

RETURNS TO WORK
Darrell Foss is back again after a protracted trip through Canada and the East.
Caroline Rankin is playing a part in "My Lady Friends" at the Majestic.
Katherine Griffiths, character woman, recently passed away. She was working for Universal at the time.
Martha McKay has deserted the Eastern Studios in which she has played numerous leading roles, and has joined the Bluf colony in Hollywood.
George Dromgold, who has appeared in various Marshall Neilan pictures, has been signed to enact an important character part in "Penrod," Mr. Neilan's current production for First National.

Eric Mayne, who appeared in Rex Ingram's production of "The Conquering Power," has been given a part in "The Prisoner of Zenda," about to start production under Mr. Ingram's direction.

DOREEN TURNER
Being Featured in Campbell Comedies
"Under the Lash," an adaptation by J. E. Nash from "The Shulamite," starring Gloria Swanson, will be the attraction at Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre the week of October 23d. Miss Swanson is supported by Mahlon Hamilton, Russell Simpson, Lilian Leighton, Lincoln Steadman and others.
Ray Thompson is enacting a featured role with Dick Hatton in "The Hoolihood of the West."

James F. O'Shea has joined the J. L. Frothingham company as production manager.

Willis Robards is playing a prominent role in "Man to Man," Harry Carey's forthcoming starring vehicle.

Emil Fluraiah, father of Viola Dana, and Shirley Mason, has returned to Hollywood after a visit to New York.

Cyrus J. Williams, Pathe producer, who returned to Los Angeles recently, is vacationing at Santa Catalina.

Funeral services were held recently for William H. Cleveland. He is survived by Dorothy Beale Cleveland, his widow.

Metro's studio grounds soon will include a new theater that will show pre-released pictures to be used only by the company's executives.

Friends of Eddie Nolan, former manager of Campbell Comedies, will be glad to learn that he is rapidly recovering from a recent illness and expects to be working again soon.

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE
CHARLES AND RAYMOND DE BRIAC
The Little De Briac twins, Charles and Raymond, who are seen on the cover this week, have been associated with the drama since the first hour of their five-year-old lives, for they were born in the Brooklyn Theatre, where their father, now with Bellascope, was filling an engagement.
Their first picture appearance was under the direction of George Fitzmaurice in "Pay- ing the Piper." Just a year ago Charles and Raymond came to the California studios with their uncle, Jean De Briac, and have since played in support of Gladys Walton in "High Heels," showing this week at the Superba, Lasky's "Don't Tell Everything," and C. B. DeMille's "Saturday Night," yet to be released.
It is generally conceded that these charming youngsters have a brilliant future.

GOES EAST FOR RETAKES
Lewis Sargent left for New York recently to film retakes for the Frances Marion photoplay, "Just Around the Corner," a Cosmopolitan production, in which young Sargent plays the lead.

RETURNS FROM FILM TOUR
Harry Lustig, Metro's district exchange manager for the Pacific Coast, has returned after a trip to New York and a visit to the exchanges in his territory.

Monroe Salisbury expects to start his new picture soon at San Mateo.

On completion of his present vaudeville tour Carlyle Blackwell will return to films.

Jacqueline Logan has been signed by Goldwyn to be featured in all-star vehicles.

Vera Stedman, one of the Christie comedy stars, has become the mother of twins. She is the wife of Jack Taylor, a musician.
Earl Lee and A. Ito have been promoted to the cast of "Clay," starring Miss Du Pont, under the direction of Paul Scardon.

Mary Jane Irving, six years old, is playing a part in the story William D. Taylor is now producing.

Evelyn Nelson is working with Jack Hoxie in "Sparks of Fling," his newest picture for Ben Wilson Productions.

Warren Deane, general manager of the Hal E. Roach Studios, has motored to Soligam, Fla., where he played in a picture. Her little daughter, Julie, accompanied her.
Jean Acker, in private life Mrs. Rudolph Valentino, is a patient in a Los Angeles hospital and will not be able to return to the screen for a number of weeks.

Several of the scenes in Oliver Morosco's production, "Slippy McGee," were taken at Mount Repose, the home of Elizabeth Bland, Magmot, the author, near Natchez, Miss.
AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Interior sets are now being constructed for Harold Lloyd's next comedy on which work is expected to commence in about a week. Mr. Lloyd's "A Sailor-Made Man," was shown in its first preview at the Glendale Theatre recently.

Hal E. Roach is writing the story which John Grey is putting into continuity form for the next Ruth Roland Serial, as yet untitled, which will follow the production of "The Timber Queen."

Harry "Snub" Pollard's prehistoric comedy entitled, "The Stone Age," has been shipped to New York. Mr. Pollard is at present making a theatrical comedy with Marie Mosquini as leading lady. William Watson is directing and Charles Parrott wrote the script.

If M. Walker is titling two Jimmy Parrott comedies, "Try, Try Again" and "Busy Bees," which will be previewed soon at the studios.

NEW HALLROOM COMEDY

Herman Raymaker has started work on his next Hallroom Boys comedy for Federated Film Exchanges distribution. Sid Smith is featured in the part of "Percy" and Mr. Raymaker, together with Mr. Smith, wrote the story which is as yet untitled.

CHRISTIE COMEDIES

Christie Comedies on the way are: "Pure and Simple," with Bobby Vernon and Josephine Hill; "Fresh from the Farm," featuring Bobby Vernon, and "No Parking," featuring Neal Burns.

MARJORIE DAW AND JOHNNY HARRON IN "PENROD"

Marjorie Daw has been engaged to portray the role of Margaret Schodell in "Penrod," and to appear opposite her in this picture, Marshall Nellan has engaged Johnny Harron.

FIRST NATIONAL ATTRACTIONS AT ALHAMBRA

N. Y. SHOWING FOR "SILAS MARNER"

"Silas Marner," which Frank P. Donovan has made in pictures, will have its premiere at the Hotel Plaza, New York, sometime in November.

WITH AYRES

Mahlon Hamilton is enacting one of the principal roles in "The Lane That Had No Turning," Agnes Ayres is starring vehicle for Lipton.

AHEAD IN PRODUCTION

Conway Tearle has finished a number of features for Selznick release. Mr. Tearle is about five or six weeks ahead of schedule, and so has returned to the stage for a time.

OLIVER TO BUILD STUDIO

Harold G. Oliver, designer of the Irvin V. Willat Studio and its fittings within, is building a studio in Culver City for the manufacture of a novel style of furniture.

MACDONALD WITH STEWART

Donald MacDonald has been engaged to play the heavy role in Anita Stewart's forthcoming picture, which will be directed by Fred Niblo.

AT LASKY'S

Pennhy Stanlaws has about completed his production of Barrie's play, "The Little Minister," in which Betty Compson is the star, for Barrie.

Thomas Meighan and members of the unit making "If You Believe It, It's So," are back at the studios, making interior scenes, under the direction of Tom Forman.

Jack Holt started lately on his second star picture, "The Parson of Pananini," which Mr. Holt will have for his director Joseph Henabery, who served in the same capacity for his first picture. Fritzi Brunette will enact the feminine lead in this picture.

It is announced that Whyam D. Taylor will produce Miss Compson's next picture, starting in November.

Gloria Swanson will be back this week from the Rio Grande after a location trip for Mexican scenes in "The Husband's Trademark," her new picture which Sam Wood is directing.

"One Glorious Day" has been chosen as the final title of the comedy directed by James Cruze, which was tentatively called "IRK." Will Rogers has the leading role with Ella Lee, Alan Hale, and others in the cast. Walter Woods and A. B. Barringer wrote this original comedy, which will be completed next week.

AFFILIATED DOES NOT ENDORSE ETHICAL

(For your information, this is a copy of a letter sent to Members of the Affiliated Picture Interests): Your attention is directed to the fact that the so-called "First Annual Exposition of the Motion Picture Industry" is a private enterprise of the "Ethical Motion Picture Society of America."

This enterprise has not been endorsed by the Affiliated Picture Interests, an organization comprising individuals and all associations connected with the production, distribution, and exhibition of motion pictures in California authorized to represent the industry in matters of common interest, under which head come fairs, expositions, entertainers, etc.

So far as we know the "Ethical Motion Picture Society" is therefore acting only for itself. It has made no statement concerning the objections, scope, and proposed use of profits of its proposed "motion picture exposition" to the board of directors of the Affiliated Picture Interests of California, and it therefore does not have the cooperation of the united factors of the motion picture industry.

AFFILIATED PICTURE INTERESTS

By Order of the Board of Directors. Attested by T. E. TAYLOR, Secretary.

CONTINUES WITH NOVO

Upon her recent return from the East, Adele Susanne Buffaloing resigned as secretary of the Novo Syndicate. Miss Buffaloing is still scenarist, editor, and continuity writer, however, for Novo and has begun work on her second production, "Mice and Men," an original story by Arthur Cameron. Novo's first production is entitled "Apples of Sodom," an original story by Miss Buffaloing.

Howard Gay, Jack Lloyd and Guy Eakins are playing important parts in the latest all-star Hamilton-White comedy under the direction of Bobb Kerr.

LETTERS OF A SELF-MADE CAMERA MAN TO HIS NEPHEW

By John Leeree
Glen Cedar Ranch, Burbank, Cal.

Dear Nephew:

Well, we are back to the farm and animals once more, and it seems mighty quiet and restful like. In these days of high living, safety last, transportation, deadly booze, censorship agitation and eighty scenes a day directors, a little semi-occasional getting back to nature and fundamentals does a lot of good. I think that maybe it's not being able to do this often enough that makes some of our actors and directors so fired up temperamental.

Anyhow an H2O cocktail from a hundred feet under ground, some of your aunt's fried chicken, and "Virginia" biscuits and we feel like some of these boys claim they feel after they have robbed some poor monkey of his intestinal glands, whatever they may be. Speaking of glands I know of one or two cases where even the glands out of an elephant wouldn't bring back what they have lost through years of foolishness.

I suppose it's these glands in a monkey that makes him so lively. I am thinking of using an ultra speed camera on this Brazilian specimen I have so that he won't look like a series of streaks on the screen. His glands are sure safe so far as I am concerned because if I had 'em there's no director living that could keep up with me. The only thing that would slow us down would be a hot box on the camera. The monkey came near losing one of his banana hooks yesterday. He likes to torment Oswald, the turtle. Oswald has a wicked jaw but the monkey didn't get wise to it until the occurrence I am relating. He was reaching under Oswald's overcoat, trying to pull his head out when suddenly an awful shriek rent the air. It reminded me of the noise that the heroine made when the villain grabbed her, way back in the 19-20-terrier drama days. I had the camera on it, because there is no such thing as a rehearsal with these critters, but after five or six turns with the crank as narrow as nothing but dust, I went to the rescue of the leading man. He was leading all right and had Oswald's head pulled out about a foot from his shell. As soon as I opened Oswald over on his back, the monk was free.

In this work I sometimes use a fourteen inch lens. Animals are like some amateur actors, they don't work as well when the camera is too close. By making an enclosure just outside the camera lines, with a suitable background and the side toward the camera open, we are able to hold them in one location tolerably well. The fox terrier pups are coming along nicely. I don't know what I will give you the one you wanted or got. He seems to know better what is required than any of the others. A pup can be depended upon to do something interesting most any time, but especially just after a nap. The pup you wanted and Thomas Jefferson, a big Rhode Island Red rooster pull off some funny stunts. I am trying to get a young duck accustomed to harness and to pulling a wagon, but from all indications I'll have better luck in hitching him to a boat. It's all very interesting, however, and as I said in the beginning, it's diverting.

I'm sorry that cooperative picture didn't pan out well, but I am of the opinion it was made too cheap. It's possible, you know, to make them that way, and maybe they weren't any good either. Try it again anyhow.

Your aunt says she will make doughnuts Saturday so you had better turn the Henry F. in this direction about that time.

Yours always,

UNCLE DUDLEY.

WITH NEW YORK METRO

Little Miriam Battista, who has just finished a picture with Norma Talmadge has been engaged by William Christy Cabanne for an important child part in a forthcoming production.

FLORENCE WALTON IN VAUDEVILLE

Florence Walton, the dancer, will be seen in vaudeville shortly in a new sketch.

Lou Tellegen has turned his attention to the staging of the Walton two-a-day vehicle.

DUKE FOR FILMS

The Duke of Manchester has been approached by agents of an American film concern to take the leading part in some of their forthcoming productions. It was reported last month that the Duke of Manchester was to leave for America and start upon a production for the screen in which he was to be starred.

CHAPLIN BUYS AIRPLANE

Charlie Chaplin placed with an airplane concern in Paris recently, an order for an aer-o-limousine of the latest type. It will bear as its crest and coat of arms a comical derby hat.

Edwin Justis Mayer, magazine writer, has been transferred to the Goldwyn Culver City Studios as title writer.

Herman Robbins has resigned his position as sales manager of the Fox organization and is succeeded by R. A. White.

SOAP BUBBLES FOR CLAUDIUS

When Wallace Worsley "shot" probably the most elaborate set in "The Octave of Claudio" Thursday evening, one of the screen's most novel effects in the way of a soap bubble enthralled dance was a feature about which the press, present as the guests of J. A. Jackson and Jack Gault of the Goldwyn publicity department, was most enthusiastic. Goldwyn, while denying the statement that it is going in for extravagance, has some technical genuises of its own.

Silas E. Snyder has been appointed the new editor of the American Cinematographer.

Frank Dazey has been engaged by Myron Selznick as associate editor of the Selznick Scenario Department at Fort Lee, N. J.

Waterson Rothacker is in Chicago where he will spend a short time before starting for his California plant.

Charles E. Whitaker, motion picture director, died on board the Admiral Dewey enroute to Los Angeles from San Francisco, last week.

The reorganized F Battery, 143rd Field Artillery, enjoyed the "Godmothership" of Mary Pickford during the war.

Charles Goodwin, formerly of the Superior Exchange Philadelphia, has undertaken the business management of The Exhibitor, a magazine published in Philadelphia.

The National Academy of Motion Pictures being built by George Eastman for the University of Rochester, is being completed. Mr. Eastman, in conjunction with the Eastman School of Music, another new institution, has contributed $4,500,000 for it.

A French troupe is to act for motion pictures in Germany. Camille Gode will produce at Neubalberg, for the Deca Bioscope, a scenario of Charles Mere, to be distributed in Central Europe by the Deca people, and in England and France by Jean Thomas.

Current Reviews

A lone whose love although lacking much in understanding, seems strong to carry him to the light. His pain, tenderness and diabolical hardiness are characteristics which are hard to bring together intelligently, but the mistress creates Furlanone without a noticeable effort. A clever bit of interpretation is Raymond Hatton’s portrayal of The Menance. There is no more versatile actor upon the screen than Hatton.

Hardee Kirkland, Edwin Wallack and Ray Laird are excellently cast as the principal remaining members of the group. The photography of “The Ace of Hearts” is greatly to the credit of Dan Short.

NEAR EAST CONFERENCE PLAN

Ten thousand orphans in Armenia will be fed this winter by an American-Califomia production. It was announced at the annual conference of Near East Relief held in Los Angeles recently.

State Secretary F. L. Sims in his report praised the work of the various committees during the year in leading two large food ships and in collecting old clothing for the famine area.

A dispatch gave the safe arrival of the second foodship “Esther Dollar,” which left San Pedro on June. The “Dutchet,” an earlier ship, unloaded in the Near East during August, it was shown. That existing American orphanages are overcrowded and many thousands of destitute and dying children are being turned away for the lack of supplies was confirmed by recent eye witnesses and motion pictures brought to the conference.

TO MAKE COMEDY IN HONOLULU

Al Christie will go to Honolulu during the coming winter for the production of one of his new two-reel comedies to be released through his company. The star in the picture will be Dorothy Devere, who was seen in “Nothing Like It,” the first picture released in the current Christie series, and who will be seen in “Saving Sister Susie,” a new Christie to be released in November.

“Winne from Wickii” is the tentative title of the two-reel. The scenario is being prepared by Frank Roland Conklin. In the meantime Al Christie and his directors, Scott Sidney and Hal Beaumie, will produce four additional comedies.

READY FOR RELEASE

J. L. Frothingham's forthcoming release through Associated First National Pictures, Inc., “A Bride of the Gods,” is now completed and prints of the photoplay will soon be dispatched to the branch offices of the distributing company. Producer Frothingham assembled an all-star cast for "A Bride of the Gods" and such personalities as Margaret De La Motte, William V. Mong, Louise Lovely, Ethel Grey Terry and James Woods Morrison have prominent roles in the production.

CONVENTION SHOWING

Mr. Nellans's newest picture, “Bits of Life,” telling four stories in six reels, will be shown at the convention of theatre owners now in progress in Chicago, under the auspices of Associated First National Exhibitors.

Gertrude Norman is cast in the new Bebe Daniels picture, now under production at Realart.

The Story Idea that struggles to get out

The right one is worth big money. Will you accept it and make a proposal for it to the producers? Hundreds of original stories, for dramatization on the screen, are urgently needed to keep the motion picture industry alive.

The Palmer Photoplay Corporation is the accredited agent of the leading producers in a nation-wide search for story-telling ability. Not literary skill, but creative imagination and dramatic insight—the ability to think out and tell a good story, dramatically.

It is a talent many people have who never suspect its presence. You may possess the gift yourself, and not be aware of it. Will you let us test you for it?

Send for the Van Loen questionnaire. In your own home by a simple psychological test you can learn whether you have the native ability for which the motion picture industry is anxious to pay liberally.

This questionnaire has started hundreds on the path to fame and big income. Just use the coupon below. You incur no obligation, of course.

FRENCH PRODUCTION NOTES

Three new picture theatres constructed for the Société des Cinémas Français are near completion. The Alhambra, at Asnières (a suburb of Paris), having a capacity of 1,800, opens next week; the Capitole, at Boulogne-sur-Seine (also a suburban hall), seating 2,000, is scheduled for October, and the Palais Rénos, at Rheims, to hold 1,800, is to be ready next month. Edmond Bouillon, of the Casino de Clichy, etc., will be managing director of the three establishments.

The Consortium Cinema has reengaged Leon Mathot for a number of years.

Julien Duvivier is arranging to make a screen version of Edgar Allen Poe's "Adventures of Gordon Pym, of Nantucket."

The French producer, E. E. Violet, has gone to Budapest to produce a film, with Claude France, previously known as Diane Perval, as principal.

"Don Juan de Manara" is to be executed by Marcel Lherbier for Gaumont, for which Marceline Pradot and Jacques Catelain will play the leads.

Luitz Morat has returned from Italy and Sicily where he produced "La Terre du Diable" (The Land of the Devil) with Gaston Modot, Pierre Regnier and Yvonne Aurel.

The Eden, at Vincennes, with a capacity of 2,000, was inaugurated last week with a special programme, including the Dempsey-Carpentier match. This suburban cinema is controlled by the Leon Brestillon and M. Silly group.

A scenario entitled "Humane," is being produced for the Eclipse Film Co., by Albert Dieudonne. A scene is laid at the Institute de France, and recently a number of players, attired as Academicians invaded the sacred premises to impersonate the Immortals attending a literary function. The leads are held by Jean Dax Clement, Nunes, Felix Ford, Mills Pierson and Lux.

THEODORA HAS NEW YORK OPENING

Goldwyn presented for the first time in America at the Astor, in New York, recently, the Italian screen spectacle, "Theodora." This motion picture was made in Italy by the Unione Cinematografica Italiano, and has not yet been released abroad, so that the presentation at the Astor was the world premiere of the first big Italian photodrama made since the war.

Laura La Varrnie has been cast in Douglas McLean's "The Hottentot."

The advanced publicity work on Selig's new animal serial will be done by Joe Weil.

Charles Dudley has been cast in Antonio Moreno's new Vitagraph picture.

Marcus Loew has booked the Warner Bros. new series of Monte Banks two-reel comedies.

William Boyd and Ruth Miller, Famous Players-Lasky players, were married recently at the home of Sylvia Ashton.

Burton Holmes will begin the twentieth season of his personally delivered travelogues in November.

Louis Dumar just returned from the Palo Alto Mountains where he has been playing the "heavy" with Texas Guinan in her latest Western production.

William P. Dawson, Fox technical director with the Mitchell and Wallace companies, is convalescent from an appendicitis operation which he underwent recently.

Max Rosenfield has been appointed editor of the Paramount Exploiter. Walter Eberhard, former editor, has resigned to join Yearwood's Flying Squadron.

Abel Gance, author and producer of "I Accuse," now showing at the Strand Theatre, New York, is enroute to France on business.

An interesting program is outlined for Monday's meeting of the Photoplaywrights at their clubroom on the eighth floor of the Brack Shops.

INDIA BEGINS PRODUCTION

Calcutta, September 8

India is awakening from her slumber at last. There is activity in the leading cities among people interested in film production, as they are no longer satisfied with looking at pictures imported from America or England and think the time has arrived when they should produce on their own. I will not flood you with names of companies that have started producing, as, speaking from your standpoint—the standpoint of American production—production in India is but child's play, and the film has yet to be produced that may compare favorably with the production of the worst-equipped studio on your side. I do not speak in a spirit of disparagement of anybody. All beginners are crude, and necessarily the beginning in Indian production is crude, and millions of feet of film and millions of rupees will have yet to be thrown away before experience will be purchased, and then perhaps the industry will be in a position to produce something really worth producing.

Melodrama and The Public

To determine what the public wants and to offer it just that is the working basis which the successful producer long ago established for his organization; and let us observe that in committing himself to such an undertaking he showed no inclination to shirk the obligations which his position as a world enterainer incurred.

But like the rest of fallible mankind he has been known after much admirable accomplishment to grow careless and even to be foolishly dazzled at times by the glittering of many coins or by the brilliance of his own loudly heralded glory. Then as is true in the work of all negligent or deluded men, inferior spots have appeared in the fabric of his weaving and to meet them has arisen the dissatisfaction of his consumer, the individual whom he had set out to please at all costs. A sense of failure, if only temporary is not an inspiring companion but far wiser is he who accepts it for the moment that it may assist him out of the reach of old pitfalls than is the one who aggressively strides on ignoring his liability to any weakness.

That weakness, the previously mentioned inferiority in the product of this year's picturemaker, has not been the result of a deterioration in what he has done so much as it has been due to his poor judgment in the selection of the material with which he has worked. Content with routine he has forgotten to keep his public's pulse constantly reported upon and while there is no accounting for the fickleness of popular favor, there should in all practical arts be frequent, understanding accountings to it.

To get down to cases: That great percentage of the American populace which passes its half dollars through the little iron grating at the box office window is today doing a regrettable amount of complaining over what is receiving in return for its favor which is to a surprising extent comprised of that type of unrealistic melodrama that, although extremely popular a few years back in company with the incoherent serial thriller, is now only tolerated as burlesque.

Last week, for instance, we heard five times as many laughs during the unreeled of Goldwyn's hysterically heavy production, "The Ace of Hearts," as were forthcoming at that company's Rupert Hughes' comedy, "From the Ground Up," seven days later, while a fairly full house gathered to witness Lasky's vivid, suspenseful "Under the Lash," giggled ridiculously during its most presumably serious and paralyzing moments. All of which might be taken as indicative that these things are in at least one way enjoyed and therefore justified. If so, fine—but not so!

It is well enough to take a laugh wherever it is found and value it accordingly, but there is a clammy after effect to misplaced mirth which perhaps is the trick of imagination slightly older than that which maliciously reminded us at nine years that while we might scoff at fairies and Santa Claus, there was just a chance that our sacrifice would undo us. In any event the people are steering more and more clear of these relics of the past while showing their preference for the happy comedy and human drama of which there are all too few being released.

It occurs to us that the sooner the man who would still know and meet with the approval of those who indirectly feed him catches step in the march of events and desires, the longer will he be assured of nourishment.

Believe us, the day of the "Blue Jeans," sawmill theme is over. Do we wish to revive an enfeebled old friend that he may ignobly be subjected to ridicule? His demise is near; let us be merciful in bidding him a cheerful farewell, thereby at least winning a legacy of fond celluloid memories. Such a course is the wisest and most comfortable one which our best judgment can suggest and if there is a greater blessing than wisdom, that blessing must be comfort!

The Hollywood Library Association

Announcement has been made of the organization of the Hollywood Library Association, a $500,000 corporation, which proposes to erect in Hollywood, in the very heart of the motion picture world, a library which will be devoted solely to works pertaining to all phases of the motion picture industry. The building, a site for which is now being negotiated, will house, besides the library, spacious reading rooms and the offices of the association. The organizers and incorporators are Roy L. Manker, Frederick Palmer, H. E. Teter, S. M. Warmbath, officials of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation, and Charles Donald Fox, all of Los Angeles.

With the avowed determination to maintain a repository of motion picture publications of the most extensive sort, the association aims also, in the language of its articles of incorporation, to "publish books, magazines, directories, encyclopedias and biographies relating to motion pictures." Its first book to be published, entitled "Breaking Into the Movies," is expected to be off the press about November 15th. It will contain articles by the highest authorities in filmm and will cover every possible phase of the motion picture industry.

Prior to leaving for Europe, Larry Wein- garten, field director of the Sacred Films, Inc., will go to Washington; D. C., for the purpose of exhibiting the completed four episodes of the Bible to the Chief Chap- lain of the U. S. Army, after which he will confer with Dr. Eldar James Banks, edu- cator and author at his home in New Jer- sey. Dr. Banks will direct the research work on the entire production. The exhibitors, press and clergy of New York state will be the guests of Wein garten at a special showing upon his return to New York City.

NEW ORGANIZATION TO PRODUCE IN- TERNATIONAL NEWS

International News, which has for several years been made by the International Film Service Co., Inc., and released through Uni- versal, will be produced hereafter by a new organization, The International News Reel Corporation.

Wm. Hearst maintains the same in- terest in the new company that he did in the former, while Edgar B. Hat rick, who has had charge of the Hearst News Film inter- ests since their inception in 1915, will be the general manager of the new corporation. The change in the producing corporation will not, however, affect the arrangements which will be through Universal as heretofore.

FILMING BUTLER PRODUCTION

Production of "The Milky Way," starring David Butler, has started at the Louis Bur- ston studios. The story is an original by Clyde Westover and Lottor Norrier. W. S. Van Dyke is directing.

Edward Sloman has returned from San Francisco where he selected locations for the forthcoming J. L. Frothingham produc- tion, temporarily titled, "The Man Who Smiled," production on which is now un- der way at the Brunton studios.

"SKIN DEEP" INCE RELEASE TITLE

"Skin Deep" is to be the release title of the Thomas H. Ince special filmed as "Lucky Damage," which has just been completed for distribution through Associated First Na- tional. The picture is expected to be avail- able sometime in January.

SCHWARTZ PRODUCTIONS

Schwartz Productions, starring Jean Riley is at present cutting "Eyes That Know," a five-reel drama. Miss Riley is taking advantage of the rest between pic- tures and is at present making a motor trip through the northern part of the state. Casting for her next picture will start with- in a few days.

Irving Cummings is cutting and lifting his second feature, "Northward." His new story, "The Valley of the Missing," is his third story, is now being put into continuity and the cast will be selected during the week.

"The Morals of Marcus," the production just completed by William D. Taylor, will be released in November. It stars Mary Mc Avoy.

Priscilla Dean, her director and company, and a technical staff will go to Europe to make a picture in Vienna and Berlin, ac- cording to recent announcement.

AT UNIVERSAL

Frances Hodson Burnett's novel, "That Lass O'Lowrie," will open on the silver sheet again, this time as a forthcoming ve- hicle entitled "Jo." Screeners a few years ago it was filmed by Universal with Harry Carey and Helen Ware in the leading roles. Elliott J. Temple is in for the heroic role. King Baggot is making preparations to film "Human Hearts." Gerald Duffy is writing the continuity and the cast is being assembled.

"Mallory Campeador," a Saturday Even- ing Post story by R. G. Dirk, has been se- lected as the next vehicle for Herbert Raw- linson to follow "Barry Gordon" in produc- tion. George Hively will write the scenario. Another story bought for Rawlinson is "The Black Bug," by Louis Joseph Vance, a working script of which is being prepared. An all-star comedy cast is being directed through the action of "Oh, Doctor," by Craig Hopkins. "The Bowl of Plenty" and Virginia Teare are the featured players.

Marine episodes of "The Secret Four," Eddie Polo's serial based on Mexican oil land speculation and revolutionary activi- ties, are being taken at San Pedro. Kath- len Meyers plays the feminine lead oppo- site Polo.

An original story by Drago entitled "Out of the Silent North," has been accepted by Miss Dupont as the first project for Frank Mayo. The unit under Jack Conaway's di- rection which has been taking exteriors at Big Bear Lake for Mayo's first starring production, "Words of the North," has returned to the studio for interiors.

A screen adaptation of the catchy lyric, "Second Hand Rose," is being arranged by William Younger for the future Gladys Walton starring vehicle. "Kind Deeds" by William Flaven McNutt, is the name of another story purchased recently for Miss Mayo. Miss Dupont's next starring vehicle will be "The Golden Gallows," written by Vic- toria Galler.

Exterior scenes are being taken at Zel- zah and Calabassas for Harry Carey's cur- rent starring picture, "Man to Man." Stuart Paton is directing the production of the Jackson Gregory story.

Irving G. Thalberg has written an origi- nal story for Marie Prevost, entitled "The Frisky Flapper." Mr. Thalberg recently collaborated with Lucien Hubbard and Lon Chaney in writing "Wolf's Head," which was produced with Chaplin in the featured role. Doris Schroed- er has been assigned to scenarize "The Frisky Flapper." Two stories have been purchased for Hoot Gibson. One is "Sou'west," the other an original by Harvey Gates, entitled "Headin' West." Episode No. 7 of "Winners of the West" will be entitled "Fires of Fury."

CHANGE IN TITLES

The titles of three R-C. subjects sched- uled for early release, have been changed. "Ma'masse Jo," by Harriet Comstock, which was filmed by L. J. Gansler, becomes "Silent Years," "Home," and Gansler's special budget project, a novel by George Agnew Chamberlain, becomes "The Call of Home," and "Phroso," produced by Louis Magritt, of "Red Dust" fame, is based upon the novel of the same name by Sir Anthony Hope, has been changed to "Possession."

Dick Hatton is cutting his second Prairie Production at the Rothacker-Aller labor- atory. Hatton expects to start on his third picture about November 1st. (Continued on page 9)
"THE SPEED GIRL"

Kinema

Coincidence is a great thing! If you don't believe it, ask Einer Harris how it aided him to spin a romance and a fairly enlivening one at that, around Bebe Daniels' famous incarceration in the Santa Ana jail episode. But whether he has or has not any secrets to reveal it remains to observe that he might have been hard pressed to turn out a more appealing one even with the Realart publicity department's assistance had it not been for just the wonders that coincidence worked. Nevertheless, while to quote the young matron one row behind us, "it isn't much of a picture," "still," (her husband responds with just a diplomatic degree of enthusiasm) "it's kind of cute." For what more can one gracefully ask? In any event once under way, it moves along with satisfactory alacrity and it has been given an adequate production by Maurice Campbell and his technical staff.

Bebe is markedly at home, as indeed she should be in Betty Lee, the title role, or an ingenu who speeds and is arrested! Her part fails to present the comic moments which she has shown herself so competent to enforce, but otherwise it is representative.

Theodore Von Eltz is well placed in the masculine lead which is, however, dropped for such lengthy intervals that it fails to comprise the leading male role, a position filled rather by Frank Elliott who is given all of a close following through either needs or could desire in Carl D'Arce, that sort of a cadish heavy in which he is seen to best advantage.

Walter Hiers also comes in for "honorabule mention" in the uncompromising (to the press agent) part of Soapy Taylor, a publicist with a limited mental capacity.

A very interesting piece of work is managed by Norrie John who might equally have let Hilda, her "other girl" character, slip into the done-to-death sob sister class. That she valiantly refrains from doing is, for Courtenay and little Barbara Maier complete the cast.

H. Kinley Martin photographed "The Speed Girl."

Douglas Doty wrote the scenario.

"SALVATION NELL"

Alhambra

Whitman Bennett's screen presentation through First National of Edward Sheldon's somewhat world play, "Salvation Nell," is now released in this city. The production, while not of the type now popular, is lent appeal by a few really human moments and the splendid work of the cast, although Kenneth Webb's imperfect direction permits it to move far too slowly to its climax and then hesitate there inexcusably. Besides this, the picture contains nothing of mystery, and the suspense misses quite badly. Even so, its forcefulness does much to neutralize its inferiority with a naturalness.

Pauline Starke, one of our most sincere younger actresses, gives a beautiful interpretation in the title role, which is so well rendered that it makes play once more on the boards. Miss Starke is as dependable as she is capable, and she defines Nell with clear-cut characterization and technique.

Joseph King as Jim Platt, Nell's abusive lover, also offers some exceptionally good moments.

A lovely kidde and a talented one is Lawrence Johnson, who enact Little Jimmie, the lefty-minded son of an illitc love.

Charles McDonald and Matthew Betz are perfect types for Sid and Al McGovern, while Evelyn Carrington is continually pleasing in Hallelujah Maggie.

Gypsy O'Brien, Edward Langford and Marie Hayes are also included in the list of players.

LILIAN LEIGHTON

"UNDER THE LASH"

Grauman's

"Under the Lash," a J. E. Nash photoplay from the drama by Edward Knobleck and Claude Askew entitled "The Shulamite," presents Gloria Swanson in an interpretation which is refreshingly different from the slickly exotic ones to which Lasky has been wont to assign her in the past several years, but whether the story, incorporating the rankest of melodramatic situations, will be seriously accepted by the much educated theatre-going world, is questionable.

Nevertheless, even unconvincing, it will undoubtedly find the photoplay worthy of a close following through to the end which is to be conceded a real point in its favor; and, furthermore, the cast accomplishes some artistic characterizations which are in themselves a redeeming joy.

The star plays Deborah Krillet, the acquisitive wife of a brutal Boer farmer. Her treatment by him and her attachment to his English overseer starts off an interesting romance which Fate in many convenient forms seems through to a happy finish. Miss Swanson handles her part carefully and builds up a very natural appeal for it which Sam Woods' direction has, either wisely encouraged or permitted as the case may be. In any event, Deborah is a realistic woman upon the creation of which her player is to be congratulated.

In Robert Waring, the Englander, Mahlon Hamilton gives a customarily well poised performance which readers his romance with Deborah more than worthwhile to the audience.

No other than Russell Simpson enact Simeon Krillet, the religious fanatic, who holds Deborah's destiny in the curve of his slambok and Simeon is done as Simpson alone would do him. Human is he even in his most exaggerated moments of brutality and egomism, and an excellent screen character.

It is only fair to add that had his beard been less obvious he actor would have had one less obstacle to overcome in his audience's mind.

Lillian Leighton, however, who "takes the cake." Never have we witnessed her in a more excellent portrayal, never in fact, have we seen a more clever piece of characterization than is Taunt Anna Vander-ber, Simeon's stodgy sister, who is amusing throughout all of her villainy. Her mannervisms are both funny and convincing and the role serves to occasion all of the comedy and much of the complication in the picture.

Lincoln Steedman is suitably cast as Jan,

Tant Anna's stupid son.

The list of players is completed by Phenn Jasper, that rarely-happened-upon individual, a negro who can act. She is seen as Meneke, a kaffir girl.

At Gilks' camerawork is excellent.

"FROM THE GROUND UP"

California

A moderately diverting little comedy by Rupert Hughes is, "From the Ground Up," Goldwyn's newest Tom Moore starring release. Dealing with the rise to fortune of a happy-go-lucky paddy, who commences his climb by serving as valet to an excavating machine, it is perhaps more inconsistent than usual and further disappointing in that the famous Hughes subtleties do not entirely live up to expectations in humor.

However, E. Mason Hopper's direction creates the production an appropriate setting for the always enjoyable Moore personality, which is, of course, a vital consideration.

And, indeed, the precocious Irishman has seldom had a sunnier, happier role to his credit than is Terence Gilley, a young fellow with ascending propensities. If great good nature is instead of too strident portrayals is what the public is looking for, Terence fills the bill, and Tom fills Ter-ence's.

The necessarily aristocratic but "reduced" heroine in the play, one Miss Philema Mortimer, is amply accounted for in the hands of Helene Chadwick, whose work is improbably right along although she still lacks much, that, for want of a better term, is called sympathetic appeal.

Darrell Foss as the "lounge lizardish" young heavy is good and particularly so in his drunk sequence, while Hardee Kirkland, De Witt Jennings and Grace Pike adequately dispatch the remaining positions.

John J. Mescal's photography of "From the Ground Up" is perfectly satisfactory.

"GYPSY BLOOD"

Tally's

"Gypsy Blood" was previewed in the issue of June 19, 1921. It is a German-made production of Ernst Lubitsch, starring Pola

Negr, and released by First National. If it

Bert Lytell in making of his newest Metro picture, "The Phantom Bride," will appeal as his own father for an "important phase of this picture."

Teddy Gerard and Ann Cornwall have been chosen to portray important parts in the new Richard Barthelmess picture for Associated First National.
Where to Find People You Know

JOINS MILLER UNIT

Claude Mitchell, until recently a member of Famous Players’ executive staff in England, has been appointed production manager for the Bayard Vellier unit at Metro’s Hollywood studios. Mr. Mitchell succeeds Joseph Strauss who, after a continuous service of more than three years in that capacity, suddenly died recently.

With the appointment of Mr. Mitchell to the Vellier unit, the list of production managers for the next round of pictures is completed. Starrett Ford is with Rex Ingram; David H. Thompson with Harry Beaumont; Clifford P. Butler with Maxwell Karger and Charles Hunt with George D. Baker.

APPEARS OPPOSITE HUSBAND

Mrs. Sessue Hayakawa, otherwise known as Tsuru Aoki, will appear opposite her husband in his forthcoming R-C. Pictures release, “The Street of the Flying Dragon,” a story by Dorothy Goodfellow, which has been adapted to the screen by Miss Eve Unsell, head of the R-C. scenario department.

ON DIRECTORATE

James Oliver Curwood has become a member of the Board of Directors of Pine Tree Pictures, Inc. The company is producing four pictures based on Curwood’s stories.

AGAIN WITH HUGHES

Rudolph Bergelquist, who photographed Gareth Hughes’ first three starring pictures for S-L. Pictures, and all of Nazimova’s Metro pictures, will again photograph Mr. Hughes in his new series of productions which George D. Baker is directing.

ADDED TO GOLDYWN’S SCENARIO STAFF

A. Channing Edington, who has been at the Goldwyn studios for two years in the capacity of reader and assistant director, is the latest addition to the scenario staff. He has already written a number of stories including “Bare Knuckles,” a recent William Russell starring vehicle.

BACON WITH HAMILTON

Lloyd Bacon is at present assisting Lloyd Hamilton in the preparation of the comedian’s stories for Educational. Mr. Bacon is the son of Frank Bacon, star of “Lightning.”

BREAME IN LYTELL CAST

Sulvia Brearley has been engaged by Metro to enact a leading role in support of Bert Lytell in his new Metro starring picture, “The Phantom Bride.” Miss Brearley has just completed parts in two productions for Fox.

“The Iron Trail,” the first of the Rex Beach—United Artists Productions, will have its New York premiere at the Strand and the week of October 30th.

Edward Jobson and Dana Todd are playing parts in Alice Lake’s forthcoming picture entitled “Kisses.”

Irene Rich is enacting a principal role in the all-star L. J. Gasnier production for R-C. entitled “The Call of Home.”

Phil Ford and Bert Hadley are playing in support of David Butler in “The Milky Way,” under the direction of W. S. Van Dyke.

NEW SHORT SUBJECTS HEAD

Louis I. Kutinsky, salesman of the New York branch of the “U” Film Exchange, has been promoted to head the Short Subjects Department of that exchange.

JOINS WARREN CORPORATION

Robert E. Welsh, for several years managing editor of the Motion Picture News, will head the exploitation department of the F. B. Warren Corporation.

George Gould, until now Welsh’s assistant on the News, becomes managing editor when Welsh joins Warren.

Hardee Kirkland, character actor, has been selected by Bayard Vellier for a part in support of Bert Lytell in his new Metro starring picture, which is a screen adaptation of “Tommy Carteret,” to be titled “The Phantom Bride.”

SUPPORTS HUGHES

Grace Darmond is cast opposite Gareth Hughes in his new production at Metro.

Louise Lee and Gladys McClure are playing parts in the current Richard Barthelmess production.

Noah Beery, Jr., age nine, has been given a part in Marshall Neilan’s current production, “Penrod.”

Junior Cossian is playing a part in Wanda Hawley’s present play under the direction of Thomas Heftron.

Betty Ellen Kastarbrook and Beadie Nelson have been added to the cast of “Kisses,” Alice Lake’s current play for Metro.

Eddie Grimson and R. Henry Gray have been cast in David Butler’s current production entitled “The Milky Way.”

Robert Behder and James O. Barrows are cast in Louis J. Gasnier’s current production for R-C., entitled “The Call of Home.”

Malcolm McGregor has been added to the cast of “The Prisoner of Zend,” Rex Ingram’s forthcoming Metro production.

Margaret Loomis and Laura Winston are enacting important roles in the forthcoming David Butler picture under production at the Burston studios.

George Stewart, Fritz Schmidt, Patterson Dall and Fred Hadley are playing in support of Richard Barthelmess in his forthcoming picture as yet untitled.

Eugene Pollette enacts a prominent role in Pauline Frederick’s latest Robertson-Cole production, “Judith of Blue Lake Ranch,” under the direction of Colin Campbell.

Frank Coleman has been signed to play a part in Lary Semion’s forthcoming production under the direction of Norman Taurog.

Philippe Le Lacey and Barbara Mayer, child players, have been cast in “A Doll’s House,” Madame Nazimova’s forthcoming production.

Ramsey Wallace, Leon Barry and Carl Steelklinks are playing important parts in “The Call of Home,” which J. L. Gasnier is filming for Robertson-Cole.

Among those who support Pauline Frederick in her latest picture for R-C., “The Lure of Jade,” are Clarissa Selwynne, Thomas Holding, Leon Barry and Arthur Rankin.

HIGHBROW AND HOKUM

Gertrude Nelson Andrews, who recently sold an original story to Thomas H. Ince for a sum equal to the average person’s salary for three or four years—I cannot mention the exact amount—recently wrote an article which was filled with radiant gems of truth. One paragraph in particular should provide odes of mental jubilation for our young and old photodramatists alike. Here are the pearls of sound, solid logic:

“There are two words which have interested me more than any other in the making of intrinsically ‘big’ photoplays—highbrow and hokum. Producers have shied, afraid, of the highbrow story, believing that it has a graveyard smell. So it has. But hokum—a rather popular word—has the same sort of smell. Both are untruth. Real life understanding never takes the attitude of the highbrow, and all sentiment is hokum. To picture life true one can never feel himself above and apart from it. He must live down close to it—feel with it, work with it, play with it, laugh and cry with it, and believe in and love it.”

A GOAL

In all walks of modern life, a certain word seems hovering near—the word that has blown across the midwest prairies in stilted gusts; and has entered into the very fibre of men and institutions from Manhattan Island to the Golden Gate, and from the Gulf to the Great Lakes. That word is cooperation.

The Authors’ League of America stands for a Brotherhood of Intellect. It purposes to foster the art of letters, to reach out for the highest ideals of intellectual beauty. Its end is to bring recognition to new and old writers according to their talents, to make the story the thing! This, as against the intense commercial exploitation of great names.

There are three guilds of the Authors’ League: The Dramatists’, The Free Lance Artist’, and The Screen Writers’. The Screen Writers’ Guild is doing to all its members what the founding of original photoplays by the newer and coming generations of writers, that the art of screen writing may become individualized. Much of the courage and talent of the fact that the Screen Writers’ Guild will act as a body to obtain both intrinsic and extrinsic recognition for its members.

In order to become a member of the guild, it will be necessary to be the author of one photo-play or script, which is actually accepted, produced and “screened.” Then one may be proposed for membership by someone already a member, and admitted after the application has been passed upon by the membership committee.

Associate members will be admitted from the ranks of other arts, but only on the condition that the work be of artistic or intellectual value. The beginning writer or student of screen writing, however, will find the guild behind him to the last man, that he may receive as much recognition and remuneration as one whose name has been associated with a dozen masterpieces.

What higher goal for the beginner or student of today than a membership in the Screen Writers’ Guild! For when that goal is achieved, one who has striven as a creative artist, whose future work will obtain a respectful reading at any studio in Filmdom, acceptances will bring sums of money in keeping with the true values of the story to the motion picture production in toto.

Every possible co-operation will be extended to young and all untrained amateurs, who have sold an original story to Thomas H. Ince for a sum equal to the average person’s salary for three or four years. The credit will be secured for all members.

The Screen Writers’ Club in Hollywood, which is also the western headquarters for the Authors’ League, is without doubt—everywhere young and in the very center of western America. For photodramatists, it is the end of an uptrail, the vantage point from which to assault the mountain peaks of art.

A PARTING HUNCH

Too many amateur and professional photodramatists are seeking for out-of-the-ordinary situations and intricate plots. The story that will always “get over” is the one that shows an audience in the first few moments the poor gimp with a large family who can’t meet the rent; or the tired wife who has sacrificed herself for her good-for-nothing husband by plodding along for years caring for the children, sweeping, washing dishes, etc.; the man’s inner battle when he finds a young and beautiful girl in love with him—and his wife, now middle-aged and plain, has sacrificed her earlier years that he might provide for her. The story of the last one, the unloved girl, the mistake of the first years of marriage; the children growing up the parents mentally; the frugal results of unwise spending; the failure of a dream; the little things that are the stuff from which hundreds of variables are possible. Husbands still lose collar buttons and become quite angry and forgiving, whereas wives stay cool and mixed; oddly lovable characters still live—and all these things have their being in the everyday heart of life. Of such stuff is the soul of stories; unique situations and intricate plots are not nearly so necessary as humanness.
THE KID VACATIONING

Having completed his new picture, "My Boy," little Jackie Coogan has left with his father for Big Bear, where he will have a week of vacation.

RAY PICTURES IN TOLEDO

A solution of legal complications, having been reached, Charles Ray pictures are again in production in Toledo, Ohio, after a two-year absence. Mr. Ray's re-opening there, in "45 Minutes from Broadway," occasioned front-page newspaper space.

MARSH IN STAGE PLAY

Mae Marsh recently made her debut on the legitimate stage in "Brittle," a comedy, which had its première at Plainfield, N. J. The performance was attended by a number of film notables, headed by D. W. Griffith.

FILM BAZAAR TO BECOME REAL

Charity will benefit by a bazaar staged as one sequence of Maxwell Karger's production of "Kisses," in which Alice Lake enacted the strolling role. An outdoor fair is under construction at the studios and after the scenes have been shot the articles will be donated to a real bazaar to be held soon after in a Southern California town.

UNIVERSAL SALES CONFERENCE

H. M. Berman, general manager of exchanges, and Art Schmidt, general sales manager of short products, of Universal, have announced a sales conference in Chicago, having summoned the Universal exchange managers for the Mississippi valley and as far west as Denver.

It is expected the conference will be confined to the two new Universal-Jewel pictures, "The Fox" with Harry Carey, and "Conflict" with Friscilla Dean.

HASTINGS VERSE IN "LIFE"

Wells Hastings, title editor at Reelart, has had another batch of humorous verse accepted by "Life" to which he is a frequent contributor.

Warren Doane, general manager of Hal E. Roach studios, has returned from a trip to Arizona.

Parker McConnell has been suffering from a severe illness but is now on the road to recovery.

Donita Serano lately returned from San Francisco where she attended the Masonic Convention with her husband, Jack Bean.

Harry Beaumont, who recently completed directing Viola Dana in "Seeing's Believing," has departed on a vacation trip to Imperial Valley.

Eugene B. Lewis, who recently adapted "The Little Clown," for Mary Miles Minter, is arranging another Reelart script under the supervision of Elmer Harris.

George Loane Tucker's last production, "Ladies Must Live," will be the feature at Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre the week of October 31st. Betty Compson is the featured player.

"The 5:12," the working title of the five-reel western drama, now being filmed by the Commonwealth Motion Picture Producers, under the direction of Fred Caldwell, who is the author of the story.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Jimmy Parrott has begun production of a comedy laid in a delicatessen shop. Ethel "Broadhurst," Mark Jones and George Rowe are among those in the cast. Ray Grey is directing.

Ruth Roland and company have returned from Huntington Lake where the opening episodes were taken of "The Timber Queen." The latest Roland serial, interior scenes, will be taken next week at the studio. Dick Cuningham, film editor of the company, has assembled part of the first episode.

Harry "Snub" Pollard completed a comedy this week, which William Watson directed. "Ten Nights in a Pool Room," a "Snub" Pollard comedy, has been titled and will be ready soon for a preview at the studios.

Hal E. Roach has been adding to the departments at his Culver City plant. The paint shop has greatly increased quarters, while a new studio has been constructed for Fred Berry, head of the scenic department.

AT LASKY’S

Peuryn Stanlaws has completed his production of Barrie’s "The Little Minister," with Bebe Daniels in the stellar role, and leaves for New York in a few days for a brief vacation. Miss Daniels will also enjoy a few days rest before beginning work on a new picture which will be produced by William D. Taylor.

George Melford and his company, producing "Moran of the Lady Letty," will be in the North for at least two weeks more and on their return to the studio will complete the production in which Dorothy Dalton is featured with Rudolph Valentino in the male lead.

November 21st is the approximate starting date for the comedy "Is Matrimony a Failure?" with T. Roy Barnes in the role, created by Leo Ditrichstein in the stage production. Walter Hiers will also have one of the leading roles. James Cruze will direct this picture.

Gloria Swanson is finishing work on "The Husband’s Trademark," under the direction of Sam Wood. After the completion of this picture, Miss Swanson will begin on Elinor Glyn’s original story, "Beyond the Rocks," with Mr. Wood again directing.

Several weeks more will be required for the completion of "La La Vote." Miss Zonneveen believes it, "It's So," under the direction of Tom Forman.

A court-room scene has occupied the activities of Ethel Clayton, during the past week, for her production of Elmer Rice’s play, “For The Defense.”

Wallace Reid is making progress in "The Chinaman," under the direction of Philip E. Rosen.

Agnes Ayres is again working at the Lasky Ranch for scenes in "The Lane That Had No Turns," her first star vehicle directed by Victor Fleming.

HAYAKAWA STARTING

Sessue Hayakawa, Japanese film star, will portray a double role in his forthcoming Robertson-Cole production, "The Vermillion Pencil," from the story by Homer Lea. Hayakawa will be seen in a father and son characterisation. The picture will be directed by Norman Dawn, who directed Hayakawa’s last effort, "In the Street of the Flying Dragon." The cast, comprising mostly Japanese and Chinese characters, is now being assembled. Director Dawn expects to begin on the first scenes within the next week or two.

CUNEIO CASTING

Henry McCarthy and Leon Mehan have completed the continuity for Lester Cuneio’s next picture, "Silver Spira." The picture is now being cast at the Warner Brothers’ studio.

EDWARD LAEMMLE

FIRST NATIONAL NOTES

Mack Sennett will begin presently the first of a series of comedies featuring "Teddy, the Dog.

Ben Turpin starts his next comedy, "Bright Eyes," on November 1st, at the Mack Sennett studio, and on the same day Mabel Normand also begins work on a comedy-romance.

Billie Bevan recently completed a two-reeler which will be released under the title of "By Heek." This is the Bevan successor to "Be Reasonable," the prints of which have now been shipped to the New York office.

Constance Talmadge probably will begin her next picture, "The Divorcee," the first week of November, with Sidney Franklin directing. The story is by Edgar Selwyn. Pending the drawing up of plans for the proposed West Coast studio for Norma and Constance Talmadge, the comedienne probably will work either at the Brunton studios or at Buster Keaton’s Hollywood studio.

Douglas MacLean and the Thomas H. Ince company, which is filming "The Houdini," are expected to return from Munich, where the initial scenes of the picture have been in the course of production during the past several days.

It is expected that Charlie Chaplin will return home in time to witness the Los Angeles premiere of his latest production, "The Idle Class," at the Kinema Theatre. Mr. Chaplin already has some of the sets of his next production erected at his La Brea Ave. studio.

Richard Barthelmess and his supporting company are now on the Maine coast where exteriors for the story written for him by Porter Emerson Browne are being taken. Playing opposite Mr. Barthelmess is Louise Huff.

"All For a Woman," is the release title for the foreign production, "Danton," a story of the French Revolution, which is scheduled to be released in the United States. Emil Jannings, who portrayed King Henry VIII in "Decency," will be seen in the principal role of Daudel. Warner Kraus will be seen as Robespierre, and Hilda Woller as Babette. "All For a Woman" was directed by Dimitri Buchowetzki, who is also the author of the story. Buchowetzki is the new director of Pola Negri, the European star who is now appearing in her latest picture, "One Arabian Night," which will be produced by Ernst Lubitsch. Miss Negri is now completing the filming of "Sapho" under the direction of Buchowetzki, which has recently been released abroad.

HAMILTON-WHITE COMEDIES

Jack White, supervising director, has received permission from the management of the Sells-Floto circus to use its grounds for scenes in his latest all-star comedy for Educational. The initial scenes for Lloyd Hamilton’s latest comedy are being shot on the New York street set at the Brunton studios. Irene Dalton is playing opposite the comedian and Hugh Pay is directing.

AT VITAGRAPH

Jimmy Aubrey begins a new comedy this week.

Preparations are being made for the filming of Larry Semon’s next comedy which will go into production shortly.

Bradley Smollen is arranging the script for Bill Duncan’s next picture as yet untitled.

NEWS REEL TO CONTAIN "TAD" AND TOM POWERS COMICS

Mr. E. B. Hatrick, secretary and general manager of the International News Reel Corporation, distributed by Universal, announces that T. A. Duran’s "Indoor Sports" cartoons and Tom Powers’ "Joys and Gloomis" cartoons soon will be added to that news reel.

The first issue of the International News Reel to contain a Tad "Indoor Sports" cartoon will be number 54. The first issue of Tom Powers’ "Joys and Gloomis" cartoon will be in International News Reel No. 87, released November 3rd. Thereafter they will alternate.

R. V. Anderson continues as Sales Manager for the news reel.

AT CHRISTIE

Two new two-reel comedies are being started this week, while a new comedy, featuring Neil Burns, with the support of Helen Darling, Laddie and Jane Hart, has just been completed under the direction of Scott Sidney.

The Christie is undertaking the production of a special which will feature Dorothy Devere as a knight in armor, which will be supported by Jay Belasco, Earl Rodney and Alice Mason.

Bobby Vernon is starting work in another two-reel comedy, "A Garden of Eden," for which H. A. Ince has been secured by Thomas H. Ince, and preparations are being made to produce the story for release through Associated First National.

INCE GETS NEW STORY

Screen rights to "The Desert Fiddler," a novel of the Imperial Valley and Mexico, have been secured by Thomas H. Ince, and preparations are being made to produce the story for release through Associated First National.

Making a tire repair on the road has become a very simple operation in recent years. Such repairs have to be made only at rare intervals nowadays because tires are so much better that they seldom break down, and roads are so much better that the danger of punctures and blow-outs is greatly diminished.

“The development of materials which make the repairing operation a very simple matter,” says Jack Meek, of Muller Brothers tire department, dealer in United States tires. “has eliminated most of the discomfort of making an emergency repair on the road, and the number of these materials has been reduced to such an extent that about all a motorist need carry in his tool box for tire trouble is a cold patch kit for inner tube repairs, some blow-out patches for repairs to casings, some tape and a hack-a-cut outfit for filling up bad cuts in the surface of the casing. All of which he can get in our accessory department. When he hasn’t them or the trouble is more serious, our service car is within call.”

THE ETHICAL SOCIETY MAKES A STATEMENT

Although many statements have been listened to concerning the Ethical Motion Picture Society, which are preparing to hold a motion picture exposition in Los Angeles, we have been too little from the organization itself. The following is a statement of its viewpoint by its secretary:

"To the Motion Picture Fraternity:

"Greetings:

"The Ethical Motion Picture Society of America, Inc., has undertaken an herculean task, in your interest, in this hour of misunderstanding which has resulted in the slowing up of your wonderful and contributory work in the interest of Art, Industry and the Sciences.

"This task will assume the form of (quoting the language of our Mayor) 'a dignified, ethical and educational exhibit,' having for its purpose a better understanding between the public and your fraternity, of the relation of your work to the economic and social functions of our city, state and nation.

"Capital, labor and that infinitely greater class, the American public, which is beneficiary of both, are vitally interested in your work—but, we fear that in the heat of passion, and under the leadership of unwise radicals, they have forgotten your great contributions to War Service and the good you do, in the interest to censor.

"The First Annual American Motion Picture Industry Exposition we have pledged, has the godspeed of our Governor, our Mayor, our State Commissioner of Corporations and our State Superintendent of Banks, the Chairman and President of our Supervisors and City Council, respectively, our Clergy and many others of note and prominence who are unselfishly interested in the common good.

"Ours is a non-stock company and if any profits accrue from this exposition, they will be divided between the charities and the creation of a more comprehensive appreciation of the motion picture industry. We will not ask you for financial aid—all we desire is a worth while work, well done, and we want your co-operation.

"Very truly yours,

"ETHICAL MOTION PICTURE SOCIETY OF AMERICT, INC.,

"By Chas. E. Sebert.

"Secretary.

AT METRO

Rex Ingram is progressing with his production of "The Story of the Lone Star," a screen version of the Anthony Hope romance. Bayard Veiller is filming Justus Miles Forman's story, "Tommy Carteret," the title of which has not yet been announced. Bert Lytell is starred in the picture.

Maxwell Karger has organized a company for the production of "Miss Lida," in which Alice Lake enact the stellar role. Harry Myers plays the leading male role.

George D. Baker, making "Stay Home," will journey to Old Mexico with his company headed by Garrett Hughes, to obtain the necessary scenes for this Edgar Franklin story.

Harry Beaumont's production of "The Five Dollar Baby," with Viola Dana in the stellar role, will be told for the camera in a reproduction of a section of New York's lower East Side, to be constructed at the company's Hollywood studios. Production is expected to begin shortly.

AT REALART

Bebe Daniels is working on the Cuban sequence of her forthcoming picture, "Zaza," a Wilcox Putnam story. The photo play is for February release.

An artist's studio of the ultra-Greenwich Village type is the set on which Wanda Hawley will commence work when she returns this week from an extended location trip at Del Monte. Thomas N. Heffron is directing.

May McAvoy is nearing the close of her current photo play which William D. Taylor is directing.

Mary Miles Minter with Director Frank Urson will repair to San Bernardino for location scenes in Realart's twenty-second production of the season.

1921-1922 SERIES

Associated Photo-Plays, Inc., for 1921-1922 will release five Chester Bennett productions starring Jane Novak, and six Scott Dunlap productions with Mary Anderson. Federated has contracted with Frizma, Inc., for the distribution of a two-reel photo-play in color, called "Handi." Madge Evans is starred in this feature, which was directed by Frederick A. Thomson.

ANOTHER GERMAN FILM

Jacques Kopfstein states he holds American distribution on a picture called "Ninon de Lenclos," a film made in Germany dealing with the life of Cardinal Richelieu.

FILMING DICKENS' "PICKWICK"

LEDGER PLAYLET ON GAMUT

Otto Ledger, now at Goldwyn, will produce his latest one-act play at the Gamut Club. It's announcement, "A Rural Cinderella," is the third of the Educational-Punch comedies starring Louise Fazenda.

TALMADGE RELEASES

"The Wonderful Thing." Norma Talmadge's next First National picture, due for release early in November, is an adaptation by Clara Beranger of Mrs. Trimble Bradley's play of the same name, founded on a short story by Forrest HALLEY, and was directed by Herbert Brenon, who also directed Miss Talmadge in "The Passion Flower." "The Turn on the Door"

Constance Talmadge will leave New York sometime in November for the West Coast to make a new story by Edgar Selwyn, author, playwright and producer. It will be directed by Sidney A. Franklin.

Constance's October release will be "Woman's Place," a John Emerson-Anita Loos story, directed by Victor Fleming. Kenneth Harlan will be seen in the leading role, and Hassard Short also has a prominent part.

SECOND MAY PICTURE FINISHING

Doris May, under the direction of William A. Selzer, is nearing the end of "Eden and Return," her second Robertson-Cole production. The film story is from the stage play of the same name by Ralph E. Renaud. Earl Metcalfe is playing the leading male role with Miss May.

TO FRISCO

Members of the J. L. Frothingham Company, producing "The Man Who Smiled," a comedy drama for release through Associated First National Pictures, Inc., will leave for San Francisco presently to "shoot" location scenes. The story of the film taking will be J. L. Frothingham, Edward Slo- man, Wm. V. Mong, Marcia Manon, Mary Wynn and James O'Shea.

ON SALE

"What Alas! the Pictures?" asks Ellis Parker Butler in the November Photodramatist. His article under that caption is his answer to his question. Zona Gale, author of "Miss Lulu Bett," and "North of the Bolt," a good article in this same issue and other contributors are Cecil B. de Mille, Alfred Hitchcock, Bryan Irvine, Bradley King, Alice Eyton, Beulah Marie Dix, Harry E. Franklin, and Fred Lederhose. The Photodramatist is now on sale at the news stands.

ARRANGING "MY BOY" RELEASE

Harry Wilson, publicity purveyor for the Sol and Irving Lesser enterprises, grouped under the heading of The Western Pictures Exploitation Company, has left for New York with Sol Lesser. They will initiate a nation-wide campaign for the Jackie Coogan picture, "My Boy," which has just been completed.

NEW "BEN HUR" COPYRIGHT

The copyright on "Ben Hur" has been extended for another 14 years. Henry L. Wallace, son of the author of the famous story, has transferred his interest in the copyright, relating to the universal dramatic and picture rights, to Erlanger, Dillingham & Zieg- ter.

Lecence Perret is at present making a film called, "L'Ecuyere," partly in France and partly in England. Mr. Perret expects to sell for New York next month, with a completed print.

The Story Idea that struggles to get out

The right one is worth big money. You may have it.

Will you accept a free, confidential test?

Hundreds of original stories, for dramatization on the screen, are urgently needed to keep the motion picture industry alive.

The Palmer Photoplay Corporation is the accredited agent of the leading producers in a nation-wide search for story-telling ability. Not literary skill, but creative imagination and dramatic insight—the ability to think out and tell a good story, dramatically.

It is a talent many people have who never suspect it. You may possess the gift yourself, and not be aware of it. Will you let us test you free?

Send for the Van Loan questionnaire. In your own home by a simple psychological test you can learn whether you have the native ability for which the motion picture industry is anxious to pay liberally.

This questionnaire has started hundreds on the path to fame and big income. Just use the coupon below. You incur no obligation, of course.

Manuscript Reading Service

A new service planned to revolutionize the reading of manuscripts at motion picture studios is announced by Roy L. Manker, vice-president of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation, who says:

"I believe the Palmer Story Service which we have just inaugurated will have a vital effect on the entire business of motion picture story selection and will prove a distinct boon to every cinematic producing organization in America, as well as centralizing the photoplay story market in Los Angeles."

In the past and up to the present, every motion picture studio reading staff has been obliged to wade through innumerable magazines, books, and original manuscripts in quest of material. Some of the smaller studio's have been utterly unable to keep up with literary production and do not receive much "original" stuff.

"The Palmer Story Service is most complete. Nothing has been left unconsidered. Brief synopsis of all weekly and monthly magazines published in America, of the new plays at the stage plays and of all worthy original stories handled by the Sales Department of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation, will be mailed daily to the scenario editors of the film studios. Each story carries a comment upon it as to its type, merit, and suitability to the screen.

"In addition to synopsis all current literary, the Palmer organization is synopsizing and commenting upon all the novels, short stories, and plays written by recognized literary artists in the past several centuries. Synopses and comments upon these and less known works will be furnished upon request."

"When a story particularly suited to the needs of any particular studio is covered, the Studio Editor will be telephoned and the story rushed to the studio by special messenger."

"Detailed synopses and full information as to price, availability, etc., will be furnished upon request. An index to the synopses furnished daily will be supplied monthly."

"All original stories included in the PALMER STORY SERVICE are registered by number and the authors' copies held in the files of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation."

"When it is considered that—in addition to hundreds of 'originals'—every magazine from the Dial to Breezy Stories, and every novel and short story from those of Joseph Conrad to those of Harold Bell Wright, is covered, the completeness of the service is realized. That studio editors are apprised immediately of all available material suitable to their directors and stars, constitutes an aid not to be overlooked."

Al Cohn and Kate Corbey are co-editors of this new department. Helen Van Upp, a scenarist, continuity writer and cutter of authority, is head of the reading department. Writer are Verina Godfrey, a magazine writer of note; Hazel Spencer, authority on dramatic technique; Carlisle Rott, writer of 'western' stories, and Virginia Van Upp, who has been reader at several representative studios.

"With the Palmer Story Service, information is furnished regarding stories and their availability regardless of whether the Palmer Sales Department is or is not acting as agent."

The Mayor Makes a Statement

Below, we are happy to publish a communication from Mayor Cryer's office in which an error in one of our recent editorials is pointed out and in which a definite statement is made of our foremost city official's attitude toward Los Angeles' greatest industry.

We are more than gratified to comply with the request that we extend an expression of his best feeling to the picture profession and it is for the reason that we desire the expression to be without the slightest inaccuracy that the letter is offered in its entirety.

F. R.
November 1, 1921.

Raymond Cannon,
Publisher of Camera!

Gentlemen:

Recently, through Allen's Press Clipping Bureau, Mayor Cryer received a clipping of an article that appeared in your paper October 1, 1921, entitled "A Gentleman Expresses Himself." Thereafter, he received a clipping from an Oakland paper, in which Mr. Charles Murray was quoted to have said in substance the same thing that appeared in your paper. On another occasion he received a clipping from the New York Globe, in which the Los Angeles correspondent who prepares the motion picture news from this section represented Mayor Cryer as being unfriendly to the motion picture industry.

If there had been but one occurrence of this kind the Mayor would have quietly passed the matter over without any recognition. However, since it appears that there is a studied effort being made to misrepresent him, he feels that it is due him that a correction be made.

You, of course, are responsible only for the things that appeared in your publication. In the article printed by you appeared the statement that Mayor Cryer was responsible for the resurrection of a forgotten statute which provided for a city commissioner or censor of films. Of course anyone that knows anything at all about the truth of the situation knows that the minutes of the Council will show that Councilman Wheeler was responsible for the resurrection of the forgotten ordinance, and that Mayor Cryer had known nothing of the existence of such an ordinance until it was called to his attention by the action of the Council. The Mayor's attitude subsequent thereto was due to the fact that the ordinance is mandatory, and calls upon the Mayor to appoint a censor.

The Mayor wants to take the opportunity at this time to deny that his action was prompted by any enmity or unfriendly feeling entertained by him toward the motion picture industry. Of course the utterances of Mr. Murray are absolutely uncalled for, and without foundation. The information conveyed to and published in the New York Globe is absolutely incorrect, and without foundation.

The Mayor desires me to make this statement to you, and through you, to the men and women engaged in the motion picture business, in the interest of truth and fair play.

Yours sincerely,
(Signed) H. H. KINNEY,
Secretary to the Mayor.

Gratitude

The following note from Tom Bates, one of the best loved members of the picture profession, informs his friends that the same courageous, always honorable comrade, whose extended physical suffering has so long kept him inactive in a Los Angeles hospital, is now in a condition to resume his old position in our midst. The entire colony will rejoice over the return of this clever actor whose patient cheerfulness has been finally rewarded with renewed health.

If Tom Bates is grateful for the little that has been done for him, we are infinitely more grateful to realize that his presence raises to some degree the standard of our calling.

"Time flies with eagle's wings, but the thoughts of grateful men ever remain in their hearts. As the days passed into weeks and weeks into months as I lay on my sick bed of torture, I thought of each and everyone of the many friends who so kindly assisted me in my greatest hour of need. Often have I thought of the hour when I could repay the wonderful kindness, when God answering my prayers would enable me to return to my dear friends all that they had so generously donated. Now that I am well again, and able to add my small measure of ability to the happiness of others, I shall, with God's assistance, repay you all. But the beautiful thought back of the deed—the fellowship of man, the kindred of friendship—is beyond repayment. With a heart too full for words I can only say that I am grateful, deeply grateful to one and all of you.

TOM D. BATES."
ELFELT FORMS COMPANY

With Clifford S. Elfelt as president and general manager, a new film company, to be known as Metropolitan Productions, Inc., has been formed to produce five and six reel features. The plans of the concern include the making of a series of eight adaptations of famous books, also four pictures with all-star casts to be made from original stories.

The company will work at the Louis B. Mayer studios, where preparations are well under way for the filming of the first offering, or about November 1st.

"Finding Himselii," a two-reel comedy drama of western life, featuring Alma Bennett and J. L. Warner, has just been completed under the direction of Carl P. Winther and C. P. Reynolds. This is the first of a series of eighteen two-reel specials which are to be filmed at the Mayer studio under the personal supervision of Mr. Elfelt, to be known as Winther-Reynolds Productions.

Mr. Winther, formerly associated with D. W. Griffith, and Mr. Reynolds, until recently with the Mack Sennett forces, are co-directing the series. L. A. Corson is in charge of the photography and Everett Shellenberger is filling the role of assistant director.

"The Society Buckaroo" will be the second of the series, the camera work on which was started this week.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Harold Lloyd has started on his second week in his new comedy, the working title of which is "The White Feather." Mildred Davis is playing opposite the star. Hal Roach, Jean Haves and Sam Taylor wrote the script. A second series of ten Harold Lloyd comedies will be re-issued, the first offering to be "Picking Up the Pieces."

A new Jimmy Parrott comedy is under production with Ethel Broadhurst playing the lead for the first time.

Harry "Smub" Pollard finished a train comedy this week and has begun production of a Rescue Mission comedy with Marie Mosquini, previously the star. R. J. Ceder, assisted by Bob Evans, is directing. Charles Parrott wrote the script. Pollard's comedy, "Law and Order," a satire on the activities of the Ku Klux Klan, is now released. Charles Parrott wrote and directed the comedy.

Gooyold Lloyd's comedy, "Dodge Your Debut," is also released.

H. M. Walker is titling the recently completed "Smub" Pollard and Jimmy Parrott comedies as follows: "The Corner Pocket," "The Go-Getter," and "Call the Witness." Pollard pictures: "Leave It to Me" and "Try, Try Again." Parrott comedies. The scripts were written by Charles Parrott. Following preview at the studio, the comedies will be shipped to New York.

NIBLO STARTS

Fred Niblo has started production on Anita Stewart's next picture for Louis B. Mayer, "The Woman He Married," a stage play by P. G. Wodehouse. It is adapted for the screen by DeWendy. Doran H. Cox is assistant director and Dal Clawson is in charge of the photography.

The Chester Bennett Company has taken a larger office suite at the Robert Brunton Studios, taking over those formerly occupied by Dial Film Company.

"Conflict." Priscilla Dean's new Universal-Jewel production, had its premiere presentation recently in the Central Theatre, Broadway and Forty-seventh Street, New York.

"The Digest of the Motion Picture Industry"
"LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY"

Mission

Mary Pickford, that adored depictor of several hundred children's charmed actions and some others, reaches the ultimate in charm and versatility with her dual work in Bernard McComville's screen version of Frances Hodgson Burnett's "Little Lord FaunTLeroY," the Los Angeles premiere of which occurred Wednesday.

We who are familiar with every phase of the story and play, expected great things of it in Miss Pickford's clever hands and in no respect were we disappointed. Each of her interpretations (the title role and Dearest Cedric's delightfully typical young mother) are manipulated to gain that tenderly happy appeal which is a Pickford possession exclusively. The naive Cedric is wholly boyish, so much so that despite his curls and the audience's knowledge of his portrayr's identity, he overcomes all prejudice and is a most impelling young male of his period.

With beautiful self-confidence he her worship, loves and battles his way through the little lord's diversified action, arriving finally at that splendid stage where he is considered sufficiently important to be permitted to dance with his distracting ringlets. Too much cannot be said for the star's supreme artistry here. It is her sense of dramatic balance which assisted by her incomparable personality has given her the silversheet's first place.

Contrasted with Cedric is his depump, anxious little mother, also ideally played by Mary. Although chief interest centers in the child, Dearest is one of the most superior achievements of an exceptional actress.

To the organization which produced this super picture is due much praise. Alfred Green and Jack Pickford shared the direction with a perfect result, the smoothness of which is more unusual on account of its division.

Charles Rosher's photography reaches the heights of camera accomplishment with its pleasant composition and its neat and exquisite toning. He, moreover, employs the most consistent and convincing double exposure that we have ever seen.

William Howell, technical advisor for the English episodes of the production, has done much to keep the atmosphere of his sequences correct.

The supporting cast is well chosen and more than competent in each instance. It is headed by Claude Gillingwater, whose rendition of the Earl of Dorincourt, is a felicitous. His footage is filled with both pathetic and amusing moments in which he is equally good.

Joseph Dowling is also excellent in Havelsham, while Kate Price, Fred Maltese and Jane Cummert make a delicate trio of Mrs. McGinty, Dick, the bootblack, and Hobbs, the grocer, little FaunTLeroY's staunch friends and champions. Each part is not only played, it is characterized.

The remaining positions are adequately filled by Rose Dion, Colin Kenny, and Frank Marion.

It will be a long time before a picture of this type approachable in any way to "Little Lord FaunTLeroY," will be offered a fortunate public. When such occurs, if ever, we hope to be included in the opening audience.

"THE SHEIK"

Rialto

"The Sheik" is perhaps the most all-around, big and effectively handled Lasky picture for which George Melford has ever been responsible. Of course, as all who are familiar with E. M. Hull's original novel will expect, it is spirit is broken by the charmingly ruthless Sheik, Agnes Ayres enacts the role and swell, her highest standard in it with some clever transition.

Walter Long's customary measured villainy stands him in good stead as Ossan, the desert bandit, whose crime, quite significantly lies not so much in the fact that his behavior differs from the hero's as that his appearance and features are less perfectly molded. Leaving that, his part is convincingly played heavy.

Melpomenes fine performance of Raoul de St. Hubert, the Sheik's Persian friend, is accomplished with the deliberate ease and finish that have marked his entire screen record; while Lucien Littlefield amusingly characterizes Gaston, Ahmed's faithful French valet.

The picture is completed by George Waggner, Ruth Miller and Frank Butler in carefully managed minor parts.

It will probably be sometime before we run across a more beautifully mounted, even though its appeal can scarcely be ranked as a higher one. It is sometimes a problem to establish boundary lines as even unlevitated entertainment has been known to divert harmlessly.

"CAMILLE"

California

Nazimova's latest and modernized version of Alexander Dumas, the younger's "Camille," a Metro production, is released now. It has been given an exotic, but a simply exotic setting, which frames the star's peculiar charm advantageously, creating the most attractive of atmospheres. Fortunately, Ray C. Smallwood has not only displayed a complete comprehension of his subject, but has utilized his skillfully characterized Gaston, Ahmed's faithful French valet.

Those who are closest to this age of the drama are agreed that there is little to discuss about Nazimova's superb artistry, ever. She is preeminent and in Marguerite, the twentieth century lady of the camellias, she is the same likely alive, vividly receptive woman that she would be in Camille. Into Marguerite's remorse alone is injected all of the delicate fire that is always this strange Russian's chief fascination.

Rudolph Valentino is cast well, if not ideally, in Armand's role, Marguerite's lover, and has at least one big situation in the tragedy. However, the role as arranged, does not permit much strong work.

Proving himself an able dramatist as well as a clever comedien, William Ormond is seen to dignifyingly dispatch Monique's role. Rudolph Hoyt is also correctly placed as Count de Varville while Zelfie Tillbury, Rex Cherryman, Patsy Ruth Miller, Edward Connelly, Consuelo Florenten and Mrs. Oliver Noah Young is playing a part in the current Harry "Sub" Pollard comedy under the direction of R. J. Cedar, assisted by Bob Evans.

The Screen Writers' Forum

Conducted by Ted Le Berthon
Editor of The Photodramatist

THIS ACID TEST

A potential photodramatist writes in that he is handicapped by a lack of vocabulary. His letter was well written, in simple concepts. Too many people imagine that because they are not walking catalogues of classified knowledge—Encyclopedia Britannica in the flesh—they cannot write fiction, plays, or screenplays. Simplicity, a so eternally timorous? Why, for the love of Michael, don't a few more well-meaning folk use their nooses and realize that Charles Dickens doesn't employ as dialogue as some of the present day writers in the second rate fiction magazines. Why don't they "know" that Theodore Dreiser, perhaps the master of all modern novelists, uses practically none but commonly used words.

Especially in writing photodrama, the writer must realize that he can write directly from his heart—or perhaps his soul, and speed his message to the photoplay-going world with more power and warmth reveals, than if he clouded his meanings in a mass of heterogeneous verbiage.

Better Stay Home

If ever there was a fundamental mistake, it is that made by many screen writers in hewing themselves to Los Angeles, hoping after their arrival to secure staff positions at the various studios. Of course, some think it's easier to market stories if one operates within the capitol of Filmland; others are too be in the atmosphere of studios. Well, none of the studios are breaking in amateur writers; the adumbrative studio editors tell them: "Earn your apprenticeship elsewhere; free lance for a while, until you've sold enough scripts to give you a reputation; don't ask us to train you—we're not experimenting any more than we have to." As to those who think it easier to market screen stories by coming to Los Angeles, they might stop to think that novelists and short-story writers must do the same. New York still market their brain offspring, just because New York happens to be the heart of the publishing business. As far as getting atmosphere goes, it is as well write from Los Angeles, Indiana, or Beaver Dam, Wisconsin, unless he is intimately associated with some "very" influential film magnate, its chances for obtaining a study are disheartening slight. They'd have better stayed home—and write about the life they understand best and are most familiar with. In fact, one scenario editor said he preferred photoplays submitted from outside points, because so much of the locally concoted stuff was too pronouncedly flavored with the Hollywood viewpoint—a somewhat too intimate, blase perspective, born of a thorough knowledge of the studio modus operandi. A knowledge of production is invaluable, but a close-up association with these facts is apt to produce a mechanical rather than an inspirational expression.

The Story Market

It seems almost ludicrous to state that the producers are froze for any certain type of story, in view of the fact that the American taste—perhaps all human taste?—is for variety, change, novelty. The "good" quality comedy dramas, sea stories, business girl romances, and mother love stories are particularly popular with the public of today—and as a natural result, with the producers—the market may shift tomorrow. Spiristic and faith healing photoplays are apparently passing, but that is probably because of the paucity of good material dealing with these themes, rather than a declining interest in them. Capital and labor stories are read with much wariness and skepticism at present, and are usually dis-carded—for two very sufficient reasons: either the story is propaganda on behalf of some cherished political theory or is one of those impossible, mawkishly blubbering stories in which the high-hatted financial Titan and the hardy son of toil eventually kiss and make up, with a lot of hokum about the "brotherhood of man" and "there are no classes." In the final analysis, there is always one type of story that is certain of at least thoughtful consideration: the genuine love story or romance, dealing with the boy and girl who live next door or around the corner.

Talent or Genius?

There is much arrant nonsense indulged in about the art of the motion picture. The eternal controversy is shifting to the realms of Picturedom. What is art? Is it an art to write a novel, or play, or photoplay that will please twenty million people—or is such an achievement sentimental poppycock which appealed to the more automatic emotions? Is true art the devise more than we have to."

"Foolish Wives"

Certainly overly ambitious little manus-allow the peas to burn and the baby to stray into the next street and hubby's socks to zo undeterred while the main story is in the photoplays. With flighty-headed presumption, they stalk the Movie Muse doggedly, while they would admit that the writing of verse, short stories, or novels across the world—world—a world of dire complexities they dare not explore! Such little damsels should be sternly admonished, if not properly—eventually—casually. Their lack of respect for the photoplay is appalling. Considering the screen's limitless scope and unbridled possibilities and even present attainments, their lack of reverence for the meedum through which they expect to create is astounding. Their imaginations have the bound and the unbound—dull and the super-mundane flights of sensational, i.e., things which they adjudge sensational they set down, irrespective of dramatic construction. Untrained in screen technique, and unfitted through their experiences to become artists in any field, they step in where angels fear to tread. Their creations fill the studio staff readers with thoughts of suicide. Of course, these "foolish wives" help the stationery trade and their purchases of stamps for return envelopes is a boon to Uncle Sam. Poor old—or young?—screen! How you're picked on, by lady lollipops who would not dare attempt to play the piano without years of study and composition poem sans knowledge of versification, and untrained—such are the number of fair young damsels of high purpose, silk stockinged and bobbed hair crusaders who paradoxically enough are filled—right up to their pretty, swan-like necks—with unique twentieth century metaphysics which scorn form and stress "spirits. Technique, bah! Lovely thoughts will make for beautiful forms, they say. Some of this same genius actually acheive piano playing "without a lesson." But have you ever heard such horrible playing? Their scenarios, ditto.

Costume Photoplays

Studio scenario editors are again reporting that a number of amateur outside writers are sending in costume photodramas, probably inspired by "The Three Musketeers" and "The Queen of Sheba"—or rather by the success ofcupons will do the fledgling good to know that he is treading on the parade grounds of the great lonely beasts of genius when he essays to create photoplays of them and pagentry. While a photoplay in which settings and costuming will entail great expense will be considered, if written by some established photodramatist—such a

AT BRUNTON

Mr. Bennett, producer of the Chester Bennett productions, has left for Big Bear, accompanied by Jack Okey, technical director, and Jack McKinzie, Bennett's cameraman, to select locations for Mr. Bennett's next picture. Camera work will be started next week on Bennett's second production for his own company in which Jane Novak will be starred.

Charles Bryant is to direct Alla Nazimova's production of Ibsen's "The Doll's House," work on which will start this week. He will be assisted by Albert Kelley, with Arthur Rice, head cameraman. Natasha Rambova will handle the special art work. Kitty Wray has been added to the list of directors for the Hamilton-White Company and will direct with Jack White on Mr. White's series of all-star productions. This makes a total of four directors for the two units of the Hamilton-White Company. Jack White will finish his picture, "Ballyho," this week and will start at once on a new comedy. Lige Conley is his featured player. Lloyd Hamilton is also expected to finish his comedy this week. No title has been given it as yet.

Camera work has started on a new B. B. Hampton production, "Wild Fire," by Zane Grey. Claire Adams and Carl Guntvoort head the all-star cast with Eliot Howe and Jean Hersholt directing.

The cutting and titling of J. L. Frothingham's "A Bride of the Gods," is nearing completion.

AT VITAGRAPH

A set, depicting the interior of a theater, is under course of construction for use by Larry Semon in his forthcoming comedy which will now under production.

The latest Antonio Moreno picture has been finally titled "A Guilty Conscience." David Smith directed. "The Girl," the latest western has been titled "No Defense."

AT COSMOSART STUDIOS

Negotiations are being made with K. Mukaeda, General Manager of the Oriental Pictures Corporation, to have the games played by Chinese in their native land photographed at Cosmosart by the slow motion camera to be exhibited in the Orient.

The Nursermen's Association of California will produce a series of pictures, showing plant development.

Two releases for educational are forthcoming, "The Art of Fencing," and "Jiu Jitsu."

The Blanchard Film Company, having re-organized with J. E. Bowen, General Manager, will be located at the Cosmosart Studios.

SENNETT STUDIO NOTES

Billy Bevan and Mildred June are finishing their second of a series of twelve two-reel comedies for release through Associated Film Corporation.

Mabel Normand will start work shortly after the first of November. F. Richard (Dick) Jones, director of "Mickey" and "Molly O." has completed the continuity and begun the cutting for Miss Normand's next starring vehicle.

Mr. John Waidron, general manager of the Sennett lot, has re-organized the technical and executive staff, while F. Richard Jones, production manager, has completed a like task in the various departments for which he is responsible.

SEELING STARTS FIFTH

The Charles R. Seeling Productions, Inc., announces the completion of its fourth production, "In Arizona," and production on the fifth picture is under way.

JOSA MELVILLE

NEW BURT STORY

"The Summons," an unpublished novel by Katherine Newlin Burt, has just been purchased by Goldwyn for early production. Mrs. Burt is the author of "The Branding Iron," and "Snowblind," both of which were translated to the screen. She recently spent several weeks at the Goldwyn Studio studying the requirements of the screen. "The Summons," will be published in one of the big magazines.

BOXERS IN FILM

For a scene in a new Christie comedy, two local boxers, Joe Coffey and Ted Frenchie, staged a round of fighting, while a comedy bout was staged between Henry Murdock and George Burton. The picture features Dorothy Devore. All of the fight arena scenes were shot outside of Lode where a ring and arena were recently constructed.

UNIVERSAL NOVEMBER RELEASES

The following are the Universal productions scheduled for November release:

"False Kisses," featuring Miss Dua Pont, (five reels).
"Lies is Busy," one reel comedy.
"A Battle Against Odds," starring Eddie Polo, (two reels).
"International News," No. 93 and No. 94.

MAX AS MUSKETEER

Max Linder has selected a name for his new comedy, a burlesque on "The Three Musketeers." It is to be called "The Last of the Musketeers," and will be a two reel Goldwyn release. Work will start within a week at Universal City.

In the all-star cast for this comedy will be Bull Montana as Richelieu; Jack Richardson as the King, and Max himself will play D'Artagnan.

CHRISTIE TO FILM UNIQUE WESTERN

At Christie is going to make a western comedy with Viora Daniel featured. The new story is an original by Frank Roland Conklin, and was written "A Barnyard Cavalier," which Christie recently completed.

ANOTHER NEW ONE

The Becker-Tullar TrueArt Productions are starting work this week at the Hollywood Studios on a five reel drama starring Orca Carewe, directed by Fred Becker. John Thompson has been engaged as cameraman.

NOVAK PICTURE RETITLED

The title of "Deliverance," Chester Bennett's first independent production, has been changed to "Soul of a Woman." Jane Novak is starred in this picture, which was recently completed.

Maurice Tournier is expected to commence production on an all star special within two or three weeks.

A stampede of hundreds of cattle was filmed in a California ranch for scenes of Harry Carey's picture, "Man to Man," recently.

John Blackwood and Victor Schertzinger are to produce a play which they wrote. It will be staged in San Francisco next week.

L. C. Shumway, Dave Winters, Billy Elmer, Tom Bates and Jack Curtis are among those playing parts in "Judith of Blue Lake Ranch," starring Pauline Frederick.

The latest additions to the cast of the J. L. Frothingham production, "The Man Who Smiled," include Lucille Ward, Fred Macbeth and Harvey Clarke.

George Nichols, Roy Atwell and Ralph McCullough are playing in support of Marie Prevost in her forthcoming picture for Universal entitled, "Cupid Incog."

Wills Robards and Charles Detchever are enacting important roles in Anita Stewart's forthcoming picture entitled "The Woman He Married," under the direction of Fred Niblo.

Florence Desmond has been selected by Rex Ingram to play an important part in his latest Metro production, "The Prisoner of Zenda."

Work is progressing rapidly on the re-construction of the Hippodrome Theatre in Bakersfield, Calif., owned by West Coast Theatres, Inc., which is expected to reopen within three weeks.

"Enchantment," directed by Robert G. Vignola, and starring Marion Davies, will be given its western premier at the Grauman Million Dollar Theatre, Monday, Nov. 7th.

"The Digest of the Motion Picture Industry"

The right one is worth big money. You may have it. Will you accept a free, confidential test?

Hundreds of original stories, for dramatization on the screen, are urgently needed to keep the motion picture industry alive.

The Palmer Photoplay Corporation is the accredited agent of the leading producers in a nation-wide search for story-telling ability. Not literary skill, but creative imagination and dramatic insight—the ability to think out and tell a good story, dramatically.

It is a talent many people have who never suspect its presence. You may possess the gift yourself, and not be aware of it. Will you let us test you free?

Send for the Van Loan questionnaire. In your own home by a simple psychological test you can learn whether you have the native ability for which the motion picture industry is anxious to pay liberally.

This questionnaire has started hundreds on the path to fame and big income. Just use the coupon below. You incur no obligation, of course.

HOLMES CLOSES FOREIGN DEALS
E. S. Holmes, business manager for Orient Pictures Corporation, Los Angeles, who has been in New York City for the past eight weeks, reports having closed contracts for Japan with the following:

David F. Howells, Inc., for 14 features including the Arrow Film Corporation for option on all future releases during the coming year, of Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

Robertson Cole Co. for their entire output during the coming year.

Wm. M. Vogel for all current releases and the coming year's output of Realart Pictures Corporation for 25 features including all current releases.

Equity Pictures Corporation for the latest five releases, Clara K. Young pictures.

Mr. Holmes also has purchased a number of individual pictures from various other companies, including Pathé Exchange, Inc., Tower Film Co., and J. W. Film Co.

SPEED COMEDIES
The Reggie Morris Productions, Inc., located at 7100 Santa Monica Blvd., Hollywood, California, Reggie Morris, president, and Frank H. Marshall, vice-president, are now making two-reel comedy productions under the name of Speed Comedies, released through the Arrow Film Corporation for the independent market, and featuring the following stars: Neely Edwards, Charlotte Merriam, Jack Duffy, Margaret Cullington, Eddie Baker, Gertrude Robinson, and Jack Ackroyd. The first of this series has just been completed and will be released in about two weeks from date.

PAUL GERSON NOTES
Paul Gerson, Pictures Corp., are about to start a new series featuring Helen Franklin, under the direction of “Rube” Miller, also Tom Gibson, which will make a series of outdoor five-reel adventure stories, featuring a well-known star. In addition to these productions, Paul Gerson is to be starred in a special five-reel photoplay.

AT LASKY’S

“The Noodle” is the temporary title of the William D. Taylor production in which Bette Davis is the leading lady. The picture will be released approximately the middle of November.

Helen Keller, George Stanley and Fred Spencer are cast in the new Aubrey two-reel comedy which has just started production at Vitagraph. Bud Ross and Aubrey wrote the story.

Fred Patterson, straight, is exactly what he should be.

Kate Tencray, J. M. Carlyle, William Walling and William Duval fill the remaining positions in the perhaps overly large cast. Robert Newhardt’s camcorder work upon this production is fair.

SCREEN WRITERS GIVE HALLOWEEN PARTY
The Screen Writers Guild entertained foremost celebrities of the picture industry upon the evening of Saturday, Oct. 29th, at its clubhouse, when it staged a delightful Halloween party in honor of the sprightly season.

The brilliant air which would naturally permeate a gathering of such a nature was augmented by Alexander the Great’s clever entertainment, which was a feature of the program. The psychic’s demonstrations were enthusiastically received.

The Guild’s new home promises to become one of the film colony’s most attractive social centers.

COX STORY ON SCREEN
George L. Cox at present directing for Universal, recently disposed of the screen rights to his play entitled “Prince Hal.” Mr. Cox is a member of the Screen Writers’ Guild, the Authors’ League of America, the Writers’ Club, the Players Club of Chicago, and the Motion Picture Directors’ Association.

BESSIE LOVE IN HAYAKAWA’S LATEST
Bessie Love, who played the feminine lead with Sessue Hayakawa in his recent R-C production, “The Swamp,” now about to be released, has been engaged to appear with him in “The Vermilion Penel,” a Chinese story by Homer Liu, that will be his next starring vehicle, upon which will start within the next few days.

REALART SIGNS LE SAINT
Edward Le Saint has signed with Supervising Director Elmer Harris of Realart to direct the next Constance Binney production. Mr. Le Saint has been associated at various times with Imp, Universal, Famous Players-Lasky, Kinemacolor and Fox.

HATTON BOYS BUSY
Clarence Hatton, remembered as the “Buddy” of Jackie Coogan in “Peck’s Bad Boy,” recently completed his first picture “When We Were Young,” in which he played the leading role under the direction of Eugene Lowry. He was supported by his brother Will Jim. A third brother, John, is playing with Mary Miles Minter in his current picture.

GASNIER PREPARING
Having completed “The Call of Home,” adapted from George Agnew Chamberlain’s novel, “Home,” Louis J. Gasnier, the R-C director, is making plans for his next story, “The Deliverance,” the casting of which has already started.

A Thousand Years in Twenty

The surprising extract from "The Christian Register," a liberal religious paper published in Boston, which follows, was brought to our attention this week as marking a significant recognition of the motion picture by America's foremost scientist, a man who has himself contributed several hundred years to our civilized progress.

"Thos. A. Edison says that moving pictures used as text-books would advance civilization one thousand years in twenty. 'Present primary school systems are poor and unattractive to children' he said. 'The remedy is to eliminate boresome books and teach with motion pictures. This is a more vivid, more compelling method of holding the child's attention.' Mr. Edison found the majority of college men who applied for positions in his plant amazingly ignorant. He placed the fault, not with the men or the college, but with their early education.

We have always advocated instruction by films and we do not feel that Mr. Edison's statement is exaggerated to the slightest degree. When it is realized that in the public schools two years are now devoted to the study of American history and that it might be digested more thoroughly in two weeks' time if it were taken in through the eye from the screen (for there is no question as to the motion picture's impressionistic qualities) the celluloid's possibilities as an educator are appreciated.

To what lengths in mental development the generations taught thus quickly and efficiently might go! Certainly civilization would take an unprecedented bound with the minds of the world better trained at twelve than are our present college graduates at twenty-five. As to the likelihood of a general adoption of this method, that is but a matter for intelligence and a little time to adjust. Meanwhile we have the satisfaction of the knowledge that our greatest minds are at work upon the proposition which is lent thereby the proper weight in the eyes of the world to insure its early success.

Invaluable Feature for Our Readers

Because almost daily, we receive queries upon the copyright law from aspiring scenarists and therefore have been forced to the conclusion that far too little is known of it in a profession to which its acquaintance is vital, we have by special arrangement secured the services of Irving S. Baltimore, a local attorney, and a specialist in this particular branch to introduce and conduct a department upon copyright regulations to commence in the issue of November 19th.

In addition to the information offered in his articles, Mr. Baltimore who has but recently returned from Europe where he was occupied for a considerable space arranging stage and picture rights to the output of various British and Continental authors, will undertake to answer all questions sent in for his attention.

The assistance of a recognized authority in these matters should prove generally beneficial to those who are comparatively unfamiliar with them.

High Cost of Agents

"Equity" has reviewed the agent situation from a slightly different angle below.

Theatrical managers and motion picture producers frequently complain about the high cost of production. They attribute their troubles to the railroads, to the Government, and so forth.

"We think that they have overlooked one very potential factor in the rise of production costs, that is, a certain type of agent.

"There are honest agents, of course, who charge the legal 5% commission and really work in the interests of the actor. These deserve all encouragement and we are not referring to them.

"There is another type of agent, however, and it is odd how few managers seem to have realized just who bears the expense of his commission. One would think that, when a manager's taxi is blockaded by the passing of some agent's Rolls Royce, he wonders just where the upkeep for that car came from. But apparently he doesn't.

"Of course the manager pays for that limousine. An actor has to make just so much to maintain his standard of living. If an agent charges him ten or twenty or thirty per cent. of his salary, he presently raises his salary by just that amount, exactly as the retailer who is overcharged by his wholesaler presently raises his prices to the public. For once, the manager truly represents the public.

"And yet literally hundreds of managers permit their subordinates to 'co-operate' with these profiteers to the extent of forcing players who wish to work under that management to apply through the channels of a certain agency. The subordinate, and not the manager, profits by this illicit arrangement. The casting director or studio manager has 'an interest' in the agency, and the agent naturally has an interest in him. Apparently the manager is the only one who has no interest in the matter. He fondly imagines that the actor is the only loser—so why shouldn't his employees make what they can on the side?

"But here is just what happens.

AMERICAN TECHNIQUE AND ITALIAN ART COMBINED

Henry Kolker and his technical staff recently sailed for Cheresco en route to Italy, under contract with the Societa Anonima 'Ultra' of Rome, Luporini Brothers, and Ernest Shipman of New York City. Among the personnel of Mr. Kolker’s staff are Howard F. Bretherton, assistant director, and Charles Roscher, late cameraman with Mary Pickford productions.

The stories of F. Marion Crawford have been purchased by this company and “Sant Iliaro” is the one selected for the premier production. Kenneth O’Hara has been chosen to arrange the adaptation and continuity.

Two negatives will be made of each story, one under direction of an Italian producer for the Latin-American field and the other under Mr. Kolker’s direction for the Anglo-American countries. The combined studies of the Novo and Bernini companies under the control of Ultra, have been completely equipped for this first Italian-American effort.

VAUDEVILLE BOOKING EXCHANGE

A new department has been initiated in the exhibition program of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., in the opening of a vaudeville booking office in the Los Angeles headquarters.

It is planned to establish a regular route over the Gore Brothers, Remish & Sol Lesser string of houses, for a number of acts. The Kinema Theatre in Los Angeles will be the first house in which these acts will be played.

The new department is under the direction of Harry C. Arthur, Jr., who has secured William Newberry as booking agent.

TALMADGE ORGANIZATION MOVES

The booking department, in charge of Felix F. Feist, of the Norma Talmadge and the Constance Talmadge Film Companies, the publicity department, in charge of Beulah Livingstone, and the keepers department in charge of Alonso Kirkpatrick, will move next Monday, from the Talmadge Studios at 318 East 88th St., New York City, to the State Theatre Bldg., of that city. This change has been brought about by the rental of the Talmadge Studios to the Selznick organization, for a period of one year, during which time the Talmadge sisters will make most of their productions in California.

WARD WING FILMING MARK TWAIN STORIES

Ward Wing is directing a series of Mark Twain stories for Robert North Bradbury with Lyman Howard acting as cameraman and Phil de Ecce and as technical director.

Frank Kingsley and Russell Powell have been engaged to enact the leading male role and character lead respectively with William Moran as the heavy. Lilian Marshall has been signed as leading woman.

GRANDON PICTURE AT ALHAMBRA

"Lotus Blossom," a Leon, But Jung production, directed by Frank Grandon, will open at the Alhambra, Nov. 26th.

MAY UNDERTAKE HUGE PHOTOPLAY

As soon as D. W. Griffith finishes "The Two Orphans," he will take under consideration the making of a motion picture of seventy-two reels to be released as six productions of twelve reels each.

AT UNIVERSAL

"The Golden Gallows," written by Victoria Galland and published in a popular magazine, which will serve as Miss DuPont's next starring vehicle, is being scenario'd by Harvey Gates.

The second episode of "Ned of the News," a series of newspaper stories each of which is complete in itself, has entered production under the direction of Albert Russell.

Elleen Sedgwick and Jack Perrin are enacting the leading roles in "The Dream Girl," with Edward Kull directing.

Laguna Beach furnishes the scenes for the concluding shots for Eddie Polo's current serial, "The Secret Four," which is nearing completion under Perry Vekross's direction. Kathleen M躺着 and Julie Leonard are the leading feminine players.

"Ranching de Lusce," is the name of the fun film which Craig Hutchinson is directing. "The Judge of Fighting Hearts," Hoot Gibson's latest starring picture, is in the cutting room. Louise Lorraine will be seen in the leading part opposite Mr. Gibson, while Caramel Phillips, Tom Ingham, Fred Lancaster and others enact important roles.

Erie Von Stroheim's corps of cutters are still busy with the task of getting "Foolish Wives" into the length necessary for release.

HOLUBAR AT BRUNTON

Allen Holubar, who produced "Man, Woman, Marriage" for Associated First National, released, and is now in Los Angeles recently with Dorothy Phillips, his wife.

Preparations have already begun at Brunton studio for the production of Mr. Holubar's next play, the scenario of which was written by himself. Dorothy Phillips will enact the star role.

HAMPTON ON LATEST

Benjamin B. Hampton has started production on the photo-dramatization of his sixth Zane Grey novel, "Wildfire," an outdoor drama. Two complete producing crews are "shooting" the pictures. They are Eliot Howe and Jean Hersholt, directors; Gus Petersen, William Edmunds, and F. H. Sturgis, cameramen; James Townsend and David Hampton, assistant directors. E. Richard Schayer wrote the continuity.

COMPLETE WINDOW

The filming of J. Inman Kane’s book, "The Solace of the Wind," starring George Chesebro, was completed last week under the direction of Milburn Morante at the company’s local studio. This is the second of eight north woods and Mounted Police stories featuring Chesebro for Clark-Cornellus release.
Current Reviews

“BLIND HEARTS”

Clune’s

“Blind Hearts” is Hobart Bosworth’s first important independent picture to be released through Associated Producers. The story by Emilie Jonson contains many splendid situations for the star, but on the whole, it is a picture that may be succeeds by a well-directed drama only rendered plausible by the portrayals of the superior cast. Moreover, while Roland Lee’s direction is more than competent to handle Joseph Poland’s scenario, the production’s technical standard is greatly lowered by the always obvious North seas sets and miniatures, which are too giarily faked to be imagined into realism ever.

Although the virile Bosworth quite naturally has “the part” in the picture, Lars Larsen, a soul whom even twenty years of bitter brooding cannot finally debase, he is admirably generous with the rest of the cast, in dealing out its roles, a thing which gives “Blind Hearts” a very good dramatic balance. Larsen is an excellent position for Bosworth in which he offers some of his best strenuous work, throwing himself unreservedly into the heart-broken man’s sullen character. The role will delight the thousand where he is.

In direct contrast to Larsen is John Thomas, the friend against whom the former holds a terrific, unspoken grudge. Wade Boteler in this situation, the troubled but unenlightened partner, keeps continual sympathy by means of his customarily high grade performing.

Perhaps the most sensitive portrayal in the piece is to be credited to Raymond McKee, who enacts Paul Thomas, a high strung lad whom circumstance comes within an ace of hanging. His enthusiasm as the happy boy and his human, almost childish anguish, as he later faces death in innocence, are vivid to the point of extracting really the most pronounced smiles and tears in the story. Here is a juvenile with unlimited dramatic possibilities.

William Conklin and Henry Hebert accomplish some exceedingly menacing opposition between them as James Curdy and James Bradley, the right hand men of Larsen and Thomas respectively, while the plot’s real keynote is included in the action of Naomi, Lole Warren’s capital characterized half-breed.

Madge Bellamy is well suited to the ingenue, Julia Larsen, as are Irene Blackwell and Collette Forbes to Mrs. Thomas and Mrs. Larsen.

J. O. Taylor’s photography is good.

“DANGEROUS LIES”

Grauman’s

Famous Players-Lasky British Productions, Ltd., presents this week a surprisingly well produced picture, “Dangerous Lies,” which is, however, an extraordinarily stereotyped story by E. Phillips Oppenheim. Made at Lasky’s London studio, it is well photographed, satisfactorily lighted, and in many elaborate sets are utilized. The cast is also good, and Director Paul Powell handles it with understanding. The scenario by Mary O’Connor far exceeds the protracted put of the titling department. It is, however, inconceivable that real energy should have been expended upon such insane materia as the original which is based upon two of the world’s most hackneyed situations.

Mary Glynne, a young English actress with charm, and an undisciplined tendency to exaggerate emotional moments, is seen in the principal portrayal, Jean Farrant. Nevertheless, she is kept pretty well in hand by the direction, and displays pleasing adaptability. Certainly Miss Glynne is a different type and therefore has much interest despite her spineless role.

David Powell of our own American screen plays the male lead, Sir Henry Bond, Joan’s husband. Powell can always be depended upon for ease and finish, but he is unhappily allowed very little opportunity in this passive part.

Warburton Gamble as Pearce, the “heavy” first husband of the innocently “remarried” heroine, is very good, while Minna Grey is remarkably cast and enacts with marked sincerity Olive Farrant, Joan’s affectionate sister.

Harry Ham has some clever comedy to his credit as has the actor who plays Sir Henry’s brother. The two are well matched opposite.

Ernest Douples completes the cast.

This picture points great progress for the British screen in technique; nevertheless it will fail to interest American audiences due to its insipid, done-to-death plot.

“NOBODY’S FOOL”

Superba

The most remarkable thing about Universal’s latest Marie Prevost starring vehicle, “Nobody’s Fool,” is the work in it of Harry Myers, The Connecticut Yankee,” whose characterization of Harrison Alger, a professional woman later is good for sixty minutes worth of laugh! We hear consider able from the supporting actor anent his lack of opportunity to “do his best” while “feeding” the more fortunate luminaries, while let us say that the screen and clever Myers evidently looks upon no improved footage as a loss for he is “on his toes” every minute and as a result wrests the entire picture from its stars with unconscious ease and picturesque grace. It is on account of his work that “Nobody’s Fool” is lifted a not very-ugly-duckling, who nevertheless experiences the necessary metamorphosis from goggles and ridiculous clothes into ruffles and curls to find herself overrun with unworthy suitors. It follows that she should pursue the only defiant one upon the horizon.

Vernon Snively isn’t an especially terrifying heavy as Vincent de Puyster, but he possesses in the part, while Helen Harris, R. Henry Guy, Percy Challenger, Lydia Titus and Lucretia Harris complete the cast save for George Kuwa who provides several chuckles with Ah Gone, the “Mongolian menial.”

Taken by and large, “Nobody’s Fool” fills the niche for which it was produced. What more?

“THE SERENADE”

Kinema

Upon the same program with “The Idle Class” during its second week’s run locally, is R. A. Walsh’s screen production for First National of Jose Codina’s stage play, “The Serenade.” Set in a Spanish province it makes a picturesque playop and affords opportunity for some effective fast action, but it is a more or less superficial subject and been so “quickly” cut that the characters not only jerk around most annoyingly but the scenario, prepared by J. T. O’Donohue, is also injured.

Miriama Cooper heads the cast in the role of Maria del Carmen, a beautiful, high spirited senorita who would sacrifice herself for her gallant lover’s safety. Miss Cooper’s work always has delicate shades and a willowy quality, but she has had considerably more advantageous positions in which to work than this one.

George Walsh is more than equal to Pancho, the fiery tempered lover of the fair Maria, whose action is just one stunt after another, resulting in an almost Fairbanksian effect.

Bertram Grassby is dashing devilish as how well knows how to be in fashion, the petted son of an usurper, Domingo Matius, than which there is no more graceful character in the story as it is managed by Josef Swickard.

Rosita Marstini and James Marcus are very good in Senora del Carmen and Pepuso, while Noble Johnson makes a thrillingly real “Spanish Bandit.”

Adelbert Knott as Don Fulgencio, William Eagle Eye, Ardis Milano and Peter Ven- nuola complete the list of players.
Where to Find People You Know

CONKLIN WITH NIBLO

William Conklin has been chosen by Director Fred Niblo to fill the role recently vacated by the sad and sudden death of Willie Robards, who was to have played an important part with Anita Stewart in her new Louis B. Mayer—First National attraction, "The Woman He Married."

HARRON IN METRO PICTURE

John Harron, brother of the late Robert Harron, has been engaged by Metro to play opposite Viola Dana in "The Five Dollar Baby," her new starring picture which Harry Beaumont is directing. Recently Mr. Harron enacted a leading role in "The Grim Comedian," for Goldwyn.

WARWICK PLAYS LEAD

Virginia Warwick, recently seen in one of the principal roles in "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," has been signed to play the lead in "The Man From Broadway," a Western comedy-drama, being directed by Carl P. Wanger and C. F. Reynolds at the Mayer Studios.

IN VAUDEVILLE

Well known picture people who are breaking into vaudeville are Mae Marsh, Mrs. Sidney Drew, Cissie Fitzgerald and Marc McDermott. Crane Wilbur and Martha Mansfield are already appearing in a skit, and Will Rogers opened his tour in Washington recently.

WILLAT WITH INCE

Irvin W. Willat, the young producer-director who was loaned by the Willat Productions, Inc., to make "Yellow Magic and Gold," the Governer Morris story, for Goldwyn, has completed the production and has been engaged by Thomas Ince to direct two pictures.

MAC ARTHUR WITH SENNERT

A. Mac Arthur, former advertising manager of the M. F. World, is now director of publicity for the Mack Sennett Studios.

IN LEADING ROLES

House Peters and Russell Slupson are to enact the two principal male roles in "Human Hearts," about to be filmed by Universal.

DURING CONTINUES WITH FOX

Director Bernard Durning has signed a long term contract with Fox.

Marshall Nelan has engaged Mayme Kelso, character woman, to portray the part in "Petrol," in which Mrs. Katherine Griffith appeared just before she died.

J. H. Howell is serving in an advisory capacity to Rex Ingram during the filming of his production of "The Prisoner of Zenda" for Metro.

FOX SIGNS BITZER

Billy Bitzer, cameraman who recently left the Griffith organization, has been signed by William Fox to join the staff of J. Gordon Edwards in Europe. He leaves presently.

ADDED TO SCENARIO DEPARTMENT

Isabel Johnston has been engaged by Goldwyn to write the screen version of Mary Roberts Rinehart's "Jane." Miss Johnston recently adapted "Peaceful Valley" for Charles Ray.

COMEDY LEAD

Ann Hastings has arrived from New York to join the galaxy of stars in California and recently signed a contract to play opposite Larry Semon in his comedies.

JIMMIE ADAMS AS "FERDIE"

Jimmy Adams, recently featured in his own productions distributed by Educational, has been engaged by Jack Cohn of the Hal Roach Boys Comedies to portray the role of "Ferdie" opposite Sid Smith, the comedy star of the series.

IN SUPPORT OF DANA

Ralph Lewis, whose characterization of Peter Grandet in Rex Ingram's "Conquering Power," will be long remembered, will have an important role in support of Viola Dana in her new starring picture, "The Five Dollar Baby," a Harry Beaumont production.

WITH HAMPTON

Carl Gantvoort, formerly a comic opera star, is appearing in the Zane Grey story, "Wildfire," Benjamin B. Hampton's latest all-star production.

Sidney D'Albrook is playing "Loper," the bandit chief with Garrett Hughes in "Stay Home," under the direction of George Baker.

Larry Semon has engaged Betty Young for "hit" in his forthcoming comedy, temporarily titled "Props." Miss Young has been dancing in a Los Angeles cafe revue.

Hop H. Ward, character comedian, plays a part in Jack White's newest comedy, "The Bally-ho," which has just been completed at the Brunton studios.

Jack H. Richardson of the Mack Sennett Studio has been signed to play the King in the burlesque of "The Three Musketeers," Max Linden's forthcoming Goldwyn production.

William Linahan, who has been lighting Nelan sets for some two years, is in charge of the electrical effects in "Penrod," under production at the Hollywood Studios.

H-len Howard, a cousin of Owen Wister, author, is enacting a prominent role in Benj. B. Hampton's latest all-star production, "Wildfire," adapted from the Zane Grey novel of that name.

Ramón Samaniegos has been selected by Rex Ingram for the role of Rupert of Hentze in his production of "The Prisoner of Zenda" for Metro. Mr. Samaniegos recently enacted the leading juvenile role in "The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam."

I know of nothing more deplorable than the tendency in America to disparage all works of art not leveled to popular comprehension. This same tendency may exist among the millions of other lands; on this point I cannot write with any measure of authority, as I only possess vague, second-hand knowledge.

Nothing is more certain than that this cancer has spread into the motion picture area. I recently heard the screen works of William DeMille criticised, on much the same grounds as a one-story-browed acquaintance of mine criticised—perhaps I should say ridiculed—the Marion Morgan dancers in their recent appearance on an Orpheum program which was for the most part jazzy and typically vulgar. William de Mille’s treatment of screen stories stands forth in the motion picture indignant as the Morgan dancers stood apart from the rest of the Orpheum offerings.

While I do not entirely agree with a certain author who claimed to have autobiographic information to the effect that Hell is an enlightened democracy, I do believe a distorted conception of democracy has caused such phenomenal ideas as this: that a lively, stable proprietor’s opinion of a work of art is as sound as that of any one who has made a deep study of that art form.

There is a fiction abroad in Movieland to the effect that the masses are unable to rise to any subtle or profound work of screen art. This is one of the most damnable ridiculous concepts ever expressed.

—by far David Wark Griffith’s masterpiece—and the final episode of “While New York Sleeps,” were artistic photodramas. All were box-office successes, the criteria of public approval. In fact, I feel certain that “While New York Sleeps,” would have failed utterly had it depended on the first two episodes.

It is generally stated that Cecil B. de Mille’s “The Whispering Chorus” was a box-office failure. I have no authentic proof of this, but if it is so, I cannot at all doubt that it was due to the war period during which this photoplay was released. The horror which swept the world, caused most of us to turn eagerly and pathetically to any mode of gayety, no matter how unnatural or forced. Therefore the release of “The Whispering Chorus” was not timely; today it might fare much better.

It would be futile to deny that most Americans prefer entertainment of a light, frothy, merry type; it would be equally futile to deny that they avert the gaze in the presence of tragedy. Even when inexorable facts mercilessly beat them down, they seek some twentieth century metaphysical hocus-pocus, some spirit-deadening and sense-dulling panacea to still their troubled souls.

Several writers in literary magazines have condemned the motion picture because it told its stories in pictures, thereby tending to make the masses more inarticulate than it is; I do not think that the films cater to “herd inertia,” causing interest in printed literature to decline.

Alas, the films or any other art form, are but symptom of deeper maladies. We are, however, dealing with the obvious, we must not forget. For instance, I know a man who gloats over the fact that he seldom reads anything on the grounds that he doesn’t want his own high thought alloyed. He would by no means think of attending the performance of a symphony, and ridicules what he terms man-made arts. Also, he wants to be a “regular fellow.” He does admit to reading a certain book presuming to represent the all-in-of metaphysics—over and over again.

As Art is man-made, if only indirectly, no high regard for art is possible with one of the aforementioned person’s predispositions.

In fact, such a type of man is intrinsically of the unburied dead; through adhering to philosophies and metaphysical systems which pretend to the securing of ultimate peace, serenity, harmony, his creative faculties become atrophied; he becomes mentally labby, spiritually anaesthetised—and painfully dumb, inarticulate.

The happy ending and the over-sentimentalized photoplay is the result of a racial degradation which makes for spiritual cowardice—that demands a soft place to light upon! The spirit of high adventure, which accepts Life and Death and scorns them both, is not present in our national consciousness.

There is one thing possible, providing there are enough honest artists to pioneer—and that is propaganda, which can be made the friend instead of the enemy of art. Of course, advertising and publicity are the children of propaganda.

I believe a movement could be started enlisting all the recognized screen writers—say the membership of the Screen Writers’ Guild—with a prize offered by some man with both money and artistic ideals, for the best photoplay written. The competition could be given publicity by all the foremost literary magazines. The judges could be selected from among such men as Gilbert Seldes, Ludwig Lewisohn, Franklin P. Adams, Heywood Broun, Theodore Dreiser, George Jean Nathan, and Carl Sandburg.

Through clever publicity, such a contest itself could be given wide newspaper publicity, such as would warrant someone financing the photoplay production to be made from the winning story. The judges would be given authority to select director, technical people and cast.

An intelligently directed advertising campaign, levelling at one of human nature’s utmost weaknesses, vanity, could put the American public on its mettle as discriminators of the beautiful and profound. Mention could be made in advertising copy to the effect that those of low and vulgar taste were not expected to attend presentations of this photoplay-chosen by the most able critics this side of the Atlantic.

Friends of art will look with horror upon any idea of advertising and publicity. Frankly, my idea may be full of flaws, may be ridiculously visionary—but I believe advertising may be harnessed for one purpose or another, just as is electricity. It all depends upon who controls the direction of either force.

I believe the American public could be gradually shamed into an appreciation of better photoplays. No matter how obscure one is, seldom will one admit to being a dunce. If dumb-bells are asked to stay away, lo and behold: a metempsychosis will be effected—all dumb-bells will suddenly believe themselves to be thoughtful men and women, their every action will be as if they were philosophers.

Once this idea is successfully consummated, the very strongholds of the intellectualism will have been penetrated. There will follow in the wake of such a movement the endowed photoplay, the Little Theater of the Screen, and a national elevation of taste.

There is nothing amiss about the photoplay as a medium of art expression; all objections of this expression are inherent in the modus operandi of production, distribution, exploitation and advertising.

Even our modern metaphysicians and their followers might be won over; the very integral weakness in their premises would make them eventually susceptible to a higher beauty—the beauty born of sadness, of a realization that Life has no final analysis, that capturing infinity is no pastime for finites.

A competition such as I outlined a few paragraphs back should bring forth a veritable epicome of Life—a photoplay which may be pathetic, terrible, and true; yet deeply beautiful, leaving a heart in the heart that would make all of us more generous, more baffled.

And so we "would learn to hold all lovely things more beautiful because they move in furtive battalions manifold."

MUMMERS TEMPORARILY SUSPEND ACTIVITIES

Due to the ill health of Mrs. Meredith Woodward, sponsor and energetic worker in The Mumpers Workshop, and the European trip of Mr. Clarence Thomas, dramatic director of the organization, who is studying Laboratory Theatre conditions abroad, activities at the Workshop have been temporarily suspended.

Meanwhile Mrs. Woodward is negotiating for the sale of the present workshop and the old Dugout on Morgan Place to facilitate the erection of a new Little Theatre in Hollywood for the Mumpers' utilization in the spring.
"CHILDREN'S WEEK" ON SCREENS OF U. S.

"Children's Book Week," observed by libraries, schools, women's clubs, and book sellers, will this year be observed also by the motion picture exhibitors of America.

For the convenience of exhibitors who are booking pictures for "Children's Book Week," the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures has issued a list of forty-one "films well-made," which have been drawn from books for boys and girls.

Mary Pickford and Marguerite Clarke appear to be the "children's stars," while William D. Taylor and Maurice Tourneur attain the distinction of "Children's directors," with three pictures a piece on the selected list.

Mary Pickford has her "Daddy Long Legs," "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," and "Pollyanna," on the list.

William D. Taylor's "Huckleberry Finn," "Tom Sawyer," and "Ann of Green Gables" are named; while Maurice Tourneur has "Treasure Island," "The Blue Bird," and "The Last of the Mohicans" to his credit on the list.

The most popular "children's authors" appear to be Mark Twain and Shakespeare, each with five stories on the film list. Charles Dickens, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow and Washington Irving are represented by two screen stories a piece. Three films are historical, three based on fairy tales, and two from the Arabian Nights.

SHOW ENTERTAINS NEILAN PLAYERS

Principals and chorus of the Fanchon and Marco "Sunkist" show journeyed to the Hollywood Studios recently to entertain Marshall Neilan and his "Penrod" company.

After the performance, Mr. Neilan took the members of the "Sunkist" company for a ride in his "blimp." A coincidence in the visit of this troupe to the Neilan studio was disclosed when Horshrn Beck, who appeared on the stage as the original "Penrod" in the New York opening, met Wesley Barry, who is now appearing in the screen version of the Booth Tarkington story.

SCHENCK ARRIVES

Joseph M. Schenck is expected in town on Monday and will immediately take charge of his new duties. Mr. Schenck recently purchased the Robert Brunton Studios and has been elected to the advisory board of the Bank of Italy of this city.

MRS. JOHN BARRYMORE IN FILMS

It is expected that Mrs. John Barrymore will have a part in John Barrymore's next production, "Sherlock Holmes."

WESLEY APPOINTED MASCOT

The L. A. United Soccer Team recently appointed Wesley Barry as mascot of their club.

Sada Cowan, scenarist, is back from Korea, and ready to resume her professional work.

THIRTY-EIGHT IN "PENROD"

Marshall Neilan's cast of players used in his current production of Booth Tarkington's "Penrod" now nearing completion, numbers in all thirty-eight players.

SYD SMITH

INSTALL NEW DIRECTORS

Jacques d'Arras, French Technical expert on foreign detail and costume, whose work on "The Horsesmen of the Apocalypse," and other productions, will be remembered, has abandoned motion pictures, and has taken over the direction of the Hoover Art Studios, in connection with Thomas Bouchard, Parisian art photographer, who recently arrived in California.

MONTOR POTRAIT IN LUXEMBOURG GALLERY

A painting by Walter Russell of Mary Miles Minter as a child is to be placed on exhibition in the Luxembourg gallery of Paris.

PREPARING MUSICAL SCORE

Louis Gottschalk, who arranged the musical score for "Broken Blossoms," is doing likewise for "The Two Orphans," D. W. Griffith's latest production.

SHIRLEY MASON ON EASTERN TRIP

Shirley Mason, after three years of continued picture-making for Fox, has left for New York on an extended Eastern trip.

Albert Cavens, leading boy of "The Little Players," has just finished acting Jimmy Bean in "Pollyanna," at Long Beach. Master Cavens also gave a piano recital recently at a banquet in the Clark Hotel.

Monroe Salisbury has left his erstwhile home in Hollywood to take up his residence in San Mateo, Calif., where he will make a series of pictures.

Josef Swickard recently completed his role in "Wards of the North," the current Frank Mayo starring vehicle at Universal City.

BEALL MOVES OFFICES

Harry Hammond Beall has opened new publicity and advertising headquarters in the Citizens' National Bank building, and removed his interests from the Superba Theater building where he has been established for the past five years. Mr. Beall is maintaining a general advertising and publicity bureau as well as specializing in motion picture exploitation. He is also Pacific Coast manager for the Exhibitors Herald, a national publication devoted to photoplay interests.

PAULINE FREDERICK STAGES RODEO

Pauline Frederick recently gave a barbecue and rodeo as a farewell party for the score of more cowboys who played with her in her latest R-C production, "Judith of Blue Lake Ranch."

CHRISTIE ON HONOR LIST

"A Pair of Sexes," Christie comedy, has been selected as the only moving picture comedy in the preferred list of pictures picked by the National Motion Picture League, especially recommended as "Family Films." Previously, the League picked Christie's "Nothing Like It."

FOREIGN TRIP

L. A. Howland, formerly publicity director for the Assistant Directors Association, accompanied by Mrs. Howland, is on the continent on an extended trip in foreign lands. They intend spending Christmas on the Nile and New Year's in Cairo.

MEDAL FOR "HUMORESQUE"

"Humoresque" has been declared the best picture made in July by Photoplay Magazine, which has been conducting a competitive test for six months.

To Cosmopolitan Productions goes a gold medal with an inscription.

LANGLEY SPEAKER OF EVENING

Mr. Edward M. Langley, art director of "The Three Musketeers," was the speaker of the evening at the weekly meeting of the Photoplaywrights, held recently in their club room at the Brack Shops.

REX BEACH AT NEW YORK STRAND

Rex Beach made a public appearance recently at the Strand in New York City in connection with the showing of "The Iron Trail."

DANIA NEW HOME

Viola Dana has acquired a home in the Hollywood foothills where she will reside with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Figiath.

Eugene Pallette has completed his part in "Judith of Blue Lake Ranch." Pauline Frederick's latest R-C production.

Hunt Stromberg has returned to the R-C Studios in Hollywood after spending several weeks in New York and other Eastern cities.

FIRST NATIONAL NOTES

Associated First National Pictures, Inc., announces that it has acquired the distribution rights to Marshall Neilan’s production, “The Lotus Eater,” which George Ade recently finished titling at its Indiana home. John Barrymore enacts the leading role, while the rest of the cast is an all-star one consisting of Colleen Moore, Anna Q. Nilsson, Lacey Fox, Ida Waterman, Frank Currier and J. Barney Sherry. The photography is by David Kesson. A definite releasing date for “The Lotus Eater” has not been announced, but it is declared that first-run engagements for the production will take place in November.

Buster Keaton’s latest two-reel comedy, “The Faceless,” made under the Joseph M. Schenck banner, has been completed and will be ready for distribution in the near future. Buster Keaton and Eddie Cline collaborated in the writing as well as the directing of this fun film.

John M. Stahl is scheduled to start on his third independent unit production for Louis B. Mayer within the next two weeks. The script is being prepared and casting of the play will be started this week. “The Song of Life,” the second of the Stahl all-star series, has been shipped to New York.

AT ROBERTSON-COLE

Beatrice Van is finishing the continuity of “Boy Crazy,” which will be Doris May’s next starring vehicle. William A. Seiter, who directed Miss May’s two preceding pictures, “The Foolish Ace,” and “Eden and Return,” will also handle the megaphone on “Boy Crazy,” work on which is expected to start within the next two weeks.

Sessue Hayakawa and Norman Dawn, his director, have been filming outdoors scenes for Hayakawa’s next production, “The Vermillion Pencil,” in which Beacie Love plays the opposite star.

HAMILTON-WHITE

“The Panic’s On,” is announced by W. W. Raltry, production manager, as the title of Lloyd Hamilton’s latest comedy. The picture marks the fourth of the comedian’s new series. Hugh Fay directed and Irene Dalton has the leading feminine role opposite the star.

Lige Conley is featured in “The Bally-ho,” the third of Jack White’s new series of two-reel comedies. Bob Kerr directed this picture under the personal supervision of Jack White.

FOX SPECIALS AT MILLER’S

Robert Jost, new exchange manager for Fox West Coast Studios, has made arrangements whereby the six Fox specials “Thankerdlop,” “Shame,” “The Last Trail,” “Footfalls,” “Perjury” and “The Virgin Paradise” will be given an early showing at Miller’s theatre.

CHANGES NAME

“Paul” Parrott is the name by which Jimmy Parrott will be known henceforth in the screen world and his comedies as the “Paul” Parrott comedies. Mr. Parrott finished one this week and has started production of another in which Ethel Fordhurst plays the feminine lead.

“The Digest of the Motion Picture Industry”

Eddie Lyons, comedian, who is making his own comedies for Arrow release and who wrote the first four productions besides directing them himself, was visited recently by W. E. Doe Shallenberger, President of the Arrow Corporation. Mr. Lyons has just completed his fifth comedy, “Irma Dur- tons,” and will supervise the cutting before starting on his next.

Director Bill Howard of the Fox Studios has gone east for a short vacation, returning presently.

JIMMY ADAMS

BRADY ON CENSOR SITUATION

William A. Brady, president of the National Association, left New York recently on a trip through the Middle West to confer with prominent women’s organizations in several centers and strengthen the cooperation between such groups and the association.

Mr. Brady will recommend the adoption of the endorsement plan, such as that now used by the Indiana inorer of Photoplays, which has practically silenced the clamor of professional reformers for legalized censorship in that state.

DUTCH FILMS COMING

Five pictures made in Holland by the Hollandia Film Co., are being imported into this country, it is understood, by Jacques Wes sel formerly of Pathé, Hollandia is said to be the only producing organization in the Netherlands.

BUYS ADVENTURE SERIES

The Alexander Film Corp., has secured American and Canadian distribution on “The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes,” made in England by Stott. Each adventure is in two reels and there are fifteen in all.

McCAY CARTOONS DISTRIBUTED

Rialto Productions, Inc., will distribute a series of Winsor McCay cartoons via the independent market. The first is “The Dream of a Rarebit Fiend.”

George Melies’ “The Sheik,” co-starring Agnes Ayres and Rudolph Valentino, opens the third week of its world premier engagement at Grauman’s Rialto, Sunday, Nov. 13th.

AT LASKY’S

Dorothy Dalton, on completion of “Moran of the Lady Letty,” George Melford’s production, in which she is featured, will start work on a new star picture, “Thoron of the Rocks,” this story being by Vinzie E. Roe, adapted by Beulah Marie Dix and supervised by Thompson Buchanan. The director has not yet been announced.

James Cruze will start the direction of “Is Matrimony a Failure?” about the 21st. Lilu Lee will play the feminine lead; Zasu Pitts, Adolph Menjou, Ching Vala and others will appear in this comedy cast.

All is in readiness for the start about Nov. 28 of “Beyond the Rocks,” in which Gloria Swanson will star. This is a story by Elinor Glyn, adapted by Jack Cunningham. Sam Wood will again direct Miss Swanson.

Thomas Meighan, as soon as he finishes “If a Man Plates,” will take a trip to New York and on his return will begin a new star picture temporarily titled, “The Proxy Daddy.” Olga Printzlau adapted it from Edwey Peple’s story.

Jack Holt’s second star picture, adapted by Albert Shelby LeVino from “The Parson of Pamplin,” by Damon Runyon, has been titled “White Satan Sleeps.”

Ethel Clayton is nearly through with “For the Defense,” directed by Paul Powell. Vernon Steele is the star and a character heavy is portrayed by Bertram Grassby.

AS “QUEEN”

“Spike” Rankin, the thinnest girl in pictures, is to play the queen in the burlesque on the “Three Musketeers,” which Max Lin- der is making at Universal City.

“PENROD” FINISHING

Marshall Neilan’s picturization of Booth Tarkington’s “Penrod” with Wesley Barry in the titular role is nearing completion at the Hollywood Studios and will be ready for showing in First National Theatres within the next month.

CABANNE CAST ASSEMBLED

SURGEONS TO USE FILMS

The American College of Surgeons recently in convention considered the use of motion pictures for the demonstration of surgical operations.

LIFEGRAPH SERIES

A series of six two-reel comedies made by Lifeograph of Portland, Ore., and known as “Peeps into the Future,” is now being released by all exchanges of Pioneer.

STORIES FOR “U”

Universal has purchased “The Storm” for the use of Harry Carey and “The Land of the Lost” by Courtney Riley Cooper for Hoot Gibson.

While in New York in his Eastern trip, Charles Ray will complete his already commenced picture, “Smuggle.” In addition to George Rizard, his cinematographer, accompanying him east will be Mrs. Ray, Richard Willis, his general manager, and Albert A. Kidder, Jr.

JENNINGS IN VEILLER FILM

De Witt Jennings has been selected by Bayard Veiller for a part in Bert Lytell’s new Metro picture, "The Phantom Bride."
Mr. Jennings recently appeared in support of Mr. Lytell in "Ladyfingers" and "The Right That Failed."

Claire Adams is enacting the heroine in "Wildfire," Ben B. Hampton’s latest all-star production, adapted from the Zane Grey novel.

Helen Walton, artist’s model and formerly of the legitimate stage, is at present with the Neva Gerber company at the Berwilla Studios.

Fred Cavens and Sherry Hall have been appointed as assistants to Max Linder for his next production, a burlesque on "The Three Musketeers."

Burwell Hamrick, child player, has been selected by Bayard Veiller to appear with Bert Lytell in the screen version of Tommy Carteret," now being filmed at Metro's
Hollywood studios.

Jack Hoxie, who started work last week in "Under Orders," is locating at Big Bear Lake, where he and his company will remain for a few weeks. "Under Orders" is the second of a new series of westerns in which Mr. Hoxie is featured.

Marjorie Maurice, sister of Marie Prevost, had been selected by Harry Beaumont for a part in "The Five Dollar Baby," starring Viola Dana. Miss Maurice recently appeared in Metro's all-star production, "The Little Fool."

"The actor goes to such and such a management or studio and finds that he can only obtain work by paying a big commission to the favored agency. Perhaps he accepts the situation and takes his loss—on that one occasion, but the next time that management or studio desires his services, he adds just that much more to his salary. And the producer pays it. "If the managers want production costs to come down, they must stop this sort of thing."

The STORY Idea

THAT STRUGGLES TO GET OUT

The right one is worth big money. You may have it. Will you accept a free, confidential test?

Hundreds of original stories, for dramatization on the screen, are urgently needed to keep the motion picture industry alive.

The Palmer Photoplay Corporation is the accredited agent of the leading producers in a nation-wide search for story-telling abilities. Not literary skill, but creative imagination and dramatic insight—the ability to think out and tell a good story, dramatically.

It is a talent many people have who never suspect its presence. You may possess the gift yourself, and not be aware of it. Will you let us test you free?

Send for the Van Loan questionnaire. In your own home by a simple psychological test you can learn whether you have the native ability for which the motion picture industry is anxious to pay liberally.

QUALIFICATIONS:

Formerly an actor in the classic and modern drama, and afterwards Stage Director of plays and Theatre Manager. Author of four dramas which have toured the large cities.
Have directed many screen stars of reputation. Thoroughly posted on scenic investiture, costuming, and every angle of production. Wide knowledge of screen people and a discerning judge of types. Absolutely conservative and always in accord with the Management’s interest.

Having been a Motion Picture Director for many years, I can be relied upon in any emergency to take up complete direction or odds and ends for time economy.

Diplomatic, efficient, and a hustler who is always on the job. My salary is a “modest” one, and if I don’t “make good” you can “give me the gate” without notice.

COMPETENT, c/o CAMERA!
The History of Copyright

By Irving S. Baltimore

Because we believe that the following article opening the legal series by Mr. Baltimore in this publication, will prove both intensely interesting as well as informative, to our readers, we are devoting to it our own particular space in this week’s issue. There is nothing so important to the professional man who would succeed, as a complete familiarity with all national and state legislations affecting him through his calling.

To fully understand such, it is necessary for him to be acquainted with all historical matters that have brought influence to bear upon the subject. The history of the copyright law is comprehensively covered here.

F. R.

It has been repeatedly stated that the history of copyright law, unlike most branches of jurisprudence, is not lost in antiquity. This assertion appears to be postulated largely upon the theory that little profit could have accrued from literary production prior to the invention of printing. However, what modicum of evidence afforded us, reveals an ancient sense of ownership in creations of the mind, and consequent resentment at abuses thereof. It seems highly probable that the origin of claim to property of this character, came contemporaneously with, or shortly after the use of parchment and papyrus received its impetus. That search of the Justinian codes and other available compilations of ancient law, discloses no mention of anything in the nature of copyright, can be attributed to the fact that no distinction was then drawn between this and property of other character.

Traditions of Homer, the blind author of the Iliad, and his contemporary rhapsodists, afford no enlightenment as to the status of authors in their day. But the fact that their means of publication were confined to oral utterance, may account for the absence of any question in this behalf. Parchment and papyrus made it possible to preserve the labors of the poet, the historian and the philosopher, and the introduction of the scribe and copyist led to the multiplication of copies of their works.

Greek dramatists relied on public performance of their plays for pecuniary reward, as largely do the dramatists of today. There is mention in Roman literature of the sale of playrights by dramatic authors. Martial speaks of certain book-sellers who have copies of certain of his poems for sale, and Horace refers to a firm of book-sellers as likely to profit greatly from a certain book. Many outcries against errors in transcription by copyists are found in Latin prose and poetry. Cicero’s letters reflect a current conception of literary property and payment for its use.

Probably in the second Century, B. C., the Roman Jurist, Gaius, upheld the superior right of an artist in his painting. In the Sixth Century this decision was adopted by Tribonian editor-in-chief of the Justinian Codes, and was applied in a modern case, involving John Leech’s woodcuts.

Our earliest record of a copyright case, Finnian vs. Colomba, in the year 587, was chronicled fifty years later by Adamnan, and cited by Montalembert in “The Monks of the West.” The facts surround St. Colomba’s surreptitious copying of a psalter in possession of Finnian, his instructor, who recovered the same under the decision of King Dermott, rendered in the Halls of Tara, “To every cow her calf.” This decision, chronicled so many years subsequent to its alleged rendition, though of disputed authenticity, pithily enunciates the common law doctrine of copyright. Common law is that body of law which, in England, sprang from common custom and long usage, and came to be regarded as part of the law of the commonwealth, finally receiving judicial sanction as such in decisions of courts of the realm. The term in effect is synonymous with unwritten, as distinguished from statutory law. The common law has been adopted by all our States, except Louisiana.

The recognition of copyright as a definite and distinct entity in jurisprudence, is the result of the possibility of widespread and increased multiplication of publications, which came with the introduction of printing with type. Prior to this, the multiplication of copies of any book was a difficult and protracted task.

Gutenberg printed a book with moveable type at Mentz in 1451. In 1465 two Germans opened a printing establish in a monastery near Rome, two years later removing to Rome. John of Spira began printing in 1469 at Venice. Louis XI commissioned to Mentz Nicholas Jensen, who brought the art to France in 1469. The first press in England was set up by Caxton in 1474. The earliest printers confined their publications to prayer books and similar religious works. The first book of a secular nature, Cicero’s “Offices,” being published in 1465.

The initial grant of a copyright, revealed by available history, was issued to John of Spira by the Senate of Venice in 1469, bestowing upon him the exclusive right for a period of five years, to publish the epistles of Cicero and Pliny. Peter of Ravenna, in 1491, was granted the exclusive right to print and sell his “Phoenix,” the first

HOLUBAR AT UNITED STUDIOS

Allen Holubar announces that he is to make a series of feature pictures at the United lot. The first of the series will be "The Soul Seeker," starring Dorothy Phillips.

Mr. Holubar, while in New York, purchased two other scenarios and secured options on a foreign production. Work will begin on the next Holubar production in two weeks. Casting already has started.

BALZAC ROMANCE NORMA'S NEXT

Norma Talmadge's next picture, which she will make in Los Angeles, will be a dramatization of Honore Balzac's famous romance, "The Duchess of Langeais." The drama will have stage settings of the period of the Balzac novel.

HOLIDAY RELEASE FOR WILLET'S "FIFTY CANDLES"

Irvin V. Willat's independent production "Fifty Candles" for Hodkinson, is scheduled for holiday release. Among the players in the all-star cast are Marjorie Daw, Eddie Burns, Bertram Grassby, George Webb, Wade Boteler and others.

TURPIN DONS HIS LITTLE BROWN DERBY

After sixteen weeks of absence from the Silver lot, Ben Turpin is back again and ready to begin work on his forthcoming comedy which is scheduled to start shortly.

NEXT STAHL PRODUCTION

Louis B. Mayer has secured the film rights to Francis H. Greene's story, "One Clear Call." It will be transferred to the screen by John M. Stahl as his next all-star production for First National release.

EDDIE LYONS FINISHES "JUST A MINUTE"

Eddie Lyons, director-comedian, has just completed the final scenes of his latest laugh provoker, "Just a Minute," and production will start shortly on the next of this series of comedies for Arrow entitled "Moving Day."

DIXON STARTS NEW ONE

The Denver Dixon Productions making a series of five-reel outdoor adventure stories starring Marlin Saias under the direction of Denver Dixon, gave a preview recently of its lately completed production "Argonaut Love," and production has already started on the next picture, an Arabian adventure story by Dixon McCormick.

James Young, who directed Katherine MacDonald in "The Infidel," just completed by Preferred Pictures, Inc., is now busy editing and titling the feature.

"Out of the Blue," by Victor Hugo Halperin, will be the forthcoming Cactus Feature costarring "Bob" Reeves and Maryon Aye, under the direction of Albert Rogell. Production will continue at the Hermann Studio.

HATTON ON NEW ONE

"The Black Ranch" is the title of Dick Hatton's next photoplay for Prairie Productions about to be filmed. It was written by Leonard Wheeler and George Crocker.

AT UNIVERSAL

Frank Mayo has finished "Wards of the North," the Clarence Budington Kelland story upon which he has been working. Molly Malone will be seen in the principal feminine role. Mr. Mayo is at present in Yuma, Ariz., filming episodes for "Slipper Toe." William J. Neidig has completed the story of the sand dunes. Virginia Valli plays opposite the star.

Concluding scenes are being filmed at Palm Springs for Siccilla Dean's forthcoming production, "Wild Honey."

Robert Hill has started another two-reel western photoplay featuring Laura LaPlant.

"Meant to Be" is the title of Art Acord's current stellar effort, being made in the interval between the completion of the historical serial, "Winners of the West," and the start of production of the next documentary chapter play, a visualization of the chief events in the adventures of Buffalo Bill. Edward Laemmle is Acord's director.

AFO THE ROACH STUDIOS

Harold Lloyd's new comedy called temporarily "The White Feather," is starting its fourth week. Country scenes are being filmed near Englewood.

Harry "Snub" Pollard is making a dog show comedy this week, in which Marie Mosquini and Noah Young support the star. Shots are being taken at Venice. "The Go-Getter," with "Snub" Pollard, had its studio preview this week and has since been shipped to New York.

"Paul" Parrott's next comedy which goes under production next week, will be a burlesque on "The Miracle Man," the scenes taking place at the rest cure.

"Trolley Troubles" is the most recently completed Gaylord Lloyd comedy.

"Old and New England," is the latest Educational-Bruce Series.

"Torchy Takes a Chance" is the newest Torchy Comedy featuring Johnny Hines scheduled for an early showing.
“HAIL THE WOMAN”

(Preview)

Thomas Ince has not recently offered the public a photodrama in any way comparable to “Hail the Woman,” his latest special, as yet unreleased; and, for that matter, neither have very many other producers whose capabilities have been so severely taxed by the story drouth through which we are passing. This screen play, however, is based upon a compelling theme which could scarcely have received more effective treatment than it is given in C. Gardner Sullivan’s scenario, or a more interesting presentation than Director John Griffith Wray has afforded it under Mr. Ince’s supervision. It is the age-old story of woman’s struggle toward the light of emancipation, of her soul’s justification, and it is exquisitely told in the heartaches and accomplishments of one Puritanical family. Daring situations are so delicately handled as to reach great beauty which is augmented by a set of excellent subtiles. Perhaps there are moments when the picture’s suspense, managed differently, might have saved it from possible criticism for drugginess, but they are really inconceivable.

Technically the production is very nearly beyond reproach and the performances react the utmost in artistry. Although the all-star cast may hardly be said to be headed by any one individual, Florence Vidor is situated in the leading sympathetic role, Judith Beresford, a girl of modern times, who is, nevertheless, submitted to persecutions for the infraction of which our half-barbaric Pilgrim Fathers are yet famous. Her rebellion and accession to her place in the sun are played humanly and sincerely, as Miss Vidor would be depended upon to portray any part while in addition she lends Judith that strange charm which in no way surrounds the consistently strong feminine spirit.

But the surprising interpretation in this drama, unusually enough, comes in the instance of Nan Higgins, an ignorant little wife whose uncoiled loyalty and instinct to love lead her finally to the death of those who are incompetent to understand and cope with Life’s realities. Every so often the misfortunes, the tragedies of womankind descend in fury to crush the most helpless of the species and in this case the inevitable subject is a forlorn little figure whose child soul, a combination of common clay and the divine, is Griffithistic in its toning. In the part Madge Bellamy, a comparatively new screen recruit, reveals unlimited dramatic possibilities establishing herself, as it were, in a moment upon the threshold of big things.

Lloyd Hughes has never given a more appealing performance than he does here as David Beresford, the secret husband of tiny Nan, whose innate good cannot ultimately be stifled by a hypocritical environment. The transition of the vasectomized boy into a man of outlook and determination is a beautiful piece of acting.

A deviation from his customary type of work is Theodore Roberts’ characterization, old Mr. Beresford, a hangover from the Puritan period. His self justified bigotry and hypocrisy are convincing even in their few lighter moments. He is unsurpassably typical as is Gertrude Claire in Mrs. Beresford, his submissive wife and servant.

Tully Marshall is a hideous apparition as the greedy “Odd jobs man” and Charles Meredith tops his own standard with his comparatively brief action in Judith’s unswerving sweetness.

BORIS KARLOFF

Muriel Frances Dana, an exceptionally clever kiddie, Edward Martindel, Vernon Kent and Mathilde Brundage complete the list of players.

Here is a filmplay that the world will love for its human interest and that the profession will admire for its artistry. Its success is assured.

“THE GRIM COMEDIAN”

California

Rita Wellman’s stories of the stage are always certain to contain colorful situations and one or more fascinatingly unconventional twists; therefore they have come to be greatly looked forward to by the more blase fans “The Grim Comedian,” Goldfish’s production of the Welman original from Beul Meredith’s scenario is no exception in this respect and is, generally speaking, superior from point of story to other of her produced cinemadramas. A clever method of introduction is an important item of presentation in that it gets away from the ordinary as, for that matter, does the body of the play.

Frank Lloyd handles the entire production as he is in the habit of doing, completely, naturally.

Marie La Monte, the chief feminine role of interest in the play, is greatly to the credit of Phoebe Hunt, an actress of unquestionable ability who is, however, a stranger to Los Angeles screens. Her anxious mother sequences are equalled by her introductory work as the careless, generous Broadway favorite who “likes to see life through plate glass windows.” She controls “The Grim Comedian’s” motivation.

Jack Holt in the opposing role, Martin, is an ideal “man about town” and does some of his most delightful work. That his action should finally include a big sacrifice episode in which he brings the house close to tears, is an agreeably uncomplicated way in which to dispose of the climax.

Gloria Hope makes a convincing ingenue of Dorothy La Monte, the convent bred daughter for whom great ambitions are undertaken; while John Harron is always on hand with the juvenile, Geoffrey Hutchins.

Bert Woodruff and Laura La Varnie offer some invaluables comedy and human interest touches to the theatre atmosphere and Joseph Dowling is excellent as Carleton Hutchins.

Mae Hopkins completes the cast. Robert Beaudine’s photography is very good.

“PLAYTHINGS OF DESTINY”

Kinema

It is perhaps fortunate for some of our authors and producers that the world does not always demand logic or even very good sense as a basis for its entertainment. Jane Murfin and Mary Timble, the creators of Louis B. Mayer’s “Playthings of Destiny” are among these, for they have created a scenario which although most improbable, depending upon a string of far fetched coincidences to unfold its plot, holds a fairly high degree of entertainment value due to several lively emotional situations, against which background the fate of a child is silhouetted. Some good Arctic and tropical scenery is utilized in the picture, but the theme of the “storm idea” which starts the story upon its journey to also precipitate the climax will be generally considered too much of a good thing, even if the tornadoes occur in opposite corners of the world.

Edwin Carewe’s direction of the Anthony Paul Kelly scenario is far from being either brilliant or subtle, but it gets through the play in an average manner.

In Geoffrey Arnold, Julia’s misjudged first husband, Herbert Rawlinson is sufficient, if not perfectly cast.

The most superior portrayal in the story however, is undoubtedly accomplished by Walter McGrail who enacts Herbert Randolph, the ambitious second husband, an admirable pairing with Oscar Salm. McGrail’s work is consistent and convincing.

Little Richard Headrick is a bewailing baby, while Grace Morse and William Mong are customarily good in Clarke, a blackmailer, and Conklin, her agent.

“Playthings of Destiny” is a First National release.

FROTHINGHAM SIGNS MONG

J. L. Frothingham has signed William V. Mong for a second year's service. Mr. Mong will be remembered for his work in "The Ten Dollar Raise" and "Pilgrims of the Night," and will shortly be seen as a Hindu heavy in J. L. Frothingham's "A Bride of the Gods," to be released by Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

WITHEY DIRECTING MACDONALD

"Domestic Relations" is the story selected for Katherine Macdonald's next Associated First National feature, production of which commenced this week at the Preferred Pictures Studios under the direction of Chet Withey.

Mr. Withey recently arrived from New York where he has produced a number of screen successes including four recent photoplays featuring Norma and Constance Talmadge.

BUTLER WITH BROWNING

Having finished "The Milky Way," by Lottie Horner and Clyde Westover, David Butler has signed with Universal to co-star in a Tod Browning production. Upon completion of this picture Mr. Butler will begin work on the next story of the series he is making under the Burston Banner.

DE LA MOTTE LOANED TO INCE

Marguerite de la Motte has been loaned by J. L. Frothingham to Thomas H. Ince, under whose supervision she will essay an important role in the production of "Gen," an original story by Bradley King.

CONTINUES WITH SENNELL

Dirt Glassmier, scenario and title writer, has been re-engaged by Mack Sennett to assist in the Literary Department of his organization.

METRO ENGAGES NORTHRUP

Harry S. Northrup has been engaged by Metro to play the leading heavy role in Alice Lake's forthcoming photoplay, "Blind Passions," pictured by June Mathis from the magazine story, "Hate."

The production will be directed by Maxwell Karger.

Little Mary Jane Irving is again working at the Brunton Studios, this time in R. B. Hampton's production of Zina Grey's "Wild Fire." Mary had an important part in J. L. Frothingham's, "A Bride of the Gods," which was recently completed.

Louise Faenza has been cast in the forthcoming James Cruze production for Famous-Players-Lasky.

Fred Gambold has been cast to play an important role in Doris May's forthcoming production for Robertson-Cole.

Frank Leigh is playing in support of Katherine Macdonald in her latest photoplay for Associated First National entitled "Domestic Relations."

SLAV ACTRESS WITH CUNEO

Zora Zorana, who recently arrived from Jugoslavia, has been added to the cast of "Silver Spurs," the Lester Cuno production, and will enact the role of a Spanish dancer.

SIGNS WITH GUINAN PRODUCTIONS

Charlie Mason, who recently finished his engagement with Goldwyn, has been engaged to play a prominent part in the Texas Guinan series now under production at the Fine Arts Studios.

MacDONALD ENGAGES CARLETON

William F. Carleton is playing the masculine lead opposite Katherine Macdonald in her current photoplay, "Domestic Relations" for Associated First National.

Daisy Smith has been added to the staff of Adeline M. Alvord as a reader.

Doris Willits is playing a part in "Silver Spurs," starring Lester Cuno.

Arthur Statter, scenario writer, has been added to the staff of writers under Lucien Hubbard at Universal City.

"Sunshine Sammy" has been cast in the latest "Paul" Farroll comedy, under production at the Hal E. Roach Studios.

Vonda Phelps, child player, recently completed her engagement in "The Jungle Goddess" serial for Selig-R-Koek.

Steven Smith has been selected as camera man for the Vitagraph production of "Blue Dell," in which Jean Calhoun will be starred.

Barbara La Marr is engaging one of the principal roles in "Domestic Relations," Katherine Macdonald's forthcoming starring vehicle.

Vincent McDermott is assisting James Aubrey in the direction of Aubrey's new comedy which is under production at Vitagraph.

Upon the completion of her present engagement with Director Paul Powell, Zasu Pitts will enact a role in James Cruze's next Lasky production.

A preview of Lloyd Hamilton's latest two-reeler, "Distress," previously announced under the title, "The Panic's On," was given at the California, Venice, recently.

Maude George, who played a part in "Foolish Wives," which Eric Von Stroheim is cutting for Universal, is enacting an important role in Fox's production of "The Count of Monte Cristo."

Frank L. Brown has been appointed manager of the Liberty Theatre in Long Beach, California, one of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., houses. Brown was formerly manager of the Superba Theatre in Los Angeles.

Victor Gibson has been signed as scenario editor for the Morante Producing Company at the Balboa Studios in Long Beach. George Cheeseman is the star and is being featured in a series of Northwest Mounted Police stories.

The Screen Writers' Forum

To the thoughtful writer, the unavoidable comparison of screen plays to printed literature must appear decidedly unfair; for not only must the relative ages of the two mediums of expression be considered, but it must be kept in mind that few stage plays —in the enacting—approach the master works of novelists or even short story writers, in subtlety, breadth or depth.

The Photoplay was created and inflamed for some time past because of the conventional happy endings to almost all photoplays, and because of the trite themes and plots employed.

Now, as a screen play or a stage play both demand, for a complete expression, an interpretation by a cast of players, a director and a technical staff. It seems only reasonable that comparisons should be made in this field rather than that the book-photoplay controversy should be prolonged.

It may be reasonably assumed that the printed word can convey subtler, deeper and more complex thought than any other human conception, as for instance, with the exception of music. A book forms a direct contact with its reader; however, while a stage play or screen play does not. In other words, that face of a photoplay scenario or screentunity may never come to light, on account of a wretched interpretation—which is irrevocably unfortunate, as a story is usually scarcely intelligible. A play may, for instance, seem far different when enacted by a first rate cast than when enacted by an ordinary stock company.

It is the boast of devotees of the stage that not only has the stage play achieved more dignity and distinction at its high water marks than the photoplay, but that the stage as a medium of art expression possesses far more scope than the screen.
This last contention is probably based on the high regard for the emotional possibilities of the human voice.

It is undeniable true that the finest and noblest stage plays, extending over a period of several centuries are vastly superior to any photoplay thus far evolved—in point of beauty and profundity. But it is not so certain that the stage is the subier or higher medium. In fact, the screen is as akin to printed literature; it depends on the reaction of one sense only, making for concentration in this respect. Furthermore, the subtitle is of course a borrowing from literature—and ideas can be printed, even in subtitles, that would sound extravagant or unnatural if spoken; I refer to poetic, romantic and philosophical ideas. Most of all, however, the advantage of the screen over the stage is obviously in the overcoming of the limitations of space; the world is the movie stage, in all truth, and the sense of artificiality which pervades the stage—on account of drops, painted scenery, etc.—is not characteristic of the screen.

The motion picture has been accused of renting its case on its possibilities. Well, what of it? What would happen to the stage if it were hampered by the many economic determinants affecting the screen? But let us take a few specific cases of stories which were photoplay productions and photographed which found expression on the stage and also on the screen.

No one but an utterly bigoted fool would affirm that every version of "The Miracle Man" even approached the screen story in grandeur and significance. I for one don’t think Mr. Packard’s novel, to begin with, had any of the glorious sweeps which so sublimated and purified the screen play.

"Mr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" on the screen was a far more vividly sinister and lifeplumbing document than it was on the stage.

I doubt if any stage version of "Dynasty" ever approached the German screen version which featured Pola Negri.

Of course there are even a greater number of excellent stage plays which were badly botched in the screen— but this is refusal to sistle and diastole, day and night, summer and winter. Sustained, fixed heroism or villainy is unthinkable.

Aside from moral considerations—considerations which lose all meaning to a higher type of person—there are artistic considerations: Does a villain always look so different from a hero? Does he ever stroke dark, sly mischief with the bearing of a pseudo Greek God or an exalted Schubert chorus man? So all rubes say "Wal, I swan," and wear straw behind their ears? So all young girls behave like screen and stage ingenues? The answer is obvious.

Therefore, the need for finer distinctions, for individual characterization. At any rate, it is seldom in ordinary circumstances that heroes or villains are made. Two men, both well educated and prepossessing, may adhere to a similar code of ethics. They may both be a combination of saint and sinner—i.e., saint and sinner according to Occidental traditions, usage, popular theology; in the ultimate sense, they are both just human.

Only in a crisis, in an exceptional situation, will one of the two prove the daring, brave exceptional man—and therefore the hero.

True, it is harder for an audience to follow individualization, running as it does from the known to the unknown, than to follow "type." But the screen writer with artistic ideals is concerned with his own actions, his own integrity—and not with reactions. He should not be conscious of the eventual audience; no genuine artist is.
And only as a creative artist is he spared among photodramatists will the motion picture rise to its destined grandeur.

Fontaine La Rue has signed with Universal.

Jacqueline Logan has signed a long term contract with Goldwyn.

Evelyn Selbie is interpreting an important role in "Silver Spurs," Lester Cuneo’s latest starring picture.

Mollie Thompson is enacting an important role in "The White Feather," starring Harold Lloyd.

Violet Schramm is playing the leading role in "Daddy Long Legs," with the Wilkes Stock Company in Salt Lake City.

C. L. (Cliff) Davidson has been engaged to support William Fairbanks in his forthcoming production under the direction of Bob McKenzie.

Charles Stevenson and Wallace Howe are cast in the current Harold Lloyd comedy, the working title of which is "The White Feather."

Doris Willet and Lillian Warde have been drawn to enact important parts in "Silver Spurs," starring Lester Cuneo, under production at the Warner Bros. Studios.

Jack Cohn, pioneer producer, now making the Hallroom Boys Comedies, featuring Sid Smith, and Screen Snapshots, arrived in California recently to start filming new series of Hallroom Boys Comedies. "The Matinee Idol," lately completed, has been shipped to the New York offices.

CARRIE DAUMERY

not because of the inferiority of the screen as a medium, but because of inferiority of treatment—by less able and intelligent directors, players and technicians.

Candidly, if the so-called New York successes which reach Los Angeles are any criterion, I fail to see the marked superiority of current plays over current films. For instance, the happy ending bugabo is just as much in evidence in stage plays as it is in screen plays.

The photoplay will progress artistically and intrinsically—perhaps the two terms are synonymous—when the screen writer may create "individuals" instead of "types." Few human beings, especially interesting human beings—can be adequately represented by a dominating characteristic. Realism will advance when the fundamental truth is recognized, that the hero is fifty per cent villian and the villian fifty per cent hero. Within the scope of a single photoplay, it would not be conducive to good drama to endow one's characters in such equalized proportions, but it would be intensely human to make the villian a villian in relation to his environtment and circumstances. I.e., the code of his immediate neighbors, friends, family and in comparison (page Einstein) to the higher qualities manifest in the hero. Getting to the facts of life, one finds that the hero of today was the cad of yesterday—and perhaps tomorrow? Here again Nature's law of periodicity comes into play: flux and

UNIVERSAL DIRECTOR ATTACHED

Stuart Paton, Universal director for the Harry Carey Company, was sued and suffered an attachment of salary last week for the non-payment of advertising accounts with CAMERA! The action taken resulted in the settlement of the claim and all costs with Constable Charles S. Thomas.

ENGLISH STAR VISITS MARSHALL NEILAN STUDIO

Alma Taylor, British picture star and known as “the Mary Pickford of England,” visited recently the Marshall Neilan studios. Accompanied by Cecil Hepworth, English producer and William Reed, one of the executives of the Hepworth company, Miss Taylor took a ride in the Neilan pony “blipup.”

The English visitors met various Neilan players including Wesley Barry, Frank O’Connor, John Jasper, Tully Marshall, Marion Fairfax, Claire McDowell, Clara Horton, David Kesson and others, and watched Mr. Neilan direct a number of scenes for “Penrod,” in which no grown-ups appeared.

FAIRBANKS AND PICKFORD TO CO-STAR

Announcement that Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks will co-star in a picture which they are now making plans to produce in England, has just been made by A. C. Berman, general manager of the United Artists’ Corporation. Work on the picture is to start early in January, it is expected.

MARYON AYE WINS PRIZE

With the return from England of Bert Levy, artist from the New York Hippodrome, comes the news that a series of twelve studies made by Mr. Levy of Maryon Aye, now co-starring in “Cactus Frontiers” with Bob Reeves, took first honors at the London Annual Art Exhibit.

NEW MANAGER FOR HIPPODROME

Adolph Ramish, new owner of the Hippodrome Theatre, has engaged Albert Watson from San Francisco as manager. Mr. Watson was recently booking manager for the Bert Levy booking offices in San Francisco.

“My Boy” New York Premiere

“Jackie Coogan’s recently completed starring vehicle, “My Boy,” will have its first presentation at the Plaza Hotel, New York City. The proceeds are to be given to charity.

The picture will be shown on Broadway, New York, immediately after its social debut, national distribution following.

TO TOUR CONTINENT

Jean I Iavez, scenario writer for Harold Lloyd, will make an European trip on the completion of Lloyd’s present comedy, “The White Feather.” The tour includes a sojourn in France, Italy and Belgium.

Maryland Morne, who recently completed the role of Jane McKay in R. A. Walsh’s production of Peter B. Kyne’s “Kindred of the Dust,” for First National release, is now taking a short rest.

STORK VISITS BOBBY

Bobby Vernon, Christie comedy star, and Mrs. Vernon are receiving felicitations upon the birth of a daughter.

HOLLYWOOD HIGHLY RESPECTED SAYS LESSER

Sol Lesser, of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., now in New York City where he is arranging distribution for Jackie Coogan productions, and at the same time attending the executive meetings of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., writes:

“The general theory that New York regards Hollywood and its cinema industry in a bad light is absolutely untrue. In my two weeks in New York, I have thus far heard nothing but good words about cinema Hollywood. The rumors that New Yorkers were circulating stories that were harmful to the reputation of the West Coast picture colony are also false. Hollywood has always been looked upon with a great deal of respect from the eastern metropolis and that feeling still exists.”

NORMAND BIRTHDAY PARTY

Mabel Normand was tendered a surprise birthday party recently by friends including Mack Sennett, William D. Taylor, Mrs. Catherine Sennett, mother of the producer, Fay Borden, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Asher, Dick Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Mueller and John Grey.

YACHTING CRUISE

On completion of the production he is now directing at the Ince Studios, John Gately Wray expects to take a yachting cruise down the coast of Mexico and Central America.

Michael Gore, president of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., has returned to Los Angeles from a business trip to New York.

Charles Chaplin has gone for an outing trip into the California mountains with a party of friends.

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE

Alfred E. Green

We know of no modern picture director whose rise on the ladder of fame has been more consistent than has Al Green’s, the man who was largely responsible for the production of “Little Lord Fauntleroy” and “Through the Back Door,” and who is at the present time directing a special play-op for Goldwyn.

Commercing in the ranks at the old Selig Studio, Green passed through the assistant director’s stage and gradually into full fledged directorship on that renowned lot, only to proceed to Fox, Goldwyn and other big organizations in the same capacity.

Today it is rumored that he has signed a long term contract with one of our Hollywood outfits where he will start work upon the completion of “Sent For—Out,” the Rupert Hughes story, with which he is now engaged.

ROSE ROSANOVA

Madame Rose Rosanova, Russian player, well-known to New York, is doing one of the biggest screen roles of her career for the Goldwyn company. It is “Anna,” the mother in “Hungry Hearts.”

The actress was personally selected to play the role, by the author, Anzia Yezierska, who came into prominence a year or so ago, with her startling stories of Russian immigrant life. Yezierska believes Madame Rosanova to be the living impersonation of the mother character, as does H. Mason Hooper, the picture’s director.

Madame Rosanova recently finished “Just Around the Corner,” an all-star cast picture made by the Cosmopolitan Productions, and the release of this picture will occur shortly before the completion of “Hungry Hearts.” Other roles of the actress have been the mother part in “Resurrection” and “Redemption,” and leading roles in “The Power of Darkness,” “The Kreutzer Sonata,” etc.

BETWEEN PICTURES VACATION

Lige Conley has gone to the mountains for a short vacation. He will play the featured role in Jack White’s next comedy for Educational, as yet untitled.

TO OFFICIATE AT TIA JUANA

Tod Sloan, world famous jockey, who is enacting a prominent role in Benjamin B. Hampton’s latest all-star production, “Wildfire,” will go to Tia Juana presently, where he will act as one of the starting judges at a 125-day race to be held there beginning Thanksgiving.

Rupert Grieve, now working at Vitagraph, is a newcomer here, having arrived from Australia but recently.

The entire film colony is mourning the death of Willis Robards, who passed on suddenly two weeks ago. No profession forgives him who has been to it what this capable actor was to ours.

PRINTING FIRST NATIONAL ATTRACTIONS

Waterson R. Rothacker, president of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company of Chicago and Los Angeles, arrived here lately from Chicago. While in town, Mr. Rothacker will perfect the coordination of the Los Angeles and Chicago plants.

The Rothacker Film Mfg. Co. has made prints from the negatives of the following Associated First National attractions:

- Richard Barthelmess' "To Tell the Truth, David."
- Marshall Neilan's "Bits of Life."
- Charles Chaplin's "The Idle Class."
- Anita Stewart's "The Invisible Fear."
- Carter De Haven's "My Lady Friends."
- "Molly O."
- "Heartbalm."
- "Love and Doughnuts."
- "Be Reasonable."
- H. O. Davis' "The Silent Call."
- Charles Ray's "R. S. V. P."
- J. L. Frothingham's "A Bride of the Gods."

It is Mr. Rothacker's intention to establish a London developing and printing plant, which, like his plants in Los Angeles and Chicago, will develop and print many of the productions released through Associated First National Pictures, Inc. After work has begun on the Los Angeles plant, Mr. Rothacker will conclude arrangements for the erection of a New York laboratory.

RICHARD WALTON TULLY TO ARRIVE SHORTLY

Three plays, two of them stage successes by Richard Walton Tully, are to be filmed here shortly: "The Masquerader," which will star Guy Bates Post; "Omar, the Tentmaker," and "The Flame." The productions probably will be released by Associated First National.

Mr. Tully expects to arrive in California by December 1st to supervise the starting of the films. James Young will direct the first picture.

Some months ago Mr. Tully made plans for the filming of "Omar, the Tentmaker," which failed to mature at that time. "The Flame" will probably be the last of the series to be filmed. The pictures will be made at the United Studios.

LOWRY TO MAKE NEW SERIES

Gene Lowry and W. C. Tuttle have formed a company to produce a series of twelve two-reelers from the book, "Reddy Brant," which has the endorsement of the National Committee of the Boy Scouts. Production will begin within the next week.

COMPLETES CAST

F. Richard (Dick) Jones, production manager of the Mack Sennett Comedies, has selected his cast for Mabel Normand's second starring vehicle, to be distributed by the Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

Irving Cummings and players have gone to Yosemite Valley to film the first snowfall of the season for Mr. Cummings' current Northwest Mountie Police drama.

"The Land of the Lost" is the title of a Country Life Cooper story, which will be brought to the screen with Harry Carey in the stellar characterization.

Pola Negri plans to visit the United States soon.

HERBERT FORTIER

AT SAN MATEO

Supported by Draga, a mystery star, Monroee Salisbury, directed by Jacques Jacciard, began work this week at Pacific Studios on "The Great Alone," by James Caldwell, a San Francisco newspaper man.

This is the first of a series of five feature pictures starring Salisbury which are being made for West Coast Films under the supervision of Isadore Bernstein.

Sunset Comedies are finishing number two of a series of fourteen two-reelers starring Hal Stephens supported by Kathleen Emerson being made for the Producers Surety Corporation. Harry Edwards is directing.

"ARROW" NOTES

J. S. Jossey, special representative of the Arrow Film Corporation, has returned to the New York office after three months on the road in the interests of the company. Mr. Jossey visited the Central and Middle Western States.

Director Carl Henderson has completed "The Girl from Porcpine," the second James Oliver Curwood picture for Pine Tree Pictures, Inc. Faire Binney and Buster Collier are featured.

Grace Davison, star of the J. C. G. Features, will make a number of personal appearances in New York and Brooklyn in connection with the showing of her picture, "Love, Hate and a Woman." This is the first of a series of four pictures which are being made for "Arrow" and distributed in New York by J. E. Chadwick's organization, The Merit Film Company.

McConville and Patten, exchange men from Boston, Mass., contracted for "Nan of the North" and "Watching Eyes," to be released through New England.

Leigh Wyant has written an original story which will be an early Realart production.

HAMILTON-WHITE

A cast is being assembled to support Lloyd Hamilton in the fifth of his series of Mermaid Comedies for Educational. Hugh Fay will direct.

Jack White, supervising director, is working in collaboration with Archie Mayo and Lloyd Bacon, the company's scenario writers, on the fourth of his series of two-reel comedies for Educational, which is expected to enter production shortly at the Bronton Studios.

AT BRONTON

Chester Bennett, with his company, left this week for Big Bear where exteriors will be taken for Mr. Bennett's new picture, the title of which has not yet been announced. Jane Novak is starred.

"The Man Who Smiled," J. L. Frothingham's third production for Associated First National, will be completed this week. This picture features an all-star cast the principal roles being played by Marcia Manon, William V. Mong and Mary Wynn.

Little Jackie Coogan is expected to start a new picture presently under the direction of Jerome Storm.

The Nazimova company has been busy taking scenes which are to be shot in the next few weeks around Los Angeles for "The Sheik," starring Olga Baclanova, and "The Colleen Bawn," starring Alla Nazimova. Nazimova's first production for United Artists, Henrik Ibsen's, "A Doll's House," Charles Bryant directing.

AT LASKY'S

William de Mille is expected next week when he will begin preparations for his new picture, as yet untitled. "The Storm," by Clara Beranger. The leading roles will be interpreted by Agnes Ayres and Jack Holt. Further details will be announced on the arrival of Mr. de Mille.

"Saturday Night," Cecil de Mille's latest production, is being cut and assembled.

George Melford is still at work on "Moran of the Lady Letty," which features Dorothy Dalton with Rudolph Valentino in the male lead.

Wallace Reid is scheduled to begin work Dec. 5th on a new automobile story by Byron Morgan—an original story for which he is also writing the scenario. The title is "Across the Continent," and Philip E. Rosen will again direct Mr. Reid.

"While Satan Sleeps" is nearing its conclusion. Jack Holt is the star of this offering which is directed by Joseph Henabery. November 21st is the date set for the starting of William D. Taylor's production, temporarily titled "The Noose," in which Betty Compson will be starred.

GOLDWYN CUTTING THREE PICTURES

Three productions have been finished at the Goldwyn Studios, Culver City, Calif., and are being cut and titled. They are "The Octave of Claudius," by Barry Pain, featuring Jacqueline Logan and Lou Chanev, "The City Pedlar," by Jules Josephson, with Cullen Landis and Patsy Ruth Miller, and "What He the Cook," Gouverneur Morris' fantasy, with Jack Abbe and Winter Bros.

STAGE MELODRAMA FOR HARRY CAREY

Universal announces the purchase of the picture rights to "Wildfire," and "The Realart," Landon McCormick's stage melodrama. It will be used as a vehicle for Harry Carey.

Claire Adams, Benj. B. Hampton's star, is initiating her 15-year old sister into film land. The younger Miss Adams recently arrived from New York with her mother, and applies for the first time in "Wildfire," Benj. B. Hampton's latest photodramatization of a Zane Grey novel, in which Claire Adams has the leading role.

"Enchantment" with Marion Davies will be the attraction at Grauman's Million Dollar next week of November 21st, while George Melford's "The Sheik," co-starring Agnes Ayres and Rudolph Valentino, opens its fourth week at Grauman's Rialto, Sunday, the 20th.

NEW PARAMOUNT HOME FOR “FRISCO”
Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, left for San Francisco recently to attend the opening of the new Granada Theatre in that city. This new house will offer Paramount pictures.

MADE HONORARY CAPTAIN
Charles Eyton, general manager of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in the West, has received word from Mrs. Eytis, (Kathryn Williams), who is now making a personal appearance throughout the United States, that in Minneapolis recently she was made Honorary Captain of the Sixth Minnesota Infantry.

Florence Fisher, Cara Lee and Zellie Tillbury are among those cast in “A Doll’s House,” Nazimova’s next starring vehicle.

Bruce Guegl, two-year-old player, has an important role in J. L. Frothingham’s production, “The Man Who Smiled,” featuring Marcia Mather and William V. Mong.

Billy Bevan of Mack Sennett Comedies, appeared a few days ago before Judge Benjamin F. Bledsoe, in the district court of Los Angeles, to receive his final naturalization papers. Mr. Bevan is a product of Australia and came to the States ten years ago.

Do you believe in Oil Leases?
If so, we offer you the best proposition

Have you let opportunities pass you? If so, you yourself know the reason.
We offer you a speculative opportunity of unusual merit, believing that you wish, no doubt, to make more money.
We emphasize the fact you cannot afford to let this proposition go unnoticed. A two-cent stamp or a personal interview will give you information that, if you have a little money and nerve, will result in returns financially, that will not doubt offset a lot of your past losses.
Remember the fellow who has made the Big Money, did not make it in stocks, but in owning the lease.

“MISS LULU BETT”
Grauman’s

If there is a phase of American domestic life that is almost totally neglected in our fiction, it is, perhaps, that unpleasant and most generally known one having to do with tedious, pointless “family rowing,” but Zona Gale has mercilessly dragged the skeleton out of the public’s closet in her realistic story, “Miss Lulu Bett” and has presented the horrible but foolish problem in her famously efficient manner. In cinematicizing “Miss Lulu Bett” from Clara Beranger’s continuity, William de Mille has used the keenest of insight in the subject’s treatment and the result is a comedy drama rendered universally comprehensible by the fact that it is within the experience of ninety per cent of the audience.

Lois Wilson in the title role does some of her cleverest characterizing. The simplicity of this actress’ less lovely women is responsible for their marked and otherwise unexplainable charm. Here she is seen as a dependent, slaving sister and aunt in the home of others.

Milton Sills is able to dispatch the male lead, Cornish, a village school teacher, correctly with little outlay of effort, while Theodore Roberts and Clarence Burton each offer carefully done opposition with comedy highlights, as the Deacon brothers, Dwight and Ninion. The former, a blustering tyrant with, however, a tendency to “backwater” is a no more common type than the latter, an uneducated wanderer with little sense of responsibility or honor.

Mabel Van Buren, Helen Ferguson and May Giraci are all splendid choices for Dwight’s wife and daughters. They do some unusual teamwork.

Ethel Wales is a riot as Grandma Bett, an old lady with “curly hair” who with Taylor Grimes completes the cast.

Cinematographer Guy Wilkey has some excellent work to his credit in this Lasky production.

“A TRIP TO PARADISE”
Loew’s

Franz Molnar’s stage play, “Lilom,” has been scenarized by June Mathis, retitled “A Trip to Paradise,” and serves Bert Lytell as the starring vehicle which Metro releases this week at the opening of Lowe’s State Theatre. It is an exceedingly human little photoplay incorporating one rather startling episode which has been given episode a little better than mediocre production by Maxwell Karger. If it has nothing to attract intense interest—it is not alone. There are many other pictures.

The star’s characterization of Curley Flynn, an amusement park “Barker,” is up to his high standard throughout and is, of course, the excuse for the picture. Anyway, Lytell’s personality is not the kind to be easily “aped” and he stands pretty much alone, especially in comedy.

Virginia Valli is truly delightful as the “regular” girl, Nora O’Brian, whom Curley marries. The role is one of those “simple” affairs which is so excessively “difficult” for many of our experienced ingenues to handle.

Eunice Vin Moore’s interpretation of the character heavy, widow Boland, the proprietress of a roller coaster beach concession, is played with cleverness; and Victory Bateman could not have been placed better than she is in Mrs. Smiley, a female photographer who serves in the capacity of Nora’s unpleasant aunt.

Nigel de Bruller is impressively ethereal as the Heavenly Judge, while Brinley Shaw and Eva Gordon are also included in the cast of this picture, which was well photographed by Arthur Martineilli.

instance of copyright accorded directly to an author. We find the first copyright in GER-cy, issued at Nuremberg, in 1501. In England, the first privilege of this nature was reserved unto Richard Pynson, the King's Printer, in 1518.

The advent of printing gave a new impetus to the discovery of America and the Reformation. This period was marked by a general ferment throughout Europe, a manifestation both intellectual and religious. The variety and frequency of the danger of dissemination of new ideas by the press, exercised the bestowal of copyright in fashion as to act as a censorship, enabling them to prohibit publications which they elected to regard as treasonable or heretical. The avowed purpose of the English Wolverton's Company in England, chartered in 1556, was to prevent the propagation of the Protestant reformation.

Accordingly, at the outset, copyright privilege was a means of control, subject to the caprice of those in power. Its subsequent development into a legal right, secured by simple formality of registration and deposit, was slow in evolution.

The Statute of Anne, enacted in England in the Eighth year of the reign of Queen Anne, was the first act of the British Parliament granting copyright. This statute, of which Swift was the putative author, originally intended to preserve and further the interests of authors. However, it hardly had the effect of greatly curtailing his rights. As finally construed, the author's rights were limited to the express terms of the statute, abolishing the conception of perpetuity in copyright, which now exists in Guatemala, Mexico and Venezuela alone.

Until the Revolution, in France the author's rights were a subject of license. In 1791 was enacted the first French copyright law, reserving unto the dramatists exclusive right to exploit his plays upon the stage. This right was not acquired by English playwrights until 1833, and American dramatists remained without this protection until 1851.

Those "Spellers" whose "Spelling" was first to benefit thereby, must be credited for the introduction of copyright legislation in the United States. Webster travelled from Smith's office, urging the necessity of copyright protection. As a result of his labors, a copyright act was passed in Connecticut in 1785, followed by the Massachusetts law two years later, that of Virginia in 1785, and those of New York and New Jersey in 1786. The Federal Statute of 1790, however, obviated the need of further state legislation in this behalf. The scope of this statute has since been enlarged by repeated amendment. The act now in force in the United States is that of 1909, as amended by the acts of 1912, 1913 and 1914.

The Convention of Berne, finally ratified in 1887, extended to the author of works protected in any member country, equal rights in other member states, without observation of any formality, or deposit of copies in such foreign states. Legislation of this International Copyright Union, numbering among its members most of the great powers of the world, has been closely followed in the Buenos Aires Convention of the Pan American Union, an international body which will be the next Constance Binney offering production on which will start presently.

Ethel Broadhurst, Mark Jones and George Rowe are playing in support of "Paul," Parrott in his forthcoming comedy, a burlesque on "The Miracle Man."

J. H. Howell has been engaged as technical director for Rex Ingram. Mr. Howell previously served in the same capacity with Mary Pickford in "Little Lord Fauntleroy."

Edward Jobson, recently with Alice Lake in "The Kiss," is now playing a part in Herbert Jeffers’ new Universal picture, "Creco."

Jack Hoxie and his company have left for Victoryville to film exterior scenes for "Under Orders," the star’s next picture under the direction of Roy Clements.

Charlotte Woods, who appears in Al Green’s latest picture for Goldwyn, wants to know why the youthful female is so often depicted on the screen as a diminutive, sickly looking flapper. Maybe that’s because Charlotte is an athletically inclined five-foot-five-incher herself.

Victory Bateman has been given a part in Bert Lytell’s new picture, "Tommy Carteret," which Bayard Veiller is directing. This will be Miss Bateman’s second appearance in support of Mr. Lytell, her first being "A Trip to Paradise," one of Mr. Lytell’s most recent productions.

"The Battle of Jutland," the motion picture that has been in preparation in England since the close of the war, has been brought to the United States by Educational Film Exchanges and will soon be released for showing in this country. E. R. Russell of London has just arrived in the United States to supervise the first American presentation of the film.

Civic pride is responsible for it. I'm a firm believer in the future of Los Angeles. I want to take my part in the progress of this community, and want to grow up with it.

I feel that there is a great opportunity for a thoroughly experienced authority to advise and assist the well-dressed men of this city in the selection of their Evening Clothes.

To put into execution the many ideas that I have had in mind for some time, I have severed all previous connections, and take pleasure in announcing the opening of my Full Dress and Tuxedo Shop on the third floor of Loew's State Building, Broadway at Seventh.
Courtesy

It would seem that in a profession which perhaps harbors the greatest number of "I know him when" chirpers ever assembled, more minds would consider each and every angle of the way to success in and progress with their calling. Particularly should those who have ascended in it, either a little or a great way, be jealous of their accomplishments to the extent of guarding against retrogression into this large unhappy class which has "missed" and as a group of failures, has been forced to confine its self expression to reminiscence.

Artists, however, are unimaginably careless, which probably accounts for the fact that there is much genius, one-time recognized genius, to be found among the hang-over and outcasts from the moving picture industry today. Strict attention to business, good judgment and a courteous viewpoint are among the requirements whose lack in the makeup of so many, have entailed unnecessary grief. Nothing could be more tragic than one's inability to justify and protect his talent.

An acquaintance inadvertently stumbled onto the explanation of a vital phase of this situation for us last week. Once a studio manager of considerable local renown, he is today looking for a position as casting director, efficiency expert or publicist. About a Hollywood producer to whom he had applied in vain for a situation he was heard to remark: "Times have rather changed—four years ago I kicked that fellow off of my lot. Perhaps he remembers." Yes, we'll wager that this financially safe, artistically made picture man, does and will remember, a recollection which can hardly benefit our friend professionally. Hurts are borne no more easily when one is on the crest of the wave, but there are possibilities for retaliation from such a vantage.

Indulgence in crudeness and discourtesy are quickly balanced against one in a field that, being governed to a great extent by pull, is therefore undergoing continual shifts in which breath-taking advances and reverses are effected with little thought. We have in mind a dozen cases to prove our point forwards and back again.

For instance there is the incident of a woman star who was disinterestedly kind to an extra boy in the pioneer days. When the established company which engaged them both suspended activities the youngster was scarcely accommodated. He knew other studios and was on the upward path. He lost track of the old time star, but two years later when filling an official capacity he discovered that she was suffering materially for the lack of engagement by a new generation of screen executives. It was the young man's chance to repay former kindnesses with a word which led to the first part. It was only human to speak it and the woman is a celebrity again. The law of compensation is inevitable.

As we sit writing this plea for the climber to "get on to himself," to learn the art of compensation and courtesy, if not for the merit then for the diplomacy in the practice, a "full dress boy" who has filled out the atmosphere of a hundred productions passes our window. He is at work for perhaps a ten dollar check at a nearby studio. What assistant, director or producer himself, will be rude to the lad this afternoon? Someone may today term him a "rotten actor," clumsy, etc. Pathetic? Not very! In the checkbook of this inordinately stupid young man appears a balance lately inherited which will make him a future corporation president. Almost funny, isn't it, to imagine his hundreds of thousands of good picture dollars being "cussed" about a set by one or many who would mortgage years to be able to invest them for the week but human "full dress," one of twenty in this week's comedy? Seriously, if inelegantly—"You never can tell"—but there is after all a safe end. We'd better all play it.

Unintelligent?

No matter how one views the extract from "The Summons," a legal periodical, below printed (and many of us will resent its near-insolence with good cause), it is yet interesting and broadening for us to hear the other man's angle. And although we feel that, speaking generally, its sentiment is unfair to our picture writers and producers, there are unquestionably those who would do well to take it to heart. The only difficulty is that those who need it will probably find difficulty in recognizing the fact.

"Although there is no doubt that most of the motion pictures do everything to emphasize sex matters, still a moral censorship under the law may not be desirable. But can any thoughtful person doubt that an intellectual censorship is needed? Enjoyment of the wonderful art of the screen is nowadays often precluded to one who possesses and respects a spark of intellectual dignity. But that is not a legal question."
BLACKTON COMPLETES NATURAL COLOR FILM

Lady Diana Manners, daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Rutland, heads a cast of all-star artists, among whom may be mentioned: Gerald Lawrence, Alice Crawford, Cecil Humphreys, Lennox Pawle, William Luff, Flora le Breton, Victor Mclaglen, Elizabeth Beersbom, Lois Sturt, Tom Heselwood, Fred Wright, and the producer's two children, Violet Virginia and Charles Stuart Blackton.

While "The Glorious Adventure" has an historical background, the story is an original one, the scenario for which was written by Felix Orman, formerly of New York.

CENSORS BAR "THE NIGHT ROSE"

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of New York recently heard the first appeal from a decision by the Motion Picture Commission of New York rejecting a film in its entirety on the ground of immorality. The case is "The Night Rose," a Goldwyn film, featuring Lon Chaney. The film was made a year before the commission was created. The Appellate Division reserved decision in the case and is expected to decide it in about two weeks. Gabriel L. Hess appeared for Goldwyn and Third Deputy Attorney General Rose for the Commission.

ADDITIONAL PRODUCTION COMPANIES IN BAY CITY

The Paul Gerson Pictures Corp. has made plans for the establishment of several additional units at the Pacific Studios, where the company works in San Francisco.

INGRAM TO MAKE FILM SPECTACLE

Marcus Loew, president of Metro, is perfecting plans to send Rex Ingram abroad to make a film spectacle, probably based on one of Sir Walter Scott's novels.

ON LAST OF SERIES

The Charles R. Seiling Production, Inc., has just completed the fifth picture of its western series, and preparations are being made for the sixth and last of this series. The story has been written by Alexander J. McClaren of the Photoplayswrights League.

COMPLETES ANOTHER

Irving Cummings has completed "Campbell of the Mounted," the fourth of his series of twenty-four Maple Leaf specials. The cast includes Norris Johnston, Robert Walker, "Bob" Elliot and Milton Brown.

"Nick" Hatton and his company are at Tamecula making scenes for "Black Ranch," the third of Hatton's pictures for Prairie Productions.

"Silas Marner," produced by Frank P. Donovan, was shown at the Hotel Plaza, New York City, recently.

BIG ITALIAN FEATURE

Count Montebello of Rome, producer of the spectacular feature based on the love tragedy of Dante and Beatrice, is expected to sail shortly for America bringing with him a print of his feature.

RECENT PLAYGOERS RELEASE

"Tropical Love," directed by Ralph Ince, is a Playgoers feature released recently. The star is Ruth Clifford, and Reginald Denny plays the male lead. Others in the cast are Fred Turner, Huntington Gordon, Ernest Hilliard, Margaret Fitzroy, Paul Doucet, Catherine Spencer, Carl Azzell and Margaret Seddon.

Louis Burston has about completed the cutting of "The Milky Way," by Lottie Horner and Clyde Westover. David Butler will return to the Burston Studio shortly to begin work on "According to Hoyle," also by Miss Horner and Mr. Westover.

AT UNIVERSAL

Marie Prevost will impersonate shortly the title role of "The Dangerous Little Demon," from the story by Mildred Considine, wife of original stories for the screen.

Hoot Gibson is making the final scenes for "Headin' West," his latest western feature. William Craft is directing. Louise Tearne is playing opposite the cowboy star.

"Cheated Hearts," filmed as a starring vehicle for Herbert Rawlinson under its original title of "Barry Gordon," has been scheduled for release as a special attraction on December 12th. The production was filmed under the direction of Hobart Henley from the novel by William P. Payson. Henley is now guiding the star through "Barney," originally called "Mailoy Compendor." Ethel Reed is starring in a series of short reel western dramas before production begins on "With Stanley in Africa," a serial based upon the exploits of the famous explorer.

Harry Carey has finished "Man to Man," and has started on a vacation. Mr. Carey is expected to begin work shortly on "The Land of the Lost," a Courtney Kylo cooperative story.

FIRST NATIONAL NOTES

"White Faith," by William Dudley Pelly, which is shortly to make its appearance in several form in one of the leading magazines, has been selected as the next starring vehicle for Hope Hampton, First National star, who recently completed "Star Dust." Clarence L. Brown has been engaged to direct the forthcoming production. Assisting Mr. Brown will be John B. Hylund and Russell E. Hall. Technical direction will be supervised by Ben Carre, while the camera work will be in the hands of Alfred Orteigh.

Constance Talmadge expects to start work presently on her next picture, "The Divorcee," under Sidney Franklin's direction. Kenneth Harlan and Harrison Ford have been chosen to enact the two leading male roles.

Buster Keaton has started his fifth comedy, as yet untitled, which recently completed editing of "The Paleface." Charlie Chaplin will start work on his next comedy for First National release in a few days.

The title of Andrew J. Callaghorn's attraction, formerly "Woman and Superman," has been changed to "All for a Woman." The production will be released by Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

The Blockhead," third of a series of Mack Sennett two-reel comedies, starring Billy Bevan, with Mildred June in the leading feminine role, and directed by Roy Del Ruth, is now well under way at the Sennett studios.

PREPARING SECOND

Selick and Rork announce that work has been started on their second all-star production, "Debonnaire," by William Farguhar Leon. Lois SMEe will play the title role. Bernard McConville is now engaged in preparing the script. Their first independent production, "The Rosary," directed by Tony Storace and produced by Associated First National Exhibitors, Inc. "BITS OF LIFE"

Kinema

Marshall Neilan repaves himself the screen's most daring producer with his presentation of "Bits of Life," an innovation in the photoplay line. Advertised as a cinema magazine, it is comprised of four short stories by popular authors and Neilan himself, which have been produced in something over one reel apiece, and which are not conveniently redone. The picture quite naturally cannot be judged by any of the accepted standards for screen material but the four incidents are, on the whole, well handled even though their continuity and cutting are jerkily accomplished. The three heavy dramatic subjects and the surprise finish comedy which tops them off will probably prove highly entertaining to the average audience. All sorts of deviations are thrilling—once.

The first story, taken from Popular Magazine is "The Sad Samaritan," which is chiefly interesting for the exceptionally able work of Rockcliffe Fellowes in the title role. Wesley Barry plays Fellowes's part as a child.

The second episode from "The Man Who Heard Everything" in "Smart Set" has many well placed human interest touches although it is a trifle rushed for a tragedy. Frederick Burton plays the principal role here.

"Hop," a Saturday Evening Post selection is perhaps the most enthralling of the tales due to the fascination of things Oriental. Lon Chaney is featured in it, enacting a hypocritical dope dealer whose instincts are fundamentally pagan. Anna May Wong, an attractive little Chinawoman who has often been seen in bits, is provided here with an opportunity to really act and let it be announced that she puts it over in a style that would be highly commendable in our more emotional western girls. We have a great desire to see Anna May again.

In the last story, an original, and perhaps the one entirely foolish one of the lot (apologies to the author, Mr. Neilan) appear John Murray, George Beery, and Edythe Chapman in straight.

James Flood and James Scully assisted Neilan in the direction of "Bits of Life," which was photographed by David Rosson and Wray June.

"THE MAN FROM LOST RIVER"

California

A rather simple little Katharine Newlin Burt story of the lumber country which holds, without a certain degree of fascination due to the humanness of its characters is "The Man from Lost River," Goldwyn's current release, a Frank Lloyd production. Too often in virile screenplays of this type we are forced to endure an entirely pure hero and a dastardly villain whose soul is composed of red and black. symbols. Infant males may appreciate such a combination but the average citizen does not, and it is "good stuff" to keep them guessing a reel or so before they decide as to just where their sympathy belongs.

Miss Burt has done this in "The Man from Lost River," which has been understandingly股东大会 by Arthur Statter and Lambert Hillyer. Perhaps with different cutting out or two "plants" could have been made of material which is only so much atmosphere as now arranged, but that will pass. The direction is capably cared for by Lloyd while Norbert Brodin's photography far exceeds in value the work of the labora-

"ETTA LEE"

Playing the Maid in "Lotus Blossom"

The lady herself speeds up a little, indicating to an astonished public that she is learning to act. Miss Davies is here situated in the role of Ethel Hoyt, a much more ordinary egotistical flapper with upsetting ideas about men. Since flapper comedies are now in favor, this will be particularly well received.

Ernest Edison, the masculine lead in the story, has suffered a mutilation in the photoplay which amputates more than a little of his sympathy and all of his character value (of course to the great benefit of the star part); nevertheless, Forrest Stanley helps him out with a pleasing performance for which he deserves commendation.

Elyse Sayne and Tom Lewis make a picturesque set of distracted parents for the precocious Ethel while Arthur Rankin, Corrine Barker and Maude Gordon end the list of players.

"EVERYTHING FOR SALE"

Clune's

Reelart's latest May McAvoy starring picture, "Everything for Sale," although an improvement over recent attempts for the luminous by McAvoy suffers from a lack of plot originality which is only made up with great effort by the work of workable cast. Why can't the inscribers of our comedy-dramas stumble upon something new just once in a while? Hector Turnbull is responsible for both the story and the continuation which will "hit" under the direction of Frank O'Connor.

Beautiful scenery and sets abound in the picture and, at that, it may bring satisfaction to the average audience.

Helen Wainwright, an appealing ingenue, is a very fair position for Miss McAvoy although she has had more significant parts with which to work. We find it difficult to believe, however, that her extreme attraction could be drowned anywore.

Edie Sutherland and Raymond Scott, oppose the star. Edie still commits two or errors insufferable in an actor. He holds his mouth open most of the time and he persists in looking as if he is not really disturbed. He has plenty of time to eliminate these displease mannerisms but it will be easier sailing without them.

Kathlyn Williams is in her element as Mrs. Wainwright, Helen's ambitious aunt, and Edwin Stevens is equally excellent in Mr. Wainwright.

Richard Tucker, Betty Schade and Jane Keckley are all correctly placed in Lee Morto, Lillian Lord, his sweetheart and Sarah, a family retainer. As much cannot be said for Dana Todd, who is seen in a sort of second juvenile heavy.

Hal Rosson's photography is standard.

"Molly O," starring Mabel Normand, will have its first showing in Los Angeles at the Mission Theatre, beginning November 29.

Major Jack Allen, wild animal photographer, was the guest of honor at the fifth annual Movie Ball of the Film Players Club held recently in New York City.

Camera work on "Whirl "Pen. B. Hampton's latest screen version of a Zane Grey novel, and his first Goldwyn release, will be completed within two weeks.
FOUR PRINCIPALS IN NEW LAKE FILM

Just four principals make up the list of characters in Alice Lake's new Metro picture, "Hate," a Maxwell Karger production from the story by Wadsworth Camp. Miss Lake will be the only feminine player in the picture. The remaining three principals, who appear in the male roles, are Conrad Nagel, assuming the leading male role, Harry Northrup and Charles Clary. Mr. Nagel was obtained by special arrangement with the Famous Players-Lasky company. Mr. Clary was last seen in Mr. Karger's Metro production, "The Hole in the Wall," Mr. Northrup, for years a star of the speaking stage, will be recalled for his work in Rex Ingram's "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse."

BARKER TO DIRECT HARRY CAREY

Universal announces that Carl Laemmle has engaged Reginald Barker to direct "The Storm." The picture will star Harry Carey and will be released as a Jewel production. "Man to Man" is now being completed. Barker was previously one of the two featured directors of the Goldwyn organization.

DRYDEN COMPLETES ROLE IN "PENROD"

Wheeler Dryden has just concluded an engagement at the Hollywood Studios, playing the part of The Reverend Mr. King in Marshall Neilan's production, "Penrod," starring Wesley Barry. Mr. Dryden also supported Wesley when he appeared in the stage version of "Penrod" at the Little Theatre in Los Angeles early this year.

MYERS OPPOSITE MAY

Doris May will have as her leading man in "Boy Crazy," Harry Myers, the Connecticut Yankee. Myers has just completed a role opposite Alice Lake.

DIRECTOR DONS GREASE PAINT

Director Douglas Gerrard has varied the monotony of the megaphone by donning grease paint for a Universal production. He is playing an important role in support of Miss du Pont in "The Golden Galleys."

FOX SIGNS PETERS

Frederic Peters has signed with Fox to play heavies with Al St. John. Mr. Peters will be remembered as "Zeda," the giant in "Miracles of the Jungle."

Elnor Oliver and Cara Lee are cast in Nazimova's latest production for United Artists, "A Doll's House."

Snitz Edwards, veteran vaudevillian and motion picture actor has been selected by Rex Ingram for a part in "The Prisoner of Zenda," his new production for Metro.

Monte Brice, comedy writer, has been engaged by Jack Warner, for the Menta Banks two-reel comedies, the first of which is now in continuity form, and bears the title, "Be Careful."

IN "PROPS"

Coy Watson, Jr., who is being featured in Campbell Animal and Children Comedies, is at present playing a part with Larry Semon in "Props," under production at Vitagraph.

WITH HARLEQUIN PLAYERS

Edith Bennett is to play for a while on the legitimate stage with a Los Angeles repertoire company, the Harlequin Players. She will be presented in a one-act playlet under the direction of Odette Tyler.

BRAIDWOOD STARRED IN LUDDY PRODUCTIONS

Frank Braidwood recently signed a contract with Luddy Productions, by the terms of which he is to be starred in eight five-reel westerns.

ENGAGED AS LEAD

Edith Roberts will play the principal role in J. Parker Road's new production, "Pawnee," from a story by Frank L. Packard, of "Miracle Man" fame. Just recently Miss Roberts completed one of the four leading roles in Cecil B. de Mille's "Saturday Night."

CAREWE WITH EASTERN VITAGRAPH

Arthur Edmund Carewe is playing his first engagement in the eastern studios with Edward Jose in "The Prodigal Judge."

RETURNS AS STERN'S SECRETARY

Zion Myers, brother of Carmel Myers, screen star, has returned to Universal City as executive secretary to Julius Stern, second vice-president of the "U." organization. Myers previously worked in the production office, on the publicity staff and in other capacities.

George Hishima is cast with Alice Lake in "Blind Passion," a Maxwell Karger production.

Bert Sprout is playing the heavy in "Silver Spurs," the forthcoming Lester Cuneo picture.

Irene Lenzi is playing in support of Billy Bevan in the current Sennett two-reel comedy, "The Blockhead."

Edward Wallock and Albert Breig have been cast in Gareth Hughes' latest Metro production entitled "Stay Home."

T. Roy Barnes has completed his role opposite Marie Prevost in her current Universal starring production, "Cupid Inoc."

George Periolat is at present playing a character part in "The Dusk Flower," under the direction of Rowland Lee.

Alan Hale and Wedgewood Nowell are playing in support of Nazimova in her current production, "A Doll's House," for United Artists.

Sandy Roth has been engaged as assistant director to Jack Warner for the first of the Warner Brothers two-reel comedies starring Monte Banks.

Lois Lee is enacting the role of the Countess Helza in "The Prisoner of Zenda," under production at Metro.

ILLUSIONS

One of the prevalent illusions is that anyone can write a photoplay—that creating scenarios is the crudest type of writing, requiring no special knowledge nor technical skill necessary to the novelist or short story writer.

True, the screen writer does not need the vocabulary required for the subtle philosophical and psychological passages which tread through a novel or short story; the obvious limitations of the screen preclude the expression of abstractions; but the screen writer does need language, the language of color, mass, and line, the language of the objective—the pictorial universe.

C. Gardner Sullivan's scenario of "Hail the Woman" opens as follows: "A spring twilight clothes the harsh little New Hampshire town of Flint Hill with brief beauty. On the low hills that burgen against the skyline, weary plowmen unyoke their horses from the plows and plod wearily homeward in the blossomscented dusk. The tall church spires of the town still shine in the last high rays of sunlight, while, in the little darkness slowly envelops the streets and lowlier buildings."

Here you have a picture, a picture which will inspire director and cinematographer to a piece of old beauty.

However, the very next lines in Mr. Sullivan's photoplay deal with a girl in wisftul repose wondering about a problem as old as Time. In this way the ultimate audience is intrigued, in this made responsive and receptive. The combination of duskin that time in this way can be made into a fortuitous as creators of powerful photodramas. Men who could create novels replete with dry naughts or vague regrets are apt to faintly sweep over one—plus a girl in perplexed meditation, creates a poignant atmosphere; it is with beauty and strangeness that Mr. Sullivan, a master craftsman, arranges and fixes the attention.

That not everyone can write photoplays is evidenced through the wholesale writing of writers of books and plays to create worthwhile photodramas. Men who could create novels replete with dry naughts or vague regrets are apt to faintly sweep over one—plus a girl in perplexed meditation, creates a poignant atmosphere; it is with beauty and strangeness that Mr. Sullivan, a master craftsman, arranges and fixes the attention.

The Screen Writers' Forum

THE FORCE OF PICTURES

The fiction writers who disparage photoplay writing on the grounds of their being unable in the latter medium to express subtle thoughts or naive, clever things—are talking nonsense. Whatever faults pertain to picture-making are usually intrinsic in the direction or acting—or in the unwise judgment in selecting an unsuicoble story.

There is far force to a picture—and therefore to a sequence of pictures—than there is to any printed argument. We are primarily impressionistic, and secondarily reflective. Contrasting characters, properly portrayed, can invoke subtle drama or clever force—just as much so as can any arrangement of printed words.

Photoplay writing can be made just as effective and dramatic as any fiction writing. Characters tell their own story simply by juxtaposition in the films, if the characterizaton is clear-cut and valid. Two certain types are inevitably bound to re-act in a certain manner. It's a matter of chemicalization. All the rhetoric in the world will not alter the fundamental situation, and is quite apt to distroy from.

Pictures will ever be more persuasive than the printed word, therefore writing in pictorial terms for translation into objective pictures—motion pictures—can become a most subtle and forceful art.

If anyone doubts the power of pictures, let me remind him of the cartoons in the New York Evening Journal of a few years back. While employed on a Hearst newspaper in another city, I was subjected to a severe demonstrative barrage on the part of a wealthy man I had called upon; it seems he had formerly lived in New York. He accused the Hearst newspapers of fostering discontent and anarchy, calling my attention to the aforementioned Journal cartoons. One in particular, which showed several gaunt "kiddies," raged and dirty and hu-

STARKE PATTERSON

Tina Modotti is playing a part in "Stay Home," Gareth Hughes' current Metro starring vehicle.

Evelyn Selbie is cast as "Ta-ha-ma," an Indian woman in Lester Cuneo's "Silver Spurs," by Henry McCarty and Leo Meehan.

Former Yale swimming champion, Malcolm McGregor, has been cast for the role of Fritz von Tarlenheim in the current Rex Ingram production, "The Prisoner of Zenda."

Chow Young who played a part in "The Man Hunter," appears in an important role in "Jonah’s Blossom," the all-Chinese production now playing at the Alhambra.

E. H. Goldstein, assistant to Carl Laemmle, has arrived at Universal City. It is probable that he will remain for several weeks.

Martha Franklin has just finished playing the mother in Shirley Mason’s latest picture, "Her Loved One," formerly titled "Little Aliens."

FABLES MAKE KIDDIES HAPPY

The Scottish Rite Hospital in Atlantic, Ga., is showing "Aesop’s Film Fables." These cartoons, drawn by Paul Terry, are screened on the lawn of this home for the benefit of the little crippled children who are unable to see a movie otherwise.

All over the country, similar showings of "Aesop’s Film Fables" for children are being given.

SCREEN PSEUDONYM

Andree Tourneur who is cast as leading lady with Bert Lytell in his current picture, "The Phantom Bride," has decided to change her name, for professional reasons, and will in the future be known as Marg Standish.

LINNER WOULD ENTERTAIN MARSHAL FOCH

Max Linder, the French comedy film star, now making a burlesque on "The Three Musketeers," has telegraphed Marshal Foch an invitation to visit him upon his visit to Los Angeles.

Linder was in the French Army during the war, so it is expected that the star will help entertain the world’s famous warrior.

NEW YORK TRIP

Hil E. Roach and Mrs. Roach are making plans to accompany Harold Lloyd on his trip to New York, which will be made upon the completion of the comedian's picture "He Who Hesitates," the first working title of which was "The White Feather." While in the metropolis the party will be present at the showing of Lloyd’s "A Sailor-Made Man."

ISLAND STEAMER IN HUGHES FILM

The steamer "Avalon," which travels between Los Angeles Harbor and Catalina Island, furnished the setting for several episodcs of Garish Hughes’ new Metro starring picture, "Stay Home." Mr. Hughes and his company spent two days working aboard the luxury liner for this George M. Baker production.

LAEMMLE IN NEW YORK

Carl Laemmle has left for New York to be on duty at the executive offices until January 1st, at which time he will return to Universal City. He leaves Julius Stern, second vice-president in an advisory capacity and Irving G. Thalberg as director-general.

LYTELL RESTING AT CATALINA

Bert Lytell is on Catalina Island for a week’s stay following the completion of "The Phantom Bride," his newest Metro starring picture. Mr. Lytell expects to divide his time while at the famous resort between fishing and tennis.

News of the death of his mother, Mrs. Mary Swain, was received this week by Mack Swain, a member of the Charlie Chaplin organization. Mr. Swain had just returned from his mother’s bedside when the news of her death arrived. Mrs. Swain was in her eighty-second year and resided in Salt Lake City, Utah.

MABEL NORMAND, HOSTESS

Mabel Normand was hostess to a Thanksgiving dinner party for her friends who appeared with her in "Molly O," Mack Sennett’s latest production.

JOHN STEPPING

BETTY WILL DANCE

Betty Compson is taking dancing lessons from Theodore Kosloff in preparation for her part in William D. Taylor’s production of a story of Parisian boulevards and theaters. Kosloff is now her dancing master, but when Director Taylor calls "camera" he will become her leading man.

NEW USE FOR THE METRONOME

Metronomes were originally designed to help harrassed music teachers in their task of teaching small children to keep time with the music, but Director Wallace Worsley has found a new use for one at the Goldwyn Studio, where he is directing "The Octave of Claudio." In this picture Lon Chaney plays two distinct roles, a fanatical doctor and a hangman, and as both characters appear in many of the scenes it necessitates much double exposed films. To insure accuracy in matching up the film and to avoid retakes a system of counting by metronome has been worked out by the director and Mr. Chaney.

OPENED FULL DRESS SHOP

Jack Bean, formerly of Wolf & Bean, has opened an exclusive full-dress and uxedo shop in the new Loew’s State Theatre building.

Mr. Bean is catering especially to the motion picture people.

Hewlings Mumper, general manager of Ben. B. Hampton’s picture corporation, is on a week’s vacation at Palm Springs.

CINEMA CONTEST

The American Legion, Los Angeles Post Number Eight, will stage a cinema contest in connection with its pre-Christmas festival, which is to be held at Philharmonic Auditorium from December 19th to 24th inclusive.

Among the stars who have already entered are Pauline Frederick, Mabel Normand and others. H. H. Harris is general chairman of the entertainment committee, while Bert T. Heard is in charge of the cinema star contest.

POET GUEST OF MAYER

Robert W. Service, distinguished poet and novelist, was a recent visitor at the Louis B. Mayer studios where he saw motion picture production from behind the scenes under the guidance of Mr. Mayer.

Mr. Service’s latest book, "Ballads of a Bohemian," has just been placed on the market. Among the works that have won him supremacy in the literary world are "The Trail of Ninety-Eight," "Ballads of a Cheechako," "Rhymes of a Red Cross Man," "The Spell of the Yukon," "The Law of the Yukon," and "The Pretender."

AFFILIATES WITH NAZIMOVA

Robert Edgar Long, for three years director of advertising and publicity for D. W. Griffith, with headquarters in New York, is now handling exploitation for Nazimova Productions. Mr. Long arrived in Los Angeles this week. He will return to New York following a brief stay at the United studios, formerly Brunten, where Nazimova is making "A Doll’s House," her first production for United Artists.

Wallace Reid boxes Kid McCor for the middleweight belt in filmland. The result is to be seen on the screen when "The Champion" is shown.

Edward J. LeSaint, director and writer, has left with Mrs. Le Saint for their Wlishire home to the Ambassador Hotel, where they will remain during the winter months. Mr. Le Saint is busy with the direction of Constance Binney in her current Realert story.

Truman B. Handy has resigned as publicity director of Willis & Ingles to write a syndicate film column for a number of leading newspapers throughout this country, England and South America. In addition, Mr. Handy announces that he has become the personal representative of Frank Mayo.

Three William D. Taylor productions are included in the forty-one "films well-made" especially recommended for Children’s Book week by the National Board of Review.

Ferdinand Earle is now actor as well as writer, artist, musician and director. In the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam he enacts Destiny.

Little Richard Headrick, one of our popular kiddie screen actors, is to be starred by Louis B. Mayer.

Lasky is to use Agen Ayres and Jack Holt in William C. de Mille’s new production. This in accordance with a new star policy.

AT THE ROCHOUS STUDIO

Harry “Snub” Pollard and company are working in a Los Angeles newspaper office this week while shots are being taken in the press room for his comedy of newspaper life. Marie Mosquini plays opposite the star and Noah Young is the “heavy.” Upon the completion of this production, Mr. Pollard will make a circus picture with Marie Mosquini and Noah Young playing again in support.

Three recently completed comedies were shown in preview at the studio’s projection room this week, the first being “Snub” Pollard’s comedy satire on the Bolsheviks, called “Blow ’em Up;” the other two starring “Paul” Parrott in “The Roustabout” and “Pay the Cashier.”

Two more comedies will be ready for New York shipment when the art titles are added. These are “Snub” Pollard pictures, “Some Baby,” and “Stage Struck.”

PREVIEW GIVEN

Jack White’s latest comedy for Edensational, titled “Step This Way,” featuring Lige Conley, was previewed at the New Wilshire Theatre, Hollywood, recently. Bob Kerr directed and costumed it, with the personal supervision of Jack White.

NAZIMOMA STAFF

Charles Bryant, directing Madame Nazimova in Baschi’s “A Doll’s House,” is being assisted by Albert Kelley, formerly of Metro. Charles Van Enzer is the chief cameraman. Others of the staff include Neil Jack, second cameraman; Lou Ostrout, cutter; Samuel Zimbalist, assistant; E. L. Williams, chief electrician; Edward Cahn, property master; Paul Ivano and Lewis Wilson, assistant cameramen; Lillian Turner, wardrobe. R. W. McParland, formerly general manager for the late George Loane Tucker, is production manager.

MAYER SIGNS WALTHALL FOR STAHIL PICTURE

Henry B. Walthall will play one of the two leading male roles, that of Henry Garrett, in the next John M. Stahl production, “One Clear Call,” adapted from Frances Nimm Greener’s book of the same name.

HUGHES IN MOUNTAIN LOCATION

Gareth Hughes and twenty members of his company have been working for the past week at Chatworth, filming some mountain scenes for “Stay Home,” his new Metro production. George D. Baker is directing this Edgar Franklin story.

HAM CAST IN FOREIGN PRODUCTION

Harry Ham, screen comedian, has signed to play the leading role of an American professor in John S. Robertson’s foreign-made picture, “Spanish Jade,” now being filmed in Spain.

"FOLLY" UNIT RESUMES PROGRAM

After a vacation of a few weeks, one of the “Folly” comedy units of the Pacific Film Company has resumed operations and it is expected that production will be steady from this time forward. Vernon Dent and Violet Joy are the featured players.

SALES OF CHESTER COMEDIES

The following sales of Chester Comedies have been made, some by William M. Vogel in Europe and others by A. K. Greenleaf at the local office: Spain and Portugal, South Africa, the West Indies, China, Federated Malay States, Dutch East Indies, Chile, Peru, Bolivia, Ecuador, Holland and Mexico.

EVE SOUTHERN

ALLCHINESE PICTURE

The first all-Chinese production, “Lotus Blossom,” is released by the West Coast Theatre, Inc., of which Sol Lesser, Gere Bros. & Ramish are the picture heads. Not only is “Lotus Blossom” produced from a Chinese story and written by a Chinese, but the Wah Ming Motion Picture Company which sponsors the picture, is an all-Chinese organization. “Lotus Blossom” opens at the Alhambra, Nov. 26th.

HINES WORKING AGAIN

Johnny Hines is at work on “Torchy’s Luck,” upon completion of which Charles C. Burr plans to make a feature with him.

John Ince has been engaged by Metro and will appear in support of Alice Lake in “Hate,” her new starring picture which Maxwell Karger is directing. Mr. Ince also played with Miss Lake in “The Hole in the Wall,” one of her recently completed features.

Jack Lloyd has been assigned a part in Lloyd Hamilton’s newest comedy, now in production at the Brunton studios.

Marin Sais has been engaged by Denver Dixon to portray the feminine lead in his new Western feature.

Park Ries is handling the photography for Lloyd Hamilton comedies after many weeks’ work with the Jack White company.

George O’Hara and Albert Cooke are supporting Billy Devan in “The Blockhead,” his latest comedy under production at the Mack Sennett studios.

HAMPSON ADDRESSES ROTARY CLUB

A movement starting with the Rotary Club of Los Angeles is to be launched whereby California-made pictures will be used during the suggested ten-year vacation from the purgatory of censorships at home to eliminate misunderstandings between various peoples of the world, which are usually the basic cause of international conflict. If the plan proposed by Benjamin R. Hampton in his recent address before the Los Angeles Rotary Club is carried to conclusion.

Producer Hampton also urged Rotary Clubs to go on record against censorship, and through affiliations in every city to battle this menace to the motion picture industry.

A third suggestion was that American democracy could be spread to all parts of the globe by the portrayal on the screen of actual conditions in America. He said in part:

“Here in this city, in active operation, the machinery that can be utilized to bring about a common understanding between the peoples of the entire world.

“Mankind has found a common language. It has discovered a method that permits the transmission of thought quickly to all people.

“That method is the motion picture.

“A commissioner of immigration tells me that in twelve years’ time the immigrants coming from Europe have shown a complete change in their dress. In every section of Europe—American costume is being abandoned in favor of American clothing. This revolution is so great that throughout all European American methods of manufacturing clothing have been adopted.

“The country established the fact that this change was due entirely to American pictures.

“Then the yellow men or black men go into their native motion picture theaters and see on the screen expositions of American life, they do so for the purpose of being entertained.

“Into their minds, consciously or subconsciously, is planted the American ideal. The Rotary Club is an international organization. It is in the power of the men in this town to start in motion a movement that will spread all over this world.

“Now, let us use that instrument to make progress for democracy during the ten-year vacation period suggested by our Secretary of State. Let us use the Rotary Clubs of Los Angeles as the lever by which this movement will be started.

“My suggestion is that the Rotary Club study motion pictures that it become acquainted with the value of this universal language.

“That the Rotary Club communicate with other Rotary Clubs throughout America and Europe to inform fellow club members of educational and propaganda value of the motion picture, and secure world-wide action.

“The plan is now under consideration.

EDUCATIONAL RELEASES

Educational Film Exchanges will begin distribution of the Toonerville Comedies, by Fontain Fox, with the release presently of “The Skipper’s Last Resort.” Dan Mason is the skipper.

“Let’s Go-To the South Seas” is the latest of a series of “World Wanderings” being released by Educational.

Work commenced this week at the Brunton studios on the fifth of Lloyd Hamilton’s new series of Mermaid comedies for Educational. Irene Dalton is his leading woman. Hugh Pay is directing.

MOTION PICTURE TAX RETURNS
INDICATE NORMAL AMUSEMENT OUTLOOK

The definite arrival of amusements in the "big business" fold is indicated by the husky figures just compiled by the high-powered government statisticians. With the federal tax returns as an accurate basis upon which to ply their sharp pencils, the Washington experts have arrived at the total of $897,000,000 paid for amusements in this country—or nearly twice that paid for the maintenance of the army.

"These figures show many things—first of all that the average American is a natural gloom-chaser," says Oliver Morosco who in his twenty years as a theatrical producer has been active in the amusement evolution. "The brooding nation is in a dangerous mood, so it is particularly timely that America is shown to the world as passing its leisure moments in wholesome relaxations rather than burying itself in its own gloomy thoughts.

"The elevation of amusements from the museum and nickelodeon stages to the present-day magnitude has been stimulated more by motion pictures than any other one factor. Pictures with their 'universal language' have extended the active amusement sphere into even the hamlets of the country. The small town theaters do not have to rely upon their own population, for the automobile has made the surrounding rural districts a part of the audience.

"In the cities the progressive exhibitors have built film palaces outstripping even the glittering homes of the spoken drama. With the typical daring of the pioneers these big exhibitors have made their brethren of the older stage fairly gasp.

"One result of these magnificent motion picture theaters has been to stimulate the producers to new efforts in providing pictures worthy of such ambitious settings. And the picture, made for the large metropolitan houses, filters down through the various classifications until it reaches the little four-corners theaters. So the people in the open districts are getting a peak at drama that would always be denied them if they had to wait for large star casts and costly productions to come to them 'personally conducted.'

"Thus it is that producers more and more are attempting to build pictures that have the lasting qualities to carry them through the full financial possibilities. This is a stimulant that is healthy for art as well as the box office."

VORKAPITCH AND LINDSTEDT WITH PHOTOGRAPHERS

Slavko Vorkapitch, a Serbian recently from Paris, is associated with M. d'Agay and M. Bouchard, the new owners of the Hoover photographic studios.

Alfred Lindstedt, formerly of the Hoover concern, is remaining with the new organization.

Viola Dana plays a child of eight in one of the episodes of "The Five Dollar Baby," her new Metro starring picture which Harry Beaumont is directing.

Writers' Cramp to Be Gala Affair

The Writers' Cramp, a dinner dance to be given by the writers at their clubhouse on Sunset Blvd., December the first, has caused a stir of anticipation in Hollywood. The object of the event which promises to prove one of the colony's most brilliant social gatherings, is to raise money by means of a sale of tables for the installation of tennis courts and a swimming pool upon the clubhouse grounds. Rapid strides are being made by this famous group of authors; it will be interesting to watch the development of their organization. Festivities are to commence upon the important evening at seven-thirty, we are informed.

Submit Contestant

As a candidate for the contest being staged by Los Angeles Post Number Eight, as a part of the big Christmas celebration being sponsored by the Legionnaires in honor of the fleet, which is to take place at the Hollywood Auditorium, the week of December 19th, Mabel Normand, star of "Molly O," Mack Sennett's latest feature attraction, submits to the committee of this contest the name and photograph of Mildred June. All the feminine stars in the moving picture industry at the various studios in Los Angeles have been requested to submit their personal choice for a candidate to be voted upon.

KINEMA STARTS CONCERTS

The KINEMA Theatre in Los Angeles begins its Popular Sunday Morning Concerts on November 27th. The KINEMA Symphonic Orchestra will be augmented to 75 pieces for these concerts. Rene Williams will conduct and select the programs. Well known soloists of the concert stage will be added to each program, and Mlle. Irma Patve, engaged as premier organist for the KINEMA's new 5-manual Robert Morton, will also be enrolled for these concerts. The Sunday morning concerts will begin at 11 a.m., and patrons have the privilege to remain for the playspots which follow.

Haris Purchases Pickford Home

Elmer Harris, Supervising Director for REALART, has bought the home of Mrs. Charlotte Pickford, mother of Mary, and two lots adjoining, which will be converted into tennis courts for the recreational use of the Realart scenario staff.

Mr. Herbert L. Rothchild announces the opening of his theatre, the Granada, in San Francisco, seating thirty-five hundred persons, with every appointment for the patron's comfort installed. Mack Sennett's two-reel comedy, "Love and Doughnuts," featuring Ben Turpin, is featured on the opening program.

"Baby Peggy" in "Penrod"

"Baby Peggy" Montgomery, little three-year-old star in Century Comedies, will be seen in Marshall Neilan's "Penrod." By special arrangement with Abe and Julius Stern of Century Comedies, Mr. Neilan is enabled to present the clever child in an important part of the Fourth Tarkington story now being produced.

HILL AGAIN WITH VERNON

Josephine Hill has been engaged to play in another picture by Christie studies. She appeared with Bobby Vernon in "Pure and Simple" and "Fresh From the Farm," two comedies already completed and will work opposite Bobby in another picture soon to be started which has a working title "By Hook or Crook."

Edwin Stevens has been cast as a New England boot-legger in the Nina Wilcox Putnam story which is nearing completion as a Bebe Daniels starring vehicle.

Production was started this week on Jackie Coogan's third star picture and the second of his new series. The title has not yet been announced. Jerome Storm is directing.

Work is progressing rapidly on Alca Nazi- mova's first independent production, Henrik Henrici's "A Man's Home," which Charles Bryant is directing. United Artists will release the feature.

A preview of Jack White's newest comedy, "Step This Way," was given at the new Wilshire Theatre last Sunday night.

The Chester Bennett Company is expected today. It is expected that Holiday Inn will open at the Loew's Big Bear. Jane Novak is the star of the production.

B. B. Hampton's all-star production of Zane Grey's "Wild Fire" will be released within the next two weeks. Claire Adams and Carl Gavoori head the cast and Jean Her- sholt and Ethel Hale are directing. This will be Mr. Hampton's first picture for release through Goldwyn.

Dorothy Brunton, one of the favorite mas- sical comedy stars of Australia and London, will arrive in Los Angeles this week en- route from Melbourne to London to fulfill a stage contract. She is none other than the sister of Robert Brunton, who, if it is rumored, will try to persuade her to enter motion pictures.

Jack Brunton left Los Angeles Sunday for San Francisco, where he will meet his mother and father, who are accompanying Miss Brunton on her trip, and bring them to Los Angeles.

Lloyd Hamilton has started work on a new comedy, the sixth of his new series. Hugh Pay is directing.

Camera work on the J. L. Frothingham production, "The Man Who Smiled," has been completed. Edward Sloman directed the picture, which features an all-star cast headed by Marcia Manon, William V. Mong and Mary Wynn.

W. E. Keefe, who has taken a suite of offices at the studios, has received word that his comedies, "Peeps Into the Future," are meeting with great success in New York, Chicago and San Francisco. They will soon be shown in Los Angeles.

AT REALART

May McAvoy has started work on Real- art's thirteenth production of the current season. It is an original story by Olga Printzlau who wrote the scenarios of "Midsummer Madness," "Conrad in Quest of His Youth" and other William De Mille successes. Cast in principal roles are Bay See- vy, McKee, Fannie Midgley, Arthur Rankin, Fred Turner, Carrie Clark Ward and Richard Rosson. Monty Campbell will direct with Hal Ross- ton at the camera.

Director Frank Urson is nearing the end of the Mennonite story which is the third Mary Miles Minter feature of the current season.

Constance Binney is starting this week on an original story by Aubrey Stauffer, featuring the unusual exhibition of motion pictures, with scenario by Wells Hastings. Edward Le Saint will direct.

Bebe Daniels is again wearing conven- tional American clothes, having finished the Cuban sequence of her current production.

Wanda Hawley expects to start the last of the week Will Payne's original story which Thomas Heffron will direct from Percy Heath's scenarios.

Work is proceeding rapidly on the glass- ing in of stages 2 and 3, to form an enclosed stage 100 feet by 160. This gives Realart a capacity of two closed stages and one open.

"WAMPAS" TO EDIT NATIONAL EDITION OF HEARST YEAR BOOK

Members of the Western Motion Picture Advertisers endorsed a plan at their last meeting, submitted by F. H. Eldridge, managing editor of the Los Angeles Examiner, whereby the publicity men will edit a speci- al Motio n Picture Yearly Number of this paper, to be distributed nationally to exhib- itors, dramatic and motion picture editors and all others interested in motion pictures.

The plan, brought before the W. M. P. A. by Florence Lawrence and Al Price of the Examiner, calls for the appearance in this number of articles by the most famous writers in the country as an answer to the attacks that have been made upon the indus- try. In addition to these articles sketches by prominent artists, members of the film industry will contribute stories and feature articles on the different phases of the business. Each member of the W. M. P. A. will have a hand in the preparation of this number.

Benjamin B. Hampton, producer and former chairman of the advisory board of motion picture men who will co- operate with the Examiner and the W. M. P. A. in editing this number.

Another social event of the week was John McCormick of Associated First Pictures, who reviewed conditions as he found them on his recent trip to New York. Mr. McCormick gave a verbal and interesting report on the recent Installation Dinner of the A. M. P. A. in New York, which he attended.

The creation of an Employment Bureau was instituted with Joe Jackson, chairman, to work out a plan whereby members of the W. M. P. A. can list motion picture concerns seeking publicity men could get together.

ADVANCE PRESENTATION

During the showing of Marshall Neilan's "Bits of Life" at the Cinema Theatre for the week beginning on November 19th, a clever bit of publicity in advance of the presentation was inaugurated by Richard Spier, Publicity Director of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., in cooperation with Pete Smith, the Marshall Neilan cutter in advance.

Arrangements were made for the presenta- tion of "Bits of Life" to the inmates of the California Hospital in Los Angeles with a small group of patients by the machine, and Wesley Barry, the Neilan starlet, personally op- erated it. Over two hundred patients, who were able to witness the showing of the Neil- lan First National attraction, were assembled in one of the larger open dormitories and a large sheet was tacked against the wall. Wesley Barry was given an ovation when he left the hospital. It is the plan of Marshall Neilan, who originally sponsored the idea of giving the hospital patients enter- tainment, to present each of his new pic- tures in a like manner.

WILL VACATION

With the return of Michael Gore and Adolph Hanisch, President and Treasurer of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., to their offices, A. L. Gore, Secretary of the organization, who looked after the destinies of the circuit during the absence of his colleagues, will take its well-earned vacation. He plans to visit the Yosemite, and has made arrange- ments to take along a motion picture camera to record his journeys.

Mr. and Mrs. William Louis Chaudet are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son, William Louis Chaudet, Junior.

What is Copyright?

By Irving Baltimore

Although derived from the Latin word copia, plenty, our word copy has assumed its significance from a corruption introduced through low Latin. Thus, copyright is, in a limited sense, self-definitive, being the right to copy or to "make plenty," as it were.

We find the first use of the term in Blackstone's commentaries of 1767. In this legal classic Blackstone sets forth the fundamental principles of copyright.

"When a man," he says, "by the exertion of his rational powers, has produced an original work, he seems to have clearly a right to dispose of that identical work as he pleases, and any attempt to vary the disposition he has made of it, appears to be an invasion of that right. Now, the identity of a literary composition consists entirely in the sentiment and the language; the same conception, clothed in the same words, must necessarily be the same composition; and whatever method be taken of exhibiting that composition to the ear or the eye of another, by recital, or by writing, or by printing, in any number of copies, or at any period of time, it is always the identical work of the author which is so exhibited; and no other man (it hath been thought) can have a right to exhibit it, especially for profit, without the author's consent. This consent may, perhaps, be tacitly given to all mankind, when an author suffers his work to be published by another hand, without any claim or reserve of right, and without stamping on it any marks of ownership; it being then a present to the public, like building a church or bridge, or laying out a new highway."

This enunciation contemplates a perpetual right in the author, and such was the common conception of copyright at that period. Pursuant to this notion, Blackstone said the right forever, to publish the work from which we quote. Other authors conveyed similar rights. From this fact arose the clamorous protest of publishers, against deprivation of their alleged rights, upon the subsequent construction of the Statute of Anne as a limitation of the life of copyright. Although Blackstone was a member of the judicial body which placed this interpretation upon the Statute, his was a dissenting opinion.

Today, except in several minor countries, perpetuity in copyright is not recognized. However, there is no limitation in the United States upon the rights of the owner in an unpublished work. In England, where the Statute of 1710 makes provision for the protection of unpublished works by compliance with certain regulations, unless the same have been observed, there exist no remedies for infringement of such works. Publication, within the meaning of our copyright statutes, is dissimilar from the ordinary definition of the term, and will be treated in a subsequent article. As the law stands at present, the rights of the owner of an intellectual creation are very comprehensive, and liberal provision has been made for the enforcement thereof. Prior to the Statute of 1709, any person was at liberty to novelize a play. This defect in our law was cured, however, by amendment in the aforementioned statute, with the result that the right of novelization rests in the playwright alone, unless by him conveyed.

The many facets to the evolution of copyright law may be attributed to the fact that, being a creation, primarily, of the mind, the subject of copyright is of an intangible nature, except as to the means adopted for its recording or manifestation. Reason, strictly speaking, allows no distinction between this and any other character of personal property. Unless to the intellectual genius or artist is accorded some form of protection for the creations of his effort, there would be little incentive to bend his energies in that direction, with the resultant loss to the world of many a potential masterpiece. With this in view, our laws have been formulated, securing unto the author, however, rights only of a limited duration.

Broadly speaking, copyright now grants unto the author the exclusive right and privilege to multiply and offer for sale in any form, the creation of his mind, by representation to the sight, hearing or touch, an example of the latter being the raised-letter publications for the blind.

Terra Film of Berlin, Germany, will raise its capital from four to sixteen million marks.

Jack Cooper and Bobbie Dunn are among those cast in "The Blockhead," Sennett two-reel comedy starring Billy Bevan.

Hamilton-White comedies have a new bookkeeper in the person of Miss Joan Blackmore.

J. L. Frothingham, the producer, will leave for San Rafael shortly where he will act as judge at the annual dog show held in that city.

The Censors Differentiate

The censor is a creature peculiar unto himself and therefore not to be figured out by mere sinful mortal; but if we could venture an opinion (and a particularly expressive mood appears to be overtaking us at this time) we would remark that from personal observation he would seem to be inconsistent to the point of mental questionability, a strange combination of impurity and guilelessness of mind. He is, moreover, governed by sentiment rather than by proportion, and his sentiment is often times both unpleasantly sticky and contradictory.

For example: The Pasadena censorial body has recently placed a ban upon the showing in its community of de Mille’s “The Affairs of Anatol.” This fact is not extremely surprising, as the profession itself is practically agreed upon the general unwholesomeness of the picture under present displeasure; and while we prefer restraint to come from the consciousnesses within our art rather than from a group of prejudiced misunderstandings far removed from it, we can say nothing when any company exercises its legally endowed right to dictate. Therefore, it is not in criticism of the action that the subject is mentioned.

What amused and appalled us in the same breath was the statement of a member of the board to the effect that while “Anatol” was vicious and degrading, there was but a single incident in “One Arabian Night” which the Pasadena had recognized as too impure for the beneficial digestion of themselves and their children.

If we were left speechless by this astounding intelligence it was because we had just returned from a review of the Negri film, and the strange combination of ideas, Bocaccio and Puritan, had left our outraged senses paralegically struggling through a cloud. Incidentally, we are far from incapacitated at this time, but discretion must have a place in the presentation of our opinion. One thing is certain, however, if censorship was ever unfair and distasteful to us, it is now ridiculous and repulsive.

In comparison to “One Arabian Night,” “Anatol’s” rather foolish affairs are fraught with playful innocence; the gentleman himself is a paragon of virtue. We considered that Miss MacPherson did an over amount of suggesting in her arrangement of Shultz’s material, but we only wish that the producers of the painfully bald harem story starring Europe’s famous vamp had left just a detail or two to the imagination. No less than five fast working lovers complicate the lurid twenty-four hour space out of the principal feminine character’s life, which is colorfully chronicled in this production and this is all over and above the intimate glimpses into the love careers of other members of the cast, and the effeminate cavortings of a crew of decomposing eunuchs. All we wish to have designated is the incident which must be eliminated in Pasadena. It would be so fascinating to follow the line of figuring that would lead to the differentiation. Since it can’t, evidently, be done, the matter will have to rest, but a great deal of our disrespect for the system and the reasoning of the picture reformer rests with it.

The cinema may need intellectual regulation, as we read last week in “The Summons,” but first we suggest an inoculation of horse sense into the average churchman whose energy exceeds his brain capacity to back it up.

One of the greatest exhibiting evils in existence is thoroughly presented in the following communication. It cannot be further commented upon.

November 30, 1921.

“Miss Fanchon Royer,
Editor Camera,
Los Angeles, Calif.

Dear Miss Royer:
As the result of a spirited discussion held at the last meeting of the Motion Picture Directors’ Association, I have been instructed to write you this letter.

The Motion Picture Directors’ Association feels that it would be to the material advantage of the industry if certain extravagant and unnecessary phases of Motion Picture presentation were curtailed.

We mean specifically:
Atmospheric prologues,
Vaudeville numbers,
Expensive orchestras.

In almost all the larger cities of the United States, first-run theatre managers have gradually added theatrical features to their feature entertainment until today in many instances the theatrical entertainment overshadows the featured photodrama of the program. This condition is a serious menace to any further advances in motion picture production.

In the first place it is subtly impressing a certain class of our public with the thought that the play is not (Continued on Page 15)
ENGLISH PLAYER FEATURED IN "TEARS OF THE SEA"

"Tears of the Sea," soon to be released by the Associated International Pictures, marks the American screen debut of Miss Isabelle Savory, English actress who will be seen as the featured player.

Sam Benelli, Italian author, is responsible for the story. Mr. Benelli has written numerous dramas which have been produced not only in Italian and English but in French, Spanish, German and Scandinavian languages. One of his plays, "L'Amour des Trois Rois," has been made into an operatic composition and is annually revived at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York City. Mr. Benelli will also be remembered by New Yorkers as the author of "The Jest," in which Jack and Lionel Barrymore appeared to advantage.

"FIFTY CANDLES" HOLIDAY RELEASE

W. W. Hodkinson Corporation has announced as its feature holiday release, Irving V. Willat's "Fifty Candles," from the Saturday Evening Post story by Earl Deir Biggers. This production marks the fourth independent feature produced and directed by Mr. Willat and carries an all-star cast.

BUYS STORY

Famous Players-Lasky has purchased "The Gilded Cage," by Ann Nichols, for Gloria Swanson. This was produced on Broadway, New York, as a musical comedy, under the name "Love Dreams." The picture purchase was made through Andrew J. Callaghan.

JACKSON PLANT BUSY

Two companies are at work at the new New York Jackson Studios in the Bronx. One is the Triart Productions making two reelers and the other Hugo Ballin Productions.

PLAN SIX FILMS

TO RELEASE WILSON SERIAL

E. S. Manheimer of the Photoplays Serial Corp. has ready for release, "The Mysterious Pearl," a serial with Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber.

CACTUS FEATURES START ANOTHER WESTERN

"Western Ways," by Victor Hugo Halperin, will be the next Cactus Feature in which Maryon Aye and "Bob" Reeves will be co-starring. Albert Boggess will direct. Interiors will be photographed at the Hermann studio, near Santa Monica.

A two reel picture, depicting the story of the Unknown Soldier, beginning with his selection in France and ending with the sounding of taps over his grave at Arlington, Va., has been produced by Pathe News for the War Department.

LE SAINT STARTS

Edward J. Le Saint, recently added to the Realart directorial staff, has started work on his first production, "The Love Complex," starring Constance Binney.

At INCE

Arthur Beck, president of the Leah Baird productions, will depart for New York next Monday for a conference regarding the series of six pictures starring Miss Baird which are to be filmed during the coming year.

Jim," an Ince special for Associated First National, was completed this week with final scenes on a cattle ranch near Reno, Nevada. John Griffith Wray directed. Milton Sills, Marguerite de la Motte and John Bowser are in the cast.

"The Hottentot," with Douglas MacLean, Madge Bellamy and Raymond Hatton, is being rushed to completion for early release by Associated First National.

The J. Parker Read, Jr. company, filming "Pawnee," has spent most of the week on location. Tom Moore, Edith Roberts and James Barrows are already included in the series cast.

C. Gardner Sullivan, Ince staff writer, has just completed "Someone to Love," which will be an early Ince production.

At BRUNTON

Chester Bennett is busy "shooting" the first series of interiors for his production, "Starveling," in which Jane Novak is starred.

Camera work was started this week on "The Midnight Call," an original story by Emory Johnson. Mr. Johnson is producing the picture.

Loyd Hamilton and his company plan to leave this week for San Diego where water scenes for Mr. Hamilton's new comedy will be taken.

Jerome Storm is directing the Jackie Coogan picture with Glenn McWilliams and Bob Martin as cameramen. Shirley Vance Martin is the official photographer.

Constance Talmadge and Sid Franklin have left for location at Forest Grove, near Big Bear. They are "shooting" scenes for "The Divorcee" in which both Harrison Ford and Kenneth Harlan appear opposite the comedienne.

First National Notes

"All at Sea," has been chosen as the title of Richard Barthesness' current photoplay which is now making up in Maine for Inspiration Pictures.

Work on "White Faith," starring Hope Hampton, has been started at the Pareon studios in Fort Lee, N. J., and marks the first of a series of productions to be directed by Clarence Brown, who is under a long term contract with the Hope Hampton Productions, Inc.

Marshall Neilson is finishing his newest First National attraction, "Penrod," with Wesley Barry in the title role. Frank O'Connor, formerly with Lasky, is collaborating with the producer on the direction of the picture. David Kesson and Ray June are handling the photography. The picture will be ready for release within the next three weeks.

Only a few more scenes for Anita Stewart's next picture, "The Woman He Married," remain to be shot, with Fred Niblo directing.

Euster Keaton's next funfilm is struggling along toward completion without a title.

Billie Bevan and Mildred June of the Mack Sennett Comedies have gone on location.
"DON'T TELL EVERYTHING"

Grumman's Rialto

Another celluloid attempt at a comedy solution to conjugal infidelity is Lorna Moon's "Don't Tell Everything," as scenarized by Albert Le Vay for a fourth production. Played by an all-star cast, it is a more or less suggestive and therefore wholly amusing play which has been cleverly handled by Sam Wood's direction. It is also decorated with the customarily luxurious Lasky-special appointments to delight the audience which it will attract. At Gilk's camera work is very good.

Gloria Swanson is just Gloria as the young wife of a man with a past and, to all appearances, a present and future. Ten times she has done this same thing and she is thoroughly familiar with the manner in which one entraps the attention of one's own husband. She should be.

Wallie Reid isn't quite so enlightening as Tommy, the gentleman in question. He doesn't like heroes very well, but they surely are preferable to namby pambies on the order of Anatol and this one. To make matters otherwise bad, Reid is growing rather lannike himself. He should speed up a little and remember that all real artists continue to study as they get on.

Elliott Dexter impresses very well with a gentle philosopher, who is nevertheless thoroughly instructed in psychology. Dexter is much more sincere than he used to be.

Dorothy Cummings as a seducing "pal" (to many men and particularly to Tommy, offers a very pleasant place of work.

Genevieve Blain, the de Eriacs twins and Baby Gloria Wood fill the remaining positions.

"Don't Tell Everything" is just facetious enough to draw wonderfully.

"THE LURE OF JADE"

California

The exotic South Sea Island atmosphere into which is set "The Lure of Jade." Pauline Frederick's latest starring production, is responsible for the hazy insidious intrigue which it is impossible to separate from this fascination, there is very little to recommend as a story the screen version of Marion Ohr's "Houses of Glass," for it lacks realism and although supposedly a modern tale it suffers from a "medievality" of the Clever performances and the capable direction of Colin Campbell insert much drama into the situations, however, rescuing several of them artistically.

Miss Frederick, the superb, does wonders with Sara Vincent, a young woman whose reputation is ruined by scandal and whose soul is redeemed by self sacrifice. Particularly effective is her work when, as mistress of "The Sea Gull," she seeks stolidly for revenge upon the jealous tongue that had measured and executed her destruction so many years before. This lonely, embittered white woman of the tropics is an exquisite tragedy in every sense of the word.

Clarissa Selwyn's is faultlessly situated as the blantly virtuous Alida Corey whose indiscretions finally reach the inexcusable standard which she has ruthlessly credited to others.

Leon Barry in his interpretation of Stuart Bercove, the naive man who voluntarily attracts one woman that he may please another, is excellent.

Thomas Holding and Arthur Rankin dispatch suitably Captain Corey and his son, while the cast is convincingly completed by Hardee Kirkland, Togo Yamamato and Goro Kino.

Dev. Jennings' photography of this Robinson-Cole picture is capital.

"LOTUS BLOSSOM"

Alhambra

We have never seen a more truly Eastern production better staged than is "Lotus Blossom," James B. Leong's cinematic play for the Wah Ming Picture Company. It is almost entirely an all-Chinese film which has, however, been given a thoroughly competent production by one of the industry's oldest director's, Frank J. Grandon, who has interpreted the fundamentally foreign theme in our western understandings through the lens, with unusual judgment. The scenery by G. M. Yokel and C. Furtman lacks considerable in satisfaction and is further injured by careless cutting, but Ross Fischer's photography is beautiful and the softly oriental little story has a mellowness in its tragedy which leaves morbidity completely outside the subject. Some of the portrayals are brilliant; all of them are satisfactory.

Lily Tsan Mei, the Chinese nightingale, is featured in "Lotus Blossom," and considering that Moe Tai is her first screen role, she does well notwithstanding the very smugly make-up which she affects. It is Jack Abbe in the leading male role who plays the universally appealing youth of the drama. As Sun, his tender boy spirit shines forth as a human thing too big to be confined racially. Abbe expresses it with subtle beauty.

Tully Marshall, one of the two white actors in the piece, is exceptional in Quong Foo, Moe Tai's best friend and the founder of the drama. His make-up is very good and his work always just right.

Noah Berry in the Tartar chief is not so realistic, but his footage is limited and he does not detract materially from the atmosphere.

Goro Kino gives a vivid performance of the Emperor and Chow Young is an attractive Mongolian vamp. Parts like these are assisting the yellow actor to come into his own, for they prove him to possess the priceless gift of versatility.

James Wang, M. Seki and Etta Lee are also in the cast of this ever-so-different photoplay.

Exploitation for "Lotus Blossom" should play up. Its artistic note, as a really Chinese "Broken Blossoms" it will please many.

"ONE ARABIAN NIGHT"

Kinema

"One Arabian Night." First National's local release, is one of the best produced foreign pictures that we have seen. Interpreted by a large but excellent cast, headed by Pola Negri, the inimitable depicter of screen wantons, well directed by Ernst Lubitsch, containing elaborate sets comparatively well photographed and being an attention-holding, if exceedingly immoral story, it is a technical improvement over the majority of continental films.

MAN'S LAW AND GOD'S

Preview

Finds Fox is preparing for release his first centrally written and produced picture, "Man's Law and God's," a northwestern comedy drama featuring Jack Livingstone. The story has an unraveled, rather stereotyped plot, but some of its situations contain unusual possibilities and the photogrophy of the mountain scenery is effective, resulting in a very fair program picture possessing decided entertainment value.

Livingstone makes a likable hero of X. Y. Z., the romantic mounted policeman, with his genial personality and picturesque costume. He has pronounced star requisites.

Perhaps Ethel Shannon's ingenuous is a bit naive and somewhat forced, but it includes nothing to take exception to otherwise save a makeup that misses now and again.

George Cummings and John Tumble make a good pair of "kukum" heavies, while Bobby Mack and Joy Winthrop laughably enact the comic characters.

Wheeler Dryden does perhaps the cleverest interpretation of the cast in a "bit," the drunken remittance man.

Ethel Childs completes the list of players.

"Man's Law and God's" will stand more cutting which it will undoubtedly receive.

Gertrude Short and Eugenia Tuttle are cast in Doris May's latest picture for R-C entitled "Boy Crazy."

S. E. Al Jennings enacts the "heavy" in the Prairie production, "The Fightin' Fool," starring Dick Hatton.

Wadsworth Harris is playing a part with Bert Lytell in Bayard Veiller's latest screen production. Mr. Wadsworth Harris has completed an engagement at Robertson-Cole.

Frank Lease is a prominent member of the cast of "All at Sea," starring Richard Barthelmess, which Harry King is making for Inspiration Pictures.

Irene Castle's second production under her present arrangement is from the story, "The Rise of Roscoe Paine," by Joseph C. Lincoln.
Where to Find People You Know

LIGE CONLEY FEATURED

Jack White, making comedies at the Brunton Studios for the Hamilton-White Company, has raised Lige Conley to the position of featured player in his future comedies.

PLAYS LEAD WITH BARTHELMESS

Louise Huff, who was leading lady for George Arliss in "Disraeli," will be seen opposite Richard Barthelmess in his second photoplay for Inspiration Pictures entitled, "All At Sea."

JOHNSON ENGAGES JOHNNIE WALKER

Johnnie Walker has been engaged to appear in a featured role in "The Midnight Call," which Emory Johnson is filming at the Brunton studios.

HEARN IN BENNETT PICTURE

Eddie Hearn is appearing opposite Jane Novak in Chester Bennett's production, "Starveling." Mr. Hearn formerly worked at Brunton's with Ruth Roland and J. Warren Kerrigan.

MOORE WITH READ

Tom Moore is the featured player in "Paw," by Frank L. Packard. This J. Parker Read production is now under the direction of Irvin Willat for release through Associated First National.

IN COMEDY LEAD

Howard Johnston, who is connected with the Aladdin Ready-Cut Homes Company, is at present playing the lead in the current Campbell comedy under production at the Fine Arts studio.

OPPOSITE HOXIE

Evelyn Nelson has been selected to enact the feminine lead with Jack Hoxie in his latest western under the direction of Roy Clements.

IN SUPPORT OF PARROTT

Ethel Boardhurst, Mark Jones, George Rowe, and "Sunshine Sammy," will appear in support of "Paul" Parrott in his forthcoming Roach comedy.

CHANLEY WITH HOPE HAMPTON

Lon Chaney has been engaged by Director Clarence L. Brown for a principal role in Hope Hampton's next First National feature, "White Faith." Mr. Chaney is at present in Hollywood, but will leave for New York the latter part of next week.

ELLA HALL UNDER HUSBAND'S DIRECTION

Ella Hall has decided to re-appear on the screen and is making a picture at Brunton under the direction of Emory Johnson, her husband. The story is an original by Mr. Johnson and is entitled "The Midnight Call."

GILLINGWATER IN HUGHES STORY

Claude Gillingwater is enacting the leading role in "Remembrance," the Rupert Hughes' story, which the author is personally directing.

ROBERTS LOANED TO TALMADGE COMPANY

Joe Roberts, who is playing the heavy in Buster Keaton's newest untitled comedy, is also enacting a role in "The Divorcee," starring Constance Talmadge, under the direction of Sidney Franklin. The Talmadge company is now on location at Forest Home.

SUPPORTING HOPE HAMPTON

E. K. Lincoln and Edgar Norton are interpreting leading roles in "White Faith," Hope Hampton's next First National picture, under production at the Paragon studios in Fort Lee, N. J.

ENTER THE VAMPIRET

Lena Baskett has been engaged to play the Vampire, a fourteen-year-old flapper, in Marshall Neilan's "Penrod," now being produced at the Hollywood Studios.

GEORGE WALSH IN SERIAL

George Walsh, athletic star, is co-starring with Eileen Sedgwick in "With Stanley in Africa," a new Universal serial which is starting at Universal City.

FOUR CHILD STARS IN "PENROD"

Four child-stars are being used in the picturization of "Penrod": Wesley Barry, star of "Dinty," "Sunshine Sammy" Morri- son, star of Hal Roach comedies; "Lady Peggy" Montgomery, star in Century comedies, and Gordon Griffith who has just signed a contract to star in his own pictures.

Ben H. Cohen is employed at the Warner Brothers' studio in Hollywood as auditor.

Gladys McClure is among those in "All at Sea," Richard Barthelmess' second starring vehicle for Inspiration Pictures.

Harold Holland is enacting one of the principal male roles in the initial Robert Jackson drama under production at the Lois Weber Studios.

Ralph Lewis will interpret a featured role in "The Midnight Call," starting production at Brunton under the direction of Emory Johnson.

Tom Gubbins, who has spent many years in China, is assisting Director Norman Dawn in handling the Oriental extras in the Chinese sequences of "The Verrilli Pen- cil," Sessue Hayakawa's latest R-C photoplay.

MEDITATIONS

Ever and anon I receive letters from students of screen writing, in which it is assumed that I am as capable as Solomon of solving all vexatious problems. Several lobsters have initiated banal missives in which they deplored the lack of ease and lemons. All of them were not some way by which they could attain a relative economic security while writing their masterpieces. Still others write that they have inside information regarding eternal laws, that "they're in their right places" and that it was selfishness which prompted them to wish to express themselves instead of devoting their energies to family duties—therefore they have quit studying.

Some of my worthy correspondents actually confuse the economy of harmony—yes, they're at peace after turbulent days and hours of struggling with instruction books and ideas! Some speak of successfully resisting the temptation to write; others make their sacrifice for the sake of the children's future. The dominant note, however, of most of these letters is a pitiful questioning, a mere wisp of doubt after sounding the depths of resignation.

To those who wish more security, it can easily be proven that the great artists all driven on insecurity: that too much ease is not conducive to strong, vital, creative efforts. It was Emerson who said: "A man never rises so high as when he knows not whether he is going."

To the self-concealed unselfish ones it might be said: Give when you've something to give; don't try to give of your own emptiness—do a lot of getting first. Then some day you'll give unconsciously, out of some overflowing abundance.

Any coward can resist temptation! The free, unshackled spirit roams everywhere, is not afraid of Life and therefore yields to temptation. The poetimbler soul and add to the beauty of expression.

Why sacrifice for children? Why stint and slave that they may live in dangerous ease, only to have the opportunity to sacrifice, if sacrifice be such a high virtue?

Why spoil their chances for development through struggle?

Many of our profoundest thinkers have questioned the intrinsic value of a university education, but the man who desires to give his children a university education may be far more able to do so through the sale of scenarios than through the sale of groceries or hardware, or bonds.

Why this ridiculous love of the unconditioned—of harmony? Why not hold all lovely things more dear because they move in fugitive solutions rather than in the evasion of struggle, of life dynamic?

Revolt, not quiescence, brings about a harder, richer, finer art expression. Here in America, our smug security has resulted in much slovenliness of spirit—the spirit that produces rapt-time! Contrast this with Russia's music, dancing, literature, the stage. But Russia has suffered, and revolted.

A young woman recently wrote me that her social obligations interfered with her efforts at photoplay writing. She said she couldn't offend numerous friends who visited her frequently.

And why this resigned hospitality to boneheads? Is there any iron in the soul of one who can't conserve herself, who can't be true to the higher aims of her spirit—of a spirit which would thrive far more in solitude than with a lot of braying society gals.

Loss hospitality, less to eat and drink, more undisturbed moments, punctually and diligently observed, for the purpose of study and creation?

Forego self-deception and ban from your presence those human swine who glory in deriding all effort at expression beyond that which solely aims at the production of dollars. Throttle such asinine snickerticks! Starve your body rather than your spirit. As life at best is a gamble, go astray in a fine, magnificent fashion—rather than nag. Don't resign to anything.

Question all values and embark on the infinite ocean of romance and adventure; do not be guilty of the unpardonable sin of omission: the failure to develop latent forces.

The motion picture is dully in need today of new dreams, new viewpoints, lest it grow hopelessly formal and stale. "Eminent" authors and playwrights have failed to revivify the photoplay, having nothing fresh or new to bring to it.

The motion picture needs those untrammelled by tradition and popularity, unknowns who are striving for new values whose futures are not behind them!

"Take no thought for the morrow." This doctrine, professed by millions, is seldom practised, often doubted, and subconsciously repudiated—but these are the first and last words of creation, fixed, eternal.

Life may soon be over; cast doubt to the four winds—study and write while you can; beautify and vitalize your fragment of time.

Let's hear less often from hacknails who are left behind; the clothes of those who water: in the chi to their masters that they can't find time to write photo-plays.

Charles Gerrard arrived yesterday from New York to play the important role of Dr. Crang in "Fawned." J. Parker Read's all-star production soon to be filmed at Ince under the direction of Irwin Willat.

"JOURNEYS THROUGH THE VALLEY OF HEART'S DELIGHT"

The two-reel story of Santa Clara Valley, California, and the city of San Jose, is find release in the coming picture campaign which has been launched to film the story of the United States, showing every section, its advantages, attractions, resources and opportunities. The films as completed will be released through the exchanges of National Non-Theatrical Motion Pictures, Inc.

Although one picture of this kind means comparatively little, a series of pictures showing every section in the United States will mean much. The announcement that 184 motion pictures in a worth campaign of Pictures of America is now ready for release is significant. This film will serve more or less as a model for pictures to be taken in the sections of the country.

The film opens with lovely scenic views of fruit trees in blossom in the valley noted for its orchards. The caption "San Jose, a City of Orchards," is followed by a series of panoramas of homes but all so liveable! We take a hurried trip down town to the business section, then up in an airplane to get a view of city and valley. In other views of grammar and high schools, of Santa Clara and Stanford Universities; of the old missions of Santa Clara, San Jose, San Juan Batista and of the modern churches of today; the blossom festival; an apricot orchard in fruit; thousands of trunks drying in the sun; then an auto trip over the mountains to the beach at Santa Cruz and back through the state redwood park; a visit to Alum Rock Canyon and its mineral springs in grooves; the nurseries and children's playgrounds; a trip to the moon via the Lick Observatory and its famous telescope; back to earth and a visit to the Near East, into the desert time via the motion picture route.

The public-spirited movement to show America to Americans in films, headed by noted educators and financial, will seek the co-operation of educators and business men all over the country. The plan is to first make the complete series of films which have already been made showing the industries and resources of any community. As yet comparatively few scenes and industries have been filmed and these have never been correlated as a part of a film library of America to which the public could go as to a circulating library and learn how the other half of the picture. These films are most valuable when they form a part of a national film library and such a library is the ultimate goal of the regional film movement, national in its scope.

The plan is to build up region by region, county by county the film story of the United States. Pictures that have already been taken will be used wherever possible. Expert cameramen and experienced directors will be sent, on request to national headquarters, into any area, not just the external characteristics but to get the very soul of the place, its historic background, its industries, all that will be of mutual benefit to the community itself and will serve as an inspiring message to the country at large.

"Journeys Through the Valley of Heart's Delight," the first film to take its place in the "national film library of knowledge," can (Continued on Page 18)
REWARD FOR REPRESENTATION DRIVE

Four Universal exchange managers will accompany Carl Laemmle to Europe next June, when the Universal president makes his annual trip across the Atlantic to study film conditions abroad. The sales managers will go as a reward for efficient service and so that they may benefit from a first-hand knowledge of the moving picture business in other lands.

BRITISHERS VISIT STUDIOS

F. E. Adams, managing director of the Provincial Cinematograph Theatres, Ltd., motion picture circuit in England, has arrived in Los Angeles. Mr. Adams is accompanied by P. G. Ball, booking manager of the English circuit, Robert Atkinson and Hugh Turle.

Mr. Adams and his party will visit and inspect many of the big Los Angeles studios and theatres. They will give their attention particularly to the independent studios releasing their photoplays through Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

KING ON WESTERN TRIP

Having completed "All at Sea," Henry King, Richard Barthelmess' director, is making a hurried trip to Los Angeles. His visit is in connection with the third picture in which Barthelmess will star for Inspiration Pictures.

NEW THEATRES OPEN

That the business depression throughout the country is gradually passing is evidenced by the numerous new theatres recently built and opened. First National subfranchises have been granted the following new theatres:

NORMA WINNER OF CONTEST

Norma Talmadge has been pronounced the winner of a National Ideal Cast contest conducted by the Motion Picture Magazine. Norma not only won first place as the most popular leading woman, but also took second place as the best character woman.

Gloria Swanson won second place as the most popular leading woman next to Norma. Mary Pickford ran third and Katherine MacDonald was fourth.

Among the child actors Jackie Coogan and Wesley Barry were the favorites.

VISITS R-C STUDIO

R. Bell, a motion picture exhibitor from China, was a recent visitor at the R-C studios in Hollywood, where he witnessed the filming of several scenes in Sessue Hayakawa's latest picture, "The Vermilion Pencil," an adaptation of Homer Leon's novel of Chinese life.

Upon completing her work in the latest Frothingham production, "The Man Who Smiled," Marcia Manon left for Santa Barbara where she will spend a few weeks resting.

ARRANGE CENSOR STANDARD FOR CANADA

Canadian censors are interested in establishing a board of standards for the entire Dominion. A meeting was held recently for that purpose.

N. Y. BOARD OF EDUCATION TO USE "WINNERS OF THE WEST"

The Board of Education of the City of New York has made arrangements with the Universal Film Manufacturing Company to use "Winners of the West," the new thrill-from-history serial, as an aid to students in the various American history classes of the 550 city schools.

VISITING STATES

H. Hiraoa, proprietor of Kagetsuan, an amusement park and theatre in Tourum, Kanagawa, Japan, has been touring the United States and filming many scenes of interest in the big cities.

Mr. Hiraoa is making plans for producing pictures on his return to Japan.

FORMERLY WITH MORGAN DANCERS

Ramón Samaniegos, playing the role of Rupert of Hentzau in Rex Ingram's newest production for Metro, "The Prisoner of Zenda," formerly was a member of the Marion Morgan dancing troupe.

Mr. Samaniegos has played but one important screen role, that of leading juvenile in "The Rubaiyat," before undertaking his present role with Rex Ingram.

DENOUNCES "THE SEMI-VIRGIN"

Magistrate MacAyn of New York has denounced as effeminate and purposely vulgar the comedy, "The Semi-Virgin," which has been running in the Elinthe theatre in New York City. The play is purported to reveal the doings of Hollywood picture stars in their leisure hours.

HAS HOSPITAL SHOWING

William Christy Cabanne's most recent R-C production, "The Barricade," recently was released to the means of giving an evening of entertainment to the inmates of the National Jewish Hospital for Consumptives at Denver, Colorado.

Hollywood hears that Mary Pickford is to return before January 15th to prepare to film a story in which she will put aside the "curls" and play a dramatic role. First Miss Pickford will film "Tess of the Storm Country."

O. N. (Rube) Hardy, heavy man with the Larry Semon Vitaphone comedy company, and Miss Myrtle Reeves are receiving congratulations upon their marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Hardy will be at home to their friends at 2185 Russell avenue, Hollywood.

Theater-owners will have an opportunity to see Alice Lake in musical dance numbers when her current picture for Metro, "Lute," is released.

Jack White, W. W. Rarrity and Harry Wright have returned to the Brunton studios from a hunting trip near Big Bear.

Caroline Rankin has been signed by Max Linder, the Gallic comedian, for a role of consequence in his next comedy. (Continued on Page 16)

AT UNIVERSAL

"Barney," Herbert Rawlinson's current stellar production, is practically completed. "Barney" is the second production to be directed by Hobart Henley with Rawlinson in the starring role. "Cheated Hearts" was the first.

Production on Tod Browning's current directorial effort, "Kind Deeds," starring Gladys Walton, is drawing to a close. David Howard is playing the lead opposite Miss Walton.

The Golden Gallow," Miss Du Pont's starring vehicle, just completed under Paul Scardon's direction, has gone into the cutter's hands. Jack Mower plays the masculine lead and Edwin Stevens and Douglas Gerard the chief heavy roles.

The last turn on the camera crank has been made on the special production, "Wild Honey," starring Friciee Dean, under the direction of Wesley Ruggles.

Marie Prevost is vacationing following the completion of her latest picture, "Cupid Incon." Clarence Badger directed it from Doris Schroeder's comminity of a story by Irving G. Thalberg.

Albert Russell is directing Art Acord in "The Triple Cross," a Northwest Mounted Police story.

Preparations are being made for the filming of the second of the series of six two-reel police reporter stories entitled "Ne'd of the News," starring Percy Pembroke.

With House Peters and Virginia Valli in the leads, Director King Bagot is progressing with his present production, "Human Hearts."

AT METRO

Preparations for the filming of Gareth Hughes' next starring picture, an adaptation of Blanche Brace's Saturday Evening Post story, "The Adventures of a Ready Letter Writer" have been started. George D. Baker, who has directed Mr. Hughes in his four previous productions, again will handle the star. This is Mr. Hughes' fifth Metro starring picture since he signed a year ago.

"Garments of Truth," which was his first, was recently released, while "The Hunch," and "Little Boy Aces," are scheduled to be shown in the near future. "Stay Home," his most recent effort is in the process of cutting. Bayard Veiller, stage producer and playwright, is about to produce one of his own original stories. Bert Lytell, star of the production, one of which Mr. Veiller is director, will appear in the stellar role. The story has been prepared for the screen by Lena C. Coffee.

Rex Ingram and the company with which he is filming "The Prisoner of Zenda," are at Big Bear Lake, shooting scenes for the Hope story.

tional exterior scenes for the picturization of Jackson Gregory's novel, "Judith of Blue Lake," under the direction of Colin Campbell.

Doris May is well started upon her third production, "Boy Crazy," which William A. Seiter is directing.

Norman Dawn, directing Susse Hayakawa's latest picture, "The Vermilion Pencil," has been making a series of Chinese street scenes in which several hundred Orientals appear.

LESKER RETURNS

Irvirg M. Lesser, general manager of the Western Pictures Exploitation Company, returned from New York this week, completing a sales trip in behalf of independent producers now operating in Hollywood.

GRACE PIKE

FILM INDORED

The Motion Picture Committee of New York and of the National Council for the limitation of Armament, through its chairman, Rebecca Skinner, has indorsed Edu-cational's latest reel of Sketchographs by Julian Ollendorff, called, "What's the Limit?" This subject, based on the world's great need for peace, is to be released within a few days by Educational.

FROTHINGHAM PRODUCTION BEING ASSEMBLED

"The Man Who Smiled," the J. L. Frothingham production to be released through First National early next year, is now being cut and assembled at the Brunton Studios where it was produced.

TITLE CHANGED

"Why Girls Leave Home," the recently completed Hallroom Boys Comedy, has been retitled "Wise Girls Leave Home."

HOXIE STARTS NEW WESTERN

Jack Hoxie last week completed the cutting and titling of his latest, "Under Orders," and has started preparations for his next picture as yet entitled. Mr. Hoxie will be directed by Roy Clemenis.

CABANNE FILM LISTED BY LEAGUE

William Christy Cabanne's most recent R-C production "The Barricade," was included in the list of subjects issued recently by the National Motion Picture League and recommended as a "family film." "The Barricade" is based on an original story by Dr. Daniel Carson. In the cast are Kenneth Harlan, Katherine Spencer, William Strauss, Eugene Borden, Dorothy Richards and others.

AT ROACH STUDIOS

Harry "Snub" Pollard's comedy called "Years to Come," has been titled by H. M. Walker and will be shipped to New York in a few days. Mr. Pollard is making a blacksmith comedy this week with Marie McDonald playing the chief role.

Two reels have been assembled of Harold Lloyd's current comedy, now titled "He Who Has Estates." Lloyd expects to finish the comedy by Christmas.

"Paul" Parrott will start work shortly on his next comedy under the direction of Charles Parrott.

AT VITAGRAPH

William Duncan's new picture will be titled "Man Hunters," by James Oliver Cur-wood. Production started this week.

It is expected that Antonio Moreno will shortly be seen in serial work again.

Lucile Carisle has replaced Ann Hastings as leading woman in Larry Semon's serials.

GRANDON SERIAL STARTS

Plans for Warner Brothers' newest serial entitled, "Shadows of the Jungle," which Frank J. Grandon will direct, are well under way.

Hutton Metzger is the leading male role. The leading woman has not yet as been selected. Jack Richardson will play the "heavy."

NORMA'S LATEST RETITLED

Norma Talmadge arrived last week in Hollywood where she will rest two months before starting work on "The Duchesse De Langeais."

Her next First National release, to follow "The Wonderful Thing," will be "Love's Redemption," formerly titled "Regeneration Wives." Harrison Ford and Montaimeac" Love play the principal parts opposite Miss Talmad" ge and others in the cast are Cooper Cliffe, Michael M. Barnes, E. Fernandez, Fraser Conter, Ida Waterman, Maria Chambers and Charles Browne. Many of the scenes in this picture were made in the West Indies, where Miss Talmadge and her company spent nearly four weeks.

This screen play will be released some time in December, and will have its initial New York showing at the Strand Theatre.

HAYAKAWA'S PLAY READY FOR RELEASE

Susse Hayakawa's recently completed R-C production, "Streets of the Flying Dragon," is ready for release. Mr. Hayakawa's is known to come as screen as Tsuru Aoki, appears opposite the star in the leading female role, and others in the cast are Goro Kino, Misao Seki, Toyo Fujita and H. Konishi.

"LITTLE BOY BLUE" TO BE SCREENED

Kathleen Clifford is devoting her spare time to writing a screen adaptation of "Little Boy Blue." When it is produced it is likely that Miss Clifford will play the title role.

L. I. STUDIO TO RE-OPEN

Jesse L. Lasky states that the Paramount Long Island Studio will reopen in April.

Marshall Neilan took his players recently to the Sells-Floto circus during its appearance at Riverside, and photographed a number of scenes for the circus episode in "Penrod."

"Dick" Hatton photographed interior scenes at the Berwilla Studio this week and completed his picture, the title of which has been changed to "The Black Ranch" to "The Fightin' Fool."

the thing but that the trappings are. In other words, it is belittling the importance of the play, upon which the entire industry has built.

In the second place, added numbers often take up so much of the program time that the feature picture is "raced" by the projectionist in order to maintain a time-table schedule. This works grievous injustice alike to audience and to author, director and players.

In the third place, this custom is increasing the cost of exhibition to such a prohibitive figure that many exhibitors are forced out of business by the loss they must sustain, and admission prices are increased to such extent that we lose an important and loyal Filling—business economic—portion of our public.

In the opinion of this association, whose members are dedicating their lives to the betterment of motion pictures, the over-elaborate prologue is a useless adjunct to the feature picture, often even destroying dramatic effect and turning the climax to anti-climax; the place for vaudeville is in the vaudeville house, and the greater portion of the picture-going public prefers its motion picture comedy and drama "straight"; while the musical accompaniment is an invaluable part of picture presentation and is working wonders in furthering musical culture in this country, expensive orchestras are unnecessary and often in poor taste.

The Motion Picture Directors Association believes that these theatrical features have been brought to become such an important part in American picture programs through a mistaken sense of showmanship and in some cases mere personal rivalry between managers. We believe that extravagant presentation is futile because it does not increase the attractiveness of motion pictures to the general public. Sincerely yours,

W.M. D. TAYLOR, President, Motion Picture Directors' Association.

IN JACKSON ALL-STAR CAST

Correan Kirkham and Lulu Warrenton have been engaged to handle the principal feminine roles in the latest all-picture production which Hope Loring and Jackson Read are directing for Robert Jackson Productions.

LE SAINT'S ASSISTANT

Robert N. Lee, formerly assistant to Penhryn Stanlaws at Lasky's, has been appointed chief assistant to Director Edward J. Le Saint of Realart.

Rudolph Valentino, who recently completed work in the George Melford production, "Moran of the Lady Letty," featuring Dorothy Dalton, has been engaged for the male lead in "Beyond the Rocks," starring Gloria Swanson.

GAUDIO CINEMATOGRAPHER FOR

TALMADGE

Antonio Gaudio, for over one year chief cameraman for J. L. Frohnhisham, will "shoot" Norman Trotwood's next picture for release through First National. The production will be made on the Brunt lot.

IN BINNEY CAST

Jack Mulhall again plays the male lead opposite Constance Binney in her newest photoplay for Realart. Edythe Chapman and Bertram Grassby appear also in support.

WITH NEW COMPANY

Jack Dougherty has been chosen to enact a principal role in the untitled drama which the Robert Jackson Productions is making at the Loew Weber Studios.

Gloria Hope is playing the principal feminine role in Jackie Coogan's forthcoming production under the direction of Jerome Storm.

Walter Law left recently for San Francisco to play an important part at the Pacific Studios, Inc., in San Mateo, under the direction of Jacques Jaccard.

George Hackathorne is enacting an important role in "Human Hearts," King Baggott's production of the Hal Reed melodrama.

Maude George, who will be remembered for her work in Loew Weber productions, has just finished a role of prominence in "The Count of Monte Christo," produced for Fox by Emmett J. Flynn.

Louise Lee, sister of Virginia Lee, is playing in support of Johnny Hines in "Torchy's Luck," the latest of the Torchy Comedy series for Educational. Miss Lee recently finished work in Richard Barthelmess' latest feature.

Veatrice Joy, who played one of the leading roles in Cecil B. de Mille's "Saturday Night," has been engaged as leading woman for Mr. Melchian in his next production for Lasky, entitled "The Proxy Daddy," under the direction of Alfred Green.

Lynn Reynolds has chosen William Conklin for a noteworthy role in his new production at Fox. Conklin recently finished a character lead with Anita Stewart under the direction of Fred Niblo.

C A M E R A !

Miss Tanner has been appointed casting director of the Realart Studio while Mrs. Hallett is away.

Thelma Worth is leading woman with Monty Banks in the newest Warner Brothers' comedy, "Be Careful."

Dai Clavson is doing the camera work on Anita Stewart's latest picture, "The Woman He Married," now approaching completion at the Louis B. Mayer studio.

William Moran is enacting the role of Slim Powell in Mark Twain's "The Jumping Frog," a Frederick G. Bradbury production nearing completion at Universal.

Claire McDowell is a member of the all-star cast of "The Midnight Call," an Emory Johnson picture under production at the Brunton studios.

George Stewart, brother of Anita Stewart, is a member of the cast of "All at Sea," starring Richard Barthelmess, which is now nearing completion.

Keene Thompson has joined the Hal E. Roach forces as scenario writer and will collaborate with Charles Parrott on scripts for "Snub," Pollard and "Paul" Parrott.

Robert E. Hewes, author, has been appointed to the staff of the Hollywood Daily Citizen. Before coming to California Mr. Hewes was engaged in newspaper and magazine editorial work in the east.

Florence Hale (Mrs. Jay Hunt), has finished her role in Zane Grey's picturization of his novel, "Wildflower," under the direction of Elwood Hay and Jean Her-Sholt at the Brunton studios.

MAYOR PRESENTS NORMA WITH KEY TO THE CITY

When Norma Talmadge, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Margaret Talmadge, and the President of her Company, Joseph M. Schenck, arrived in Los Angeles recently, Mayor George E. Cryer presented Miss Talmadge with a huge golden key to the city.

Representatives from the resident producers and stars, releasing their films through Associated First National Pictures, Inc., joined in the reception, and presented Norma with floral tributes.

Mayor Cryer was accompanied by Sylvester Weaver, President of the Chamber of Commerce, and E. H. Rice, President of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Assn. Constance Talmadge who had preceded Norma to the Coast three weeks earlier, was on hand, accompanied by Natalie Talmadge Keaton, and Buster.

CHRISTIE STUDIOS HOSTS FOR BUSINESS MEN'S CLUB

The Christie studios, Sunset and Gower streets, will be the scene of the next get-together of the Hollywood Business Men's Club. This is a business and social organization including the leaders in all lines of trade and industry in the Hollywood section.

Gloria Swanson starts work this week on Elinor Glyn's "Beyond the Rocks," under the direction of Sam Wood. Jack Cunningham prepared the adaptation of this story.

Producer George Melford, having completed "Moran of the Lady Letty," will probably take a few weeks' vacation before starting another production.

After a couple of weeks' seclusion in Manhattan, Thomas Meighan returns presently and will start immediately on his next picture, temporarily titled "The Proxy Buddy." Alfred Green, who recently directed Mary Pickford in "Little Lord Fauntleroy," etc., has been engaged to direct this picture.

It is expected that William de Mille will start work about the 20th of December on his new picture, "Across the Continent," with Wallace Reid starts next week under the direction of Philip E. Rosen. This is an original story and scenario by Byron Morgan. The company will go on location presently.

Under the direction of Paul Powell, Dorothy Dalton will start her star picture, "Thieves' Valley," adapted by Benham Marie Dix from Vinny E. Roe's story, this week. She will have as her leading man Jack Mower, who played one of the leading parts in Cecil B. de Mille's "Saturday Night."

UNIVERSAL RELEASES

TO PRODUCE IN JAPAN

Director Hal Norfolk expects to make a trip to Japan shortly and intends while there to film several stories.

The Denver Dixon company is at present working on its third feature production for White-Goodman, "The Shell's Passion," in which Marlin Lars is featured with W. McCormick as the Shell and Robert Burns as the American.

The Paul Gerson Picture Corporation is in no way connected with the Pacific Studios of San Mateo as previously stated. The Gerson Studios are located in San Francisco.
Copyright Before and After Publication

By Irving Baltimore

"The actor is a sculptor who carves his image in snow," said Lawrence Barrett. Our courts may have very aptly quoted this epigram as reason for their failure to regard production on the stage as publication. The circumstances surrounding the usual exhibition of this character, its pantomime and oral utterance evince no intention to dedicate the play to the use of the public, and intention is a governing factor.

Wherefore, until a play has been printed, the dramatist retains all rights, without the observation of any law, for publication of an intellectual creation marks the time when copyright statutes must be observed.

Publication is such a communication to the public, or dissemination of a work, as renders it available and easily accessible to public scrutiny, indicative of an intention to abandon the exclusive privilege to multiply or sell. Thus, an oral lecture delivered to a class of students is not a publication within the meaning of the copyright statutes, and its author is not thereby deprived of his exclusive right; likewise, the enactment of a play dedicates no right to the public, for the purpose is plainly limited; and there appears no intention to part with any title to the lecture or the play, as the case may be. The printing of a book is no evidence of forfeiture of the author's rights, and only unrestricted distribution or sale thereof would compel the regard the copyright act to safeguard his title.

Prior to publication, copyright, being inherent in the work itself, no law need be complied with, no prescribed act performed, to protect and preserve one's right in literary or artistic property. However, on publication the copyright statutes apply and govern one's rights. The law implies that on failure to negative such presumption by compliance with statutory provisions prescribed in that respect, publication of a work by its author conclusively shows an intention to waive exclusive right therein, but to dedicate, without restriction, to the use of the public. Thereafter, it is public property, and the author, or those who subsequently desire title, can assert no right superior to that of a stranger.

Gene Lowry has completed the cast for his current play of Lowry-Tuttle Productions in work at Fine Arts studio.

The A. Z. Walker Productions, producing "The Widow's Mite," with Alfred G. Kobs as leading man, is on location at Chehalis and Hillside for ten days.

Victor Hugo Halperin, scenarist of the Cactus Features, costarring Mary Aye and "Bob" Reeves, has completed three original stories and continuities for these players.

Otto Lederer has finished his engagement at Goldwyn in "Hungry Hearts," and is contemplating a tour on Pantages' time.

Prints of the J. L. Frothingham spectacular, "A Bride of the Gods," are now being shipped to New York for general distribution through the agency of Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

be secured by schools, colleges, chambers of commerce, boards of trade and other organizations through National Non-Theatrical exchanges in various sections of the country.

All communities owning films of this kind which they may be willing to contribute to the national film library are urged to send them or write offering them to National Non-Theatrical headquarters at 232 W. 58th St., New York City. The sooner all available films are assembled at a central point so that educators interested can learn what has been done and what remains to be filmed the sooner the nation wide movement, which has the hearty endorsement of visual educators in many sections, will get under way.

ENGLISH VISITOR

F. V. Russell, official of the Great Eastern Railway of England, was a guest recently of Charles H. Christie, of the Christie Film Company. Mr. Russell is in this country in connection with important railway projects in Canada.

Fred Caldwell, director of the Commonwealth Motion Picture Producers, has signed a contract to produce a series of twelve comedy dramas with western settings. Mr. Caldwell will enact the leads himself, and announces that the "515," the first of the series is completed, and the second is now being finished at the Bachman Studio.

The Tru-Art business office at the Hollywood Studios are being remodeled to accommodate a larger staff.

Ora Carew, being featured in Tullar Tru-Art Productions, is taking a vacation at Big Bear Lake.

Dorothy Logan has just returned from a two months' trip to New York, Boston and Washington.

Director Fred Becker of the Becker and Tullar Tru-Art Productions is being assisted in the cutting room by a Hollywood clergyman. Becker recently concluded "The Power," which has a semi-religious twist.

A Dearth of Picture Youth

As a profession our greatest misfortune is our lack of genuine youth, an unhappy condition which is marking nine-tenths of today's featured performances with either forced inanity or stereotyped sophistication. This is because the average leading men and women are in one of two pitiable states. They are unavoidably and embarrassingly advanced in years or they suffer from a startlingly uneven mental combination which renders their knowledge of art and its inseparable complement, realism, entirely negligible, while lending them an over-amount of that reprehensible affectation, commonly termed worldly wisdom. This latter applies to our ingenules and juveniles who, having many years to the good of Mary Pickford and Charlie Ray, scorn to be truly young in spirit with these two beloved personalities.

If youth and romance were not one and the same thing and if most fiction were not grounded upon romance, then consideration would not be necessary here. However, our audiences are now demanding "the real thing" from their cinema favorites; our producers are still desiring big returns upon their investments and our actors are invariably needing engagements. What is the answer, or rather, what will it be when more pressure is brought to bear upon the subject?

The populace must be convinced as well as just apparently catered to and although thousands of fans may yet be so simple as to enjoy a love story of adolescence, a comedy-drama with regular kids living the great adventure for the first time, it doesn't follow that they are dumb enough to appreciate the casting of Tommy Meighan and Louise Glauin the principals. Neither are Lila Lee and Gaston Glass the world's idea of youngsters, granting that their years are perhaps sufficiently few as to meet requirements.

If we entrust our girl and boy parts to middle-aged performers and expect the people not to doubt our intelligence because we desire to pretend that dramatically age means nothing and that our choices are all excellent interpreters, we have made the falsest of moves. When we place blame of the camera into any sort of human beings we are not only sacrificing beauty, but are setting up distorted standards for the modern juvenile mind to pattern. Certainly the first is foolish; the second dangerous.

Other than an observation to the effect that possibly our star picking methods have not been based upon wholesomeness in many cases, we have no solution to offer. Nevertheless, we believe that the theatre and studio have a great supply of competent youth hanging on just awaiting a real opportunity to be developed.

The wise director will look about him even if it upsets previously laid out systems and give the likely aspirant his chance. We are in dire need of more Bobby Harrons, May McAvoys and Garreth Hughes to rejuvenate our art and to justify our romance.

—F. R.

The Titler is Upbraided

"Variety" has, as usual, a picture "kick" to register this week. What is more remarkable is that the current complaint has a meritorious foundation. If the treatment is somewhat exaggerated upon—well, we must pursue drastic methods to be effective, you know.

"If 'too many cooks spoil the broth,' how much are—no, 'too many'? This daffy! query is prompted by the growing nuisance of preliminary screen footage that an audience has to sit through before the picture play begins. Count 'em.

"First comes an introductory strip, an animated cartoon serving notice that the screening is 'A Neighborhood Theatre Co., Inc., presentation.' From this there are 14 distinct steps before the play actually begins, to-wit: The title of the play, name of the star, name of the producer, name of the distributing company, name of the author, name of the director, name of the scenario writer, name of the cameraman, name of the art director, name of the employee who edited the film and wrote the titles, a necessary record that the New York State Censor Commission has psychoanalyzed the picture and found it reasonably legal together with a license number, the fact that the National Board of Review has also put the stamp of approval on it and finally a rod or two of 'lead title' setting forth in print the precept and moral of the story.

"And that isn't all. Once the picture starts and the audience gets interested in its action the play is constantly being interrupted by the distracting breaks of long titles, so elaborate that they have to be made in type so small they cannot be read from the back rows of an ordinary neighborhood theatre. No one argues against brief titles necessary to clarify the action, but the intrusion of a title writer's comedy or philosophizing upon the attention of an audience is a gross impertinence. Presently unless someone checks the tendency there won't be any room left for the pantomimic action of the play and the title man will have the screen to himself."
CHRISTIE COMPLETES TWO

Two new comedies scheduled for release in January have been completed at the Christie studios within the week. The first of these is "A Barnyard Cavalier," featuring Bobby Vernon and directed by Al Christie, from the story by Frank R. Conklin.

The other comedy finished is "One Stormy Knight," by Walter Graham in which Dorothy Devore is featured. This picture, which was directed by Harold Beaudine, also includes Jay Belasco, Earl Rodney and Alice Masion in its cast.

CONNIE'S LATEST RETITLED

The January release for Constance Talmadge, which was formerly titled "Good for Nothing," has now been definitely called "Polly of the Pollies." This next First National is an original story especially written for Constance, by John Emerson and Anita Leos, and directed by Mr. Emerson. Those prominent in the cast are Kenneth Harlan, George Fawcett, and Frank Lator. The New York showing of "Polly of the Pollies" will be held at the Strand, January 22rd.

TO FILM NEW SERIES

Bob Horner is directing a new series of western productions, work on which has already started at the Balshofer Studios, under the supervision of Fred Hiorns and Carl Medson.

AT UNITED STUDIOS

(Formerly Brunton's)

Constance Talmadge and her company have returned from location near Big Bear and have commenced work on the first interior scenes of "The Divorcee." Norma Talmadge's first production, will be under way shortly.

Before the completion of "A Doll's House," Nazimova will shoot some outdoor snow scenes at one of the nearby mountain locations.

Jackie Coogan is beginning the fourth week of production on his second starring vehicle, the title of which has not been selected.

Jane Novak and the Chester Bennett company have returned from location at Big Bear and are shooting interiors for "The Startling."*

The B. B. Hampton company is back from Idewild, where exteriors for "Wildfire" were filmed.

Emory Johnson will leave shortly for San Francisco to film scenes for his personally directed production "The Midnight Call." Jack White of Hamilton White comedies is preparing to produce his fourth story, starring Lige Conley.

Richard Walton, Sally has arrived from New York and is conferring with Director James Young, who will soon start production on "The Masquerader," starring Guy Bates Post.

Allen Holubar will be ready to begin the preparation of his next photoplay entitled "The Soul Seeker," within the next two weeks.

Ronald Walsh is leaving shortly for New York with prints of his "Kindred of the Dust." Upon his return he will begin work at once on another story.

READY FOR RELEASE

The first production of the series of six pictures starring Leah Baird entitled "Don't Doubt Your Wife," has just been completed at Culver City. Playing in leading support of Miss Baird are Emory Johnson and Edward Peil. James W. Horne, directed.

AT UNIVERSAL

"The Rat Trap" is the title of Miss Du Pont's new starring vehicle which has just entered production under Paul Scardon's direction. The scenario was prepared by Arthur Statter, from the novel by Wolfe Wyl bard's.

"The Land of the Lost" has entered production with Hoot Gibson in the stellar role under the direction of Jack Conway, who recently completed the picturization of Clarence Budington's "Wards of the North," with Frank Mayo.

Edward Laemmle is directing the picturization of "The Days of Buffalo Bill," starring Art Acord. The ranch owned by Edgar Rice Burchoughs, a few miles from Universal City, will be the scene of much of the shooting of earlier episodes.

Irvings G. Thalberg has assigned Clarence Badger, who directed "Cupid Incog" with Marie Prevost, to handle the reins on the next Prevost venture.

Before the start on Eddie Polo's next serial, a tale of the life of Robinson Crusoé, Perry N. Vekroff, director, is guiding the star through a series of short western and northern photoplays. The current one is "The White Messenger."

Continuity is being prepared for "The Storm," a forthcoming Reginald Barker production which will be filmed with an all-star cast.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Harry "S Gab" Pollard is at work on his latest comedy in which Marie Mosquini is leading lady and Tom Kennedy, "heavy," R. J. Cedar is directing. H. W. Walker is titling Mr. Pollard's latest comedy, "The Boy Wows," scenes for which were taken at Venice. The comedy will be previewed in a few days and shipped to New York.

"Paul" Parrott has begun the production of a Greenwich Village comedy supported by Ethel Peabody, Mark Jones, George Rowe, "Sunshine Sammy" and Eddie Baker. The sketch was written by Kay Grey who will direct the picture with Charles Parrott in a supervising capacity.

Hal Roach will put on two more comedy units after the first of the year. He will feature Harry "S Gab" Pollard in two-reelers according to his present plans, the comedies to have more of the situation element. Charles Parrott and Keene Thompson will write the scripts.

AT METRO

Rev. Ingram and twenty members of his company have returned to the studios after spending a week in the San Bernardino mountains filming exteriors for "The Prisoner of Zenda," Mr. Ingram's newest production.

Harry Beaumont is busily engaged editing "The Five Dollar Baby." Viola Dana's recently completed picture, which he directed. Bayard Veiller has completed casting for Bert Lytell's new picture, an untitled story, from the pen of Mr. Veiller.

Tom Mix's new picture, made under the title, "At Your Service," has been retitled "Sky-High."

"Any Wife," starring Pearl White, is scheduled for release January 1st.

"THE CALL OF THE NORTH"
A considerably more enthusiastic audience than is ordinarily collected in a Los Angeles showhouse greeted Paramount's "The Call of the North" at its Granada (San Francisco) opening this week. For that matter the picturesque northwoods story, taken from Stewart Edward White's "The Call of the North House," should be well received by it for it is as attractive an offering of its kind as has been released for some time. Presenting several different thrills and a pretty romance backboned against magnificent scenery, the film story is carefully executed by an irreplaceable cast which has at its head Jack Holt.

This is the first individually featured Lasky picture that the dependable performer of "The Little American" and other dayers, has had, but his ability and following warrant the promotion. He is seen here as Ned Stewart, a young man who has masqueraded under an assumed name for many years that he might apprehend and punish the murderer of his father. Holt is a virile masculine type whose hero pose is just enough to be romantic. The combination is fascinating, but wholesome too.

In the leading feminine role, Virginia rated, is happily established Madge Bellamy. Her action is not involved, but it is dispatched with a simple artistry that would have occasioned special attention even had we not reviewed this actress' exceptional interpretation in "Hail the Woman." Miss Bellamy's youthful radiation is of rare and unforgettable sort.

Noah Beery could not be more advantageously situated than he is in Albrecht, the ruthless Factor whose smallness of spirit is displayed in his unreasonable jealousy and love of power. Beery always takes liberties in his characterization. They are entirely justified here.

 Achille, a most unusual French Canadian, is done in this screen story by the unequaled MacDonald whose interpretations are invariably pleasing.

Edward Martindel, Helen Ferguson, Will Jim Hatton, Jack Herbert and Jane Keckley all perform the best possible.

"The Call of the North" (inevitably mis-titled by the way) makes a picture far superior to the story. It is an adaptation that can't disappoint. Joseph Henabery directed it with Faxon Dean at the camera. Excellent work must be credited to each.

"STRANGER THAN FICTION"

We greatly fear that Katherine MacDonald's latest starring produc- tion, "Stranger Than Fiction," is going to prove too altogether "strangely" incoherent to appeal to the average picture patron. However, commendation should be paid the film, as the style is high and therefore someone must be lauded for a radical idea that just missed taking on "Go and Get It" proportions, but besides a story lack sufficient to narrow its possibilities for entrance into big league stuff, it suffers strangulation in the way of a careful, dodgy and incompetent production.

We have always contended that the picture within a picture proposition was feasible of no little value but we cannot point to its ever having been properly accomplished for proof. Here the idea is unusually jumbled in an attempt at a surprise finish and then explained only unsatisfactorily. That the burlesque introduction has much clever humor only makes the eventual flop the more pitiable.

To this point MacDonald is much better than usual in Diane Brexel, the society belle heroine with a bad, would be much; on the other hand she easily maintains her standard with a mediocrity well.

managed role. It is not so disastrous for actresses of her type to gain avoiduropus as it is in the case of the ingenues.

David Winter, in the male lead, doesn't give a spiritually portrayed by any manner of means, but for that matter the amateur detective, which he alternately negates and ignores, is not in itself spiritual.

Wesley Barry is the one high light in the picture as Freckles, another quaint little Dinky, with, however, too greatly outruled footage.

Wade Boteler, in a "chew up the scenery" heavy, the Black Heart, we refuse to take seriously, because we have seen and will again see him in countless worthwhile pieces of work.

J. M. Dunmont, in a satisfactorily handled part, completes the list of principals.

J. M. Barry directed this First National attraction.

CONTEMPORARY CRITICISMS

"THE BONNIE BRIAR CUSH"

(Famous Players-British)

"is one of the best of the foreign made Paramounts. It is an adroit picturization of Ian MacLaren's classic story of the same title admirably directed by Donald Crisp, who also plays a leading role. It is an ex-cellent story of Scottish life of half a century ago, docile and incompetent production.

We have always contended that the picture within a picture proposition was feasible of no little value but we cannot point to its ever having been properly accomplished for proof. Here the idea is unusually jumbled in an attempt at a surprise finish and then explained only unsatisfactorily. motion pictures. But the locale is Scotland, which provides opportunity for picturesque settings, kilts, kelpies, and clans, and what the picture lacks dramatically it possesses scenically."—N. Y. Morning Telegraph.

This story has reached the screen and it is a wonderfully old-fashioned and conventional, for MacLaren's theme has served in a thousand and one patterns since the birth of the photoplay. This generation has to be a trifle old-fashioned with a leaning for quaint sentiment and romance and atmosphere to appreciate it.—M. P. News.

"THE LOTUS EATERS" (Nehlan-First National)

"The person of Barrowmore, a story that certainly is well out of the ordinary in dramatic ingredients, and direction that never misses an opportunity, all control in making 'The Lotus Eaters' one of the most unusual and entertaining pictures of the season. It has all the sure-fire audience qualifications—thrill, comedy, suspense, love interest, beautiful scenic locations, plot and numberless likable characters played by a company of carefully selected types."—M. P. World.

"John Barrowmore, the Byronic, is there this week in 'The Lotus Eaters,' Marshall Nehlan's screen translation of Albert Payson Terhune's story. It is one of the most divertingly satirical productions within memory. And most insidious propaganda for the South Pacific climes. As to the neurotic Jacques Lenoir, i.e., the great Barrowmore is beyond criticism. And as the lovable, poetic visionary, Jacques Lenoir, fils, who never saw a woman until he was 25, he will be understood and applauded by the sophisticated, the tired business man and the effervescent matinee girl. Mr. Nehlan's tropical ensemble is gorgeous and artistic."—N. Y. Morning Telegraph.

"SCHOOL DAYS" (M. P. World)

"has all the whimsical charm of 'The Old Swimmin' Hole' and the exploitation possibilities of a Mickey. It is seven reels of good clean fun, with Wesley Barry the chief fun maker, supported by a well chosen cast. In sets and direction 'School Days;' measures up to any of the recent big productions along this line."—Exhibitors' Herald.

"The eternal small boy to whom a bath is a punishment and a school book an unnecessary evil has been so well portrayed by Wesley Barry in Gus Edwards' 'School Days,' produced by Harry Rapf for Warner Brothers, that this motion picture promises to be a screen gold mine. It has been well done, so well, indeed, that big time and small time audiences alike will find it full of delightful incidents, good acting and the eternal appeal of the touchable youth."—N. Y. Morning Telegraph.

Walter Law has been asked by the Amer- ican Legion to select some of the roles in their all-star revival of "Pinafore" at the Philharmonic Auditorium December 19. Before starting picture work he was a member of the Jackson opera company.

Where to Find People You Know

METRO RE-ENGAGES BURKETT

Bartine Burkett, who made her debut in dramatic roles in support of Gareth Hughes in "Stay Home," his latest Metro picture, has been selected by George D. Baker to play the leading feminine role in "Don't Write Letters," Mr. Hughes' new Metro starring picture, which Mr. Baker is directing.

ADDED TO "PENROD" CAST

The latest child artist to join the Marshall Neilan, "Penrod" company is Bernice Radom, the little girl who portrays "Fanny" as a child in "No Woman Knows," and who appeared to advantage in Allan Dwan's "Forbidden Thing."

ENLARGES STAFF

Mabel Normand has engaged an additional wardrobe woman to take care of the assortment of gowns of various periods which will be worn by the cast of "Sunday," and also has secured the services of Mrs. Sada Nathan for the purpose of dressing the hair of the actresses in her new play.

SUPPORTING PREVOST

The supporting cast for "The Dangerous Little Demon," starring Marie Prevost, includes Robert Ellis in the leading male role; Jack Perrin in the second lead, and Ed Marindale and Herbert Prior as "heavy's."

IN PARROTT COMEDIES

Eddie Baker is a new recruit at the Roach studios, Hal Roach having engaged him to play "heavy" roles in the forthcoming Paul Parrott Comedies. Mr. Baker has made a specialty of eccentric character roles.

Howard Higgin, who directed Wallace Reid in "Rent Free," has been engaged to co-direct Clara Kimball Young.

Lawrence Bradstone has been selected by Bob Horner to play the heavy in "Neath Western Skies," under production at the Balhofer Studios.

Annette De Foe will play an important role in "One Clear Call," under production at the Mayer studio.

Al McClain will photograph the new series of westerns which Bob Horner is directing at the Balhofer studios.

Harry Lamon, who recently returned from an eight weeks' vaudeville engagement in and around San Francisco, is at present working in Eddie Lyons comedies at the Berwilla studios.

Victory Bateman will appear with Bert Lytell in his new Metro picture, an original story by Bayard Veiller, who also is directing the production. Miss Bateman played with Mr. Lytell in "A Trip to Paradise."

WINDSOR IN STAHLS NEXT

John M. Stahl has engaged Claire Windsor as the leading lady in "One Clear Call," his next independent unit production for Louis B. Mayer. Miss Windsor recently appeared in Lois Weber productions.

BREAMER IN NEW LYTELL FILM

Sylvia Breamer again has signed a Metro contract and will enact a leading feminine role in support of Bert Lytell in his new starring picture, an original story by Bayard Veiller. This will be Miss Breamer's second engagement with Metro. Her first was with Mr. Lytell in "The Phantom Bride," his most recent screen success—also a Veiller production.

UNIVERSAL ENGAGES BEDFORD

Barbara Bedford has been assigned the leading feminine role opposite Hoot Gibson in his forthcoming starring vehicle for Universal entitled "The Land of the Lost."

GREGORY IN WESTERN LEAD

Ena Gregory will play opposite Monte Montague in a new series of western productions, which Bob Horner will direct, for release under the Western Classic banner.

PROMOTED

Charles S. Penson, who for five years has been with the Supply department of the Universal New York office, has been promoted to Manager of Supplies.

Mr. Penson succeeds F. W. Talbert, who has been appointed District Auditor for the Western Exchanges. Mr. Talbert left New York for Portland, Oregon, early this week.

HEARN SUPPORTING HAWLEY AND NOVAK

Eddie Hearn, who appears in the leading male role in "The Face of the World," showing at Clune's Broadway this week, is at present playing opposite Wanda Hawley in her current play, "Give All Your Hearts," a Chester Bennett picture under production at Brunton's.

Sidney D'Albrook has signed with Lasky to play a part with Wallace Reid under Phil Rosen's direction in "Across the Continent."

Million Sills has been chosen to interpret one of the two leading male roles in "One Clear Call," John Stahl's next independent production for Louis B. Mayer.

J. Farrell MacDonald is playing a prominent role in Thomas Meighan's current production for Paramount entitled "The Proxy Daddy."

Bob Horner has engaged Monte Montague to carry the title role in his new series of westerns under production at the Balhofer studios.

Edith Yorke and Gloria Davenport are handling prominent feminine roles in "The Land of the Lost," starring Hoot Gibson, just starting production at Universal.

Victor Gibson, recently added to the working forces of the Morante Producing Company of Long Beach as film editor and continuity writer, was formerly associated with Fox, National and Universal.

TRIFLING WITH TRAGEDY

Screen writers should ever bear one point in mind: audiences inevitably resent being tricked. One must take an audience into one's confidence, speak to them in simple and human terms, and never try to outwit them. And then one finds that the characters in a photoplay, and the interplay of motives, only inasmuch as the characters themselves feel confused. An audience, however, likes to be let in on the enigmas, mysteries, motives. One may successfully surprise an audience, but one cannot successfully employ trickery, as that usually connotes a certain contempt of the audience mentality. It is the difference in reactions that affects the success of a screen story—just as a budding friendship is affected. Tell an acquaintance of a surprise in the course of a story, the better, providing that the situations are logical—actually might have happened, so that anything might be expected; but to make an audience think you're attempting one thing and then with some twist at the end show you meant something else all along, is to invite chagrin—that is, in serious drama. In comedy, the characters may have the laugh on another, and on the audience to boot.

True, some of the master fictionists, employing the uttermost irony, have deftly made a seeming tragedy appear ridiculous at the demarcation. With the big passions and the most sacred human precepts involved, they have introduced a note of absurdity or incongruity in their stories. But they addressed and still address a few readers, a relatively scant handful who can see the ridiculous in the tragic—and the tragic in the ridiculous. In other words, we see the airship, the dial, all the alleged disillusioned, those who have pitilessly analyzed threadbare every human concept—those who have junked all the gods and seen Life as an unfathomable absurdity.

One cannot trifl e, however, with the accepted precepts, ideals, and institutions in adolescence, as well as in maturity. Universal disillusioned, they have very concrete ideas as to what is virtuous and expedient; they do not want high romance and passion to be suddenly pierced with the barb of satire or with stinging mirth. Their serious photodramas must remain serious to the bitter—or preferably happy—end. This does not mean that humorous relief is not welcome in the course of the story, but the humor must not be directed against the premises. By the same token, the comedian from the first bit to the final fade-out; only an audience of highly developed people have the intellectual and emotional capacity to guffaw at a human being for several reels and then—as the photodramatist reveals the intrinsic tragedy of the same human being—weep for him.

Case in point, instance: Chaplin, Chaplin wanted to attempt tragedy; there was no question—to those who see deeply or know—of his ability to enact tragic roles; but the public, however, is not interested, and circumscribed to permit this. To think that one who makes one laugh till the sides ache knows aught of misery or hopelessness—why, that would be a ghastly revelation of the eternal skeleton at the feast, of the futility of existence. Our public won't stand for it, and can you blame them? Here is something for screen writers to think about.

SINCERITY

Smart, clever words and phrases have no place in screen writing, unless they actually describe something or someone or some situation. For their own sake, the screenwriters should use plain, unpretentious words, the English of the common tongue.

There is no such thing as fine writing for the screen. There is room for the beginner in screen writing, for screen writers of none too much subtlety or depth, but there is no room for the dilettante. Screen writing may be sincere and valid as no other form ever has; for the obvious reason that it is concerned with essentials and with essentials only. Either Sherwood Anderson or Willa Cather would make excellent screen writers, and photodramas made from the scenarios of either would be genuine human documents—providing they were directed by a man who stood for simplicity and sincerity, unadorned by anything spec- tacular or clever. Neither of these fiction writers employ big words or involved, obscure passages, yet their attaining effects is clear according to their purposes. Any screen writer need possess is feeling, imagination, and a sense of the dramatic—a sense of conflicting values. He need not use tall-browed bookster's delights—those polysyllables that delight the dilettante and often, the connoisseur.

Psychologically, there is another angle to the validity of screen writing. The element of vanity is diminished to a large degree, or even eliminated. The writer of fiction has every opportunity of playing off his own published stuff and the contemplation thereof of his cleverness, his mental agility, his fine nuances. The scenario writer's brain is too big for him and his toms, cleverly, lest the director misunderstand: the screen writer's message must be crystal clear, sincere, and direct. He must sketch his picture in painstaking, minute details—incidentalities that do not admit of too wide interpretation. No public ever reads this scenario, this blue-print. For like the architect's blue-print, or the musical composition of a play, it is meant to be given expression before an audience. Of course, all interpretations are more or less casual. The composition of the F margaret Symphony would be interpreted differently by an lowan band than by an orchestra of excellent musicians directed by Muck or Notkin.

Unfortunately, from the screen writer's standpoint, the completed motion picture production is a finality. It is the first and last interpretation. There are not even the possibilities—from the vanity standpoint—that await the successful playwright, whose work may be interpreted horribly by a small topnotch group, or from the audience standpoint, wherein the authors themselves in simple, honest language: the language of Chekhov, Hamsun, Latzko, Tolstoi. But the language must be pictorial and the story must be dramatic.

THE DRAMATIC PHOTOPLAY

There is a time-worn saying to the effect that "It's not what you do, but the way you do it." Let this be realized. The conscientiousness of the sincere photodramatist. Any photodrama of serious import, to be effective, must be founded on some great passionate crisis, in a realm where values clash—where the reason is perhaps drowned by the powerful cries of the heart; duty versus inclination, the easy or the hard path, the conventional or the transfigured past versus future. Incident is purely secondary—not what the characters do, but the way they become transfigured or changed by the situation. Passion creates incident, the hungry heart makes romance; inner conflict changes the outward scheme of things. Wherever there is a struggle, passion makes the world appear bright or sombre, hopeful or hopeless.

Passion must be the dominant, and must be played in the same key throughout. Not only this, but let nothing of levity or nonsense enter this type of photodrama. It would be as if a conductor introduces a passage out of a trashy popular air in the performance of the Brahms C-Minor Symphony; or as if some cheap roisterer were introduced into the final scenes of "The Dead." Even then at its full stature overawes, is the ambassador of destiny, looming magnificently above mere incident and circumstance; it has taught us with reason to bear with the human, which springs from the reason of passion.

The aim of humorous relief which many writers, screen writers, and directors make much of, often ruins an otherwise well-conceived photoplay, in my opinion, especially if there is a suggestion of laughter. If anything is introduced for light and shade, for contrast, let it be the thing which, while provoking a smile, induces a sub-conscious underrun of pity—and contributes to a rounded characterization. It is the eternal.

The music score of "Hail the Woman," soon to be released by First National, has been arranged by Mischa Gatterson.

AT LASKY'S

Gloria Swanson began work on "Beyond the Rocks" by a trip to Catalina Island for location scenes. Ralphud Valentine, featured with Agnes Ayres in "The Sheik," has been engaged for the leading male role.

Penrhyn Stanlaws returns next week from New York, where he has been enjoying a vacation and will resume production work for Paramount about the first of the year.

William deMille is scheduled to begin a new production, which will be featured with Agnes Ayres and Jack Holt in the leading roles.

The adaptation will be by Clara Beranger, who returned from New York this week, and the title and character of the story will be announced shortly.

Wallace Reid is in San Francisco for location scenes in his new picture, "Across the Continent," by Byron Morgan. Philip E. Roscn is directing and shortly the company will return to the studio, after which they will go on a longer location trip.

Thomas Meighan began work this week on "The Proxy Daddy," under the direction of Alfred Green. Leatrice joy is leading woman.

George Melford left this week for New York to spend the holidays there. He was accompanied by Mrs. Melford. Sometime in January Mr. Melford will return to start a new production.

NEW PRODUCING ORGANIZATION

The Mission Film Corporation, with executive offices at Western and Santa Monica, is ready to start production on its first picture. Clarence Geldert, Leon Rice and Richard Wayne are the officers of the corporation, with Ernest Traxler as General Manager. "Carry On The Race," an original scenario written by Mr. Traxler, has been selected as the initial production, and the first scenes will be filmed next week. Richard Wayne will be starred, with Catherine Murphy, Philppe de Lacy, Lillian Leighton, Arthur Osborn, Margaret Loomis and Winter Hall in the cast. Clarence Geldert will direct.

LATE UNIVERSAL RELEASES

A schedule of short subjects is announced for release by Universal during the closing of the year. It includes six two-reel western dramas, four two-reel comedies, one one-reel comedy, one two-reel newspaper life drama, and the opening of a new serial.

The western dramas feature such stars as Eddie Polo and Lileen Sedgwick. They are, in order of their release, "The Yellow Streak," with Eddie Polo; "The Dream Girl," with Miss Sedgwick; "The Heritage of Hate," with Polo, "The Alarum" with a special cast; "A Ride for a Ranchero," with Polo, and "A Battle of Wits," with Miss Sedgwick.

The "Need of the News," with Percy Pembroke in the featured role, which will be released during the third week of December.

The one reel star comedies are "Heart Breakers," "Shining Your Samples," "Purr Coats and Pants," and "Oh, Nursie!" in addition to the foregoing short subjects, the first episode of the latest serial, "The Secret Four," will be released. The usual bi-weekly release for International News Reels, completes the Universal short subjects schedule.

John Fleming Wilson, short story writer and dramatist, who is writing original stories for the motion pictures, has been under a doctor's care as the result of a recurrence of his war injuries. Wilson was gassed and shell-shocked in service.

PREPARING FREDERICK STORIES

The scenario department at the R.C. Studios in Hollywood is working on the continuity of William J. Locke's novel, "The Glory of Clementina," which has been purchased for Pauline Frederick, "The Black Marriage," an original story by Fred Jack-son, which has its setting in Russia, is also being prepared for Miss Frederick.

William Farnum is working on his first production since his return from Europe under the direction of Herbert Brenon.

LURA ANSON

Joseph Franklin Polan, Ince staff writer, is adapting "The Sunshine Trail," a short story by William Wallace Cook, to the screen for production with Douglas Mac-Lean in the leading role. The feature will be released by carried by First National.

C. Gardner Sullivan is putting the finishing touches on "Someone to Love," his next major feature picture for First National release.

HONOR NEW YORK HEAD

Last week Supervising Director Elmer Harris of Realart and his scenario staff, honored with a dinner at the Writers' Club, William Buhlft, head of the Scenario Department, New York office of Famous Players-Lasky, Frank E. Woods, Supervising Director, Lasky studio, and Will Payne, author now with Realart.

Realart scenarioists, who were co-hosts with Mr. Harris, included Percy Heath, Harvey Thew, Wells Hargraves, Aubrey Stauffer, Milton Schwartz, Eugene Lewis, Douglas Doty, Fred Myton, Thomas Hopkins, Nathan Stedman.

George Siegmann and Casson Ferguson will enact prominent roles in Wanda Hawley's latest starring vehicle under production at Realart.

Baby Maxine Tabanic is playing an important role in Constance Binney's current produced under the direction of Ed. Le Saint.

Victor Potel and Joseph Girard are among those cast in "The Land of the Lost" with Hoot Gibson, which Jack Conway is directing for Universal.

Florence Roberts is back in motion pictures again after a seven-years' absence, and is enacting a prominent role in Constance Binney's current production for Realart, which Edward Le Saint is directing.
Goldwyn Studios, Culver City, Calif., will consider stories submitted in detailed synopsis form, covering the following requirements: (1) Simple human stories such as can happen in every home. Deep, far-reaching, home-developing stories. (2) Simplicity of plot and depth of emotion. (2) Very strong, virile melodrama with unusual situations, and more interesting settings. (4) Very bright, brilliant comedy dramas, telling a real story, and moving briskly to a natural conclusion. All of the above should have as much humor as can possibly be injected. Have no stars, but are featuring Richard Dix, Helene Chadwick, Cullen Landis, and other stars. Scripts should be sent to Paul Bern, Goldwyn Scenario Editor.

Fox Film Company, Hollywood, Calif., will consider synopsis of stories, either original or published, for their various stars as follows: Society drama for Shirley Mason; drama for Jack Gilbert; comedy-dramas and westerns for Tom Mix; Western or outdoor stories for Bill Russell, Thelma Jones; and heavy dramas for William Parmun and Dustin Farnum. All scripts should be addressed to D. A. Epstein, and if unavailable, will be returned within a few days.

R.C Productions, Hollywood, Calif., are in the market for both published and original stories submitted in synopsis form, preferably by trained writers with screen angle. Stories may be of any type suitable for the following stars: Pauline Frederick, Sesqui Harvey, Doris May: also can use stories for special casts. Writers should avoid prechments and propaganda. Scripts should be sent to the Scenario Department, and if unavailable, will be returned within two weeks.

Thos. H. Ince Productions, Culver City, Calif., will consider stories submitted in synopsis form as follows: light comedy for Douglas MacLean, and virile dramas with big theme and unusual twists for special casts with all-star casts. Scripts should be sent to the Scenario Department, and if unavailable, will be returned within two weeks.

Metro Pictures Corp., 800 Cahuenga Ave., can use outdoor stories for Bert Lytell and light comedies or comedy-dramas for Viola Dana. Scripts should be addressed to the Scenario Editor, and if not accepted, will be returned within ten days.

Chester Bennett Production, Brunton Studios, require stories, either synopsis or ideas, suitable for Jane Novak. Must be something very good with new twists. Outdoor stories of the north woods type and small scenes preferred. Stories should be sent to the Scenario Editor, and if not accepted, will be returned within two weeks.

Campbell Comedies, Fine Arts Studios, are in the market for two-reel comedies featuring children and animals, submitted in synopsis form. Send scripts to the Scenario Editor and a report from them can be expected within ten days.

Lasky Studio will consider good stories, either published or original, suitable for their several stars, Betty Compson, Gloria Swanson, Dorothy Dalton, Thomas Meighan, Wallace Reid, etc.; and also unusual stories, with big story treatment for all-star special features. Scripts will be read and reported upon in order of receipt, but should be heard from within three weeks.

Winther-Reynolds Productions, Mayer Studio, 3800 Mission Road, are in the market for two-reel comedies with some drama or action contained, which should be addressed to the Scenario Editor, and will be returned as soon as read, if unavailable.

Coogan Production, Brunton Studio, Hollywood, are in the market for stories, both published and original, suitable for Jackie Coogan, submitted in synopsis form. Scripts should be addressed to A. L. Berstein, care of Coogan Productions, and will be returned in two weeks at the latest, if unavailable.

Texas Guinan Productions, Fine Arts Studio, Hollywood, Calif., require original stories for two-reel western productions, suitable to the character of Texas Guinan and also containing a strong and virile male leading part. The story should, of course, be logical with stunts on and off horseback. All scripts should be sent to Jesse J. Goldburg, Gen. Mgr., will be carefully read and reported on within forty-eight hours after receipt.

Charles R. Seeling Productions, 1240 So. Olive St., Los Angeles, Calif., will consider stories for five-reel westerns, either published or original, with both synopsis and continuity, suitable for the male star, "Big Boy" Williams. Address scripts to the above company, and if unavailable, will be returned at once.

C. L. Chester Productions, 1425 Gower St., Los Angeles, Calif., will consider original stories (synopsis or ideas) for domestic situations, one-reel comedies, carrying fast force action, and opportunity for working out theauce action. Scripts should be addressed to Raymond S. Harrington, Scenario Editor, and if rejected will be returned in one to two weeks.

Christie Film Co., 6101 Sunset Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif., is in the market for original stories for all-star casts, submitted in synopsis form, preferably one and two-reel farce comedies, written around young and likable people, newlyweds, etc. Scripts should be addressed to the Scenario Department, and if unavailable, will be returned within three days.

The R-D Film Corp., Balboa Studios, Long Beach, will consider original stories dealing with Royal Northwest Mounted Police or any other outdoor subject submitted in synopsis for all-star casts. Communications should be addressed to R. S. Roussel, and if rejected scripts will be returned after a week.

Cosmopolitan Productions, New York City. In the market for stories only, submitted in synopsis form, for all-star casts. Scripts should be addressed to John Starbuck, Assistant Editor, Scenario Department.

Sezlinck Productions, West Fort Lee, N. J., will consider stories on plays, books, magazine stories or originals, preferably presented in synopsis form. For special productions anything strong and dramatic, for several characters of equal importance, must be "different," and abundance of opportunities for the very best in picture production. For the company's several stars, stories should be as follows: Comedy-dramas, society and otherwise, in which the star has an unusual role, for Elaine Hammerstein; comedy-dramas or dramas where action is required, preferably stories of typical middle-class American life, for Eugene O'Brien; strong, virile dramas, society, business or unusual stories for Conway Tearle; strong dramas with great acting opportunity, for William Faversham; farce comedies, and swift-moving comedy-dramas, for Owen Moore; comedies or comedy-dramas for Martha Mansfield; dramas in which the leading role is very dramatic and unusual, foreign types in American settings desirable, for Zena Keefe. Address all matter to The Scenario Department of the above named company.

The following studios and production companies are not in the market for stories at present: Talmadge Productions, Frothingham Productions, Louis B. Mayer Productions, Reart Hungarian and Selig-Rock.

Charles Graham Baker has been appointed an editor-in-chief of Vitagraph to succeed George Randolph Chester.

Marion Feducha is cast in Tom Mix's "Arctic Trails," under production at Fox.

The De Brac twins are included in the cast of players for "The Proxy Daddy," Thomas Meighan's latest starring vehicle.

William Moran will interpret the role of "John Wilkes Booth" in the Universal serial about Abraham Lincoln's assassination under the direction of Ed. Lacombe.

Fred Spencer is playing the "heavy" in Jesse Lasky's newest venture for Vitagraph under the direction of Vincent Mermot.

Nelson McDowell, Joe Miller and Merrill McCormack are supporting Monte Montague in the new series of westerns which Bob Horner is making at the Dalhofer studios.

Dorothea Wolbert, George Stanley and Charles Wheslock are cast in Alide Colboun's first starring vehicle for Western Vitagraph entitled "Blue Bell," which is being directed by David Smith.

Herbert Hayes has been selected by George D. Baker for a prominent part in "Don't Write Letters," a new production to be directed by S. Ivor Fesler for Metro, with George Hughes in the stellar role. Mr. Hayes also appeared in "Stay Home," Mr. Hughes' most recent picture.

Canadian Conditions Improving Says Brunet

Paul Brunet, president of Pathe Exchange, Inc., has just returned from a visit to Montreal and Quebec with the information that the financial and business outlook in the Dominion is very promising. The Pathe executive was especially impressed with "the feeling of friendship, even comradeship, for the United States which animates the principal officials as well as the people of Canada," he declared.

On his return to New York Mr. Brunet said that, respecting film conditions, the situation in Canada seemed to be analogous to that in the United States. The same is true regarding general business. While there is no evidence of anything like a boom in Canadian business, there is a noticeable betterment in the investment market. He quoted the published belief of the financial editor of the Montreal Star that deflation has largely run its course, while the general tendency is toward reconstruction. One of the first signs of recovery is in the bond market. As a result of Mr. Brunet's visit Mr. H. J. Cote, president of the Montreal Press Club, acted as master of ceremonies. After giving the necessary description of Pathe's activities all over the world, he introduced Mr. Ernest Rinfret, editor of Le Canada and member of Parliament for St. James Division, Montreal, who has been one of the foremost newspaper men of French Canada, to convey to Mr. Brunet the feelings of those present toward the Pathe Exchange, describing especially the services of that great organization to the cause of science of his talks with Canadian men of finance, and of popular education.

Ballin vs. Shubert on "Split Bills" Policy

When Lee Shubert last week announced in Motion Picture News a Shubert Vaudeville service to the owners and operators of moving-picture theatres "to bolster up their drooping business," and volunteered the opinion that "the day of the moving picture has passed completely and it is a thing of the past," he started what promises to be a very lively discussion. Already Hugo Ballin, the prominent producer, makes a vigorous rejoinder to the Shubert announcement, declaring that "the place in the sun for which the standard motion-picture has been witting so long is ready. The silver-screen is the greatest entertainment in the world today." And furthermore asserts Mr. Ballin: "Split-bills of vaudeville and pictures must inevitably lead to the destruction of both.

If you have an idea for a moving picture story, send it in any form to

Hollywood Photoplay Studio,
The Scenarist's Copyright
By Irving Baltimore

Since the great growth of the motion picture industry, with its attendant wave of high prices, accusations of plot theft have been hurled promiscuously by authors.

That this class of larceny has existed, is undeniable. The fault rests not with the producing company, but almost invariably with a member of the script staff, or other department, who seeks to enrich himself by the adoption of a novel situation, or original device, and its application to his personal use, without regard to property right. The guilty one not only renders himself, but also the producer, liable to damages, and an injunction may be obtained, restraining showing of the production.

The scenarist may submit his manuscript to any producer or agent. This act is no more than a display of his wares to a prospective purchaser, and he parts with no right or title until an agreement has been consummated for the purchase of the scenario. However, wherever feasible, it is advisable to choose the more substantial concern to deal with, as there is less likelihood of appropriation without compensation.

The fly-by-night producing company most frequently is the product of a stock selling scheme. After the promoter has pocketed the limit, he abscends, and the organization is, as a rule, left to a hasty dissolution, or maybe bankruptcy. This is the chance one must take in submitting a scenario to a new company, when not sponsored by the most reputable persons. Witness the Captain Stoll production of "Determination," the Master Productions, and scores of other ephemeral producing companies. The term "gag," until recently confined to oral interpolation in a play, has been broadened to encompass bits of "business," which usually have no material connection with the enactment of the plot. Inasmuch as there is no title to an idea and an infringement must be shown by a cumulation of similarities, or a sequence of scenes, the producer may often be appropriated without incurring any liability. The comment "old stuff" is sometimes the only danger encountered in this type of larceny. Larceny of this character would naturally be most prevalent in the case of comedies.

The average scenarist labors under the delusion that he must register his scenario, or comply with some rule of law, to preserve his rights, whereas, they are inherent in his script. So long as he conveys no title to his story, he cannot lawfully be deprived of ownership, and the benefits that flow therefrom.

Registration of a scenario, however, does serve an invaluable purpose. It enables the author, with ease, to establish his claim thereto, not only acting as evidence of the nature of the story, but also affording a date to guide in determining the question of infringement.

The Register of Copyrights at Washington refuses to allow registration of a scenario, basing his action on the ground that the statutory enumeration of unpublished works does not include one of this nature. However, the scenarist may avail himself of the statute enacted by the last session of the California Legislature. The Act provides for registration of scenarios with the Secretary of State. The manuscript must be accompanied by an affidavit of authorship. The filing fee is $5.00.

IN EXAMINER PLAYLET

Among the screen players who are slated to appear in the annual Christmas benefit of the Los Angeles Examiner are Lewis S. Stone and Robert Edeson, both of whom are the leading figures in a playlet, "The Triangle," while Truly Shattuck will have an important part in the proceedings.

AFFILIATES WITH ROBERTSON & WEBB

King Young is no longer publicity director at the Katherine MacDonald studios, having left the Georgia and Girard street studios to devote his time to the interests of Robertson & Webb, casting directors. John H. Blackwood, former theater manager, and more recently scenario scribe, replaces Young with Katherine MacDonald.

TO PRODUCE INDEPENDENTLY

Charles Gay has severed his connections with the Century Film Corporation, and will go into business for himself, producing his own pictures.

HOOVER ART EXHIBITION

Much interest is being taken in the forthcoming exhibition of paintings and neo-classic impressions at the Hoover Art Studio, original wood cuts by P. Geritz, etchings by Arthur Miller, oil paintings by Mrs. Blair Thomas and figure batiques by Fay Wray.

WALES TO PRODUCE

R. Ellis Wales has returned from New York after an absence of three years, and is making preparations for four productions with Storyart Pictures Corporation, release being through Hodkinson. The first production will be a story by Richard Washburn Child, entitled "The Hands of Nara."

The STORY Idea

THAT STRUGGLES TO GET OUT

The right one is worth big money. You may have it. Will you accept a free, confidential test?

Hundreds of original stories, for dramatization on the screen, are urgently needed to keep the motion picture industry alive.

The Palmer Photoplay Corporation is the accredited agent of the leading producers in a nation-wide search for story-telling ability. Not literary skill, but creative imagination and dramatic insight—the ability to think out and tell a good story, dramatically.

It is a talent many people have who never suspect its presence. You may possess the gift yourself, and not be aware of it. Will you let us test you free?

Send for the Van Loan questionnaire. In your own home by a simple psychological test you can learn whether you have the native ability for which the motion picture industry is anxious to pay liberally.

This questionnaire has started hundreds on the path to fame and big income. Just use the coupon below. You incur no obligation, of course.

Palmer Photoplay Corporation, Department of Education, 570-91 W. Hollenbeck Blvd., Los Angeles, Cal.

Please send me, without cost or obligation on my part, your questionnaire. I will answer the questions in it and return it to you for analysis. If I pass the test I am to receive further information about your Course and Service to authors.

For many years San Francisco has offered innumerable inducements to the picture colony which she has anticipated appropriating, or at least sharing with her southern sister, the film capital. Recently several companies have started production at studios in and about the Bay City. Next week an editorial survey of the present San Francisco situation will appear in Camera! by its editor, Fanchon Royer, who is now upon the ground studying conditions at first hand.

Gentlemen:

We wish to call your attention to the newly formed Anchor Film Distributors, Inc., an organization of West Coast film men who have instituted this company to meet the needs of independent exchange men everywhere.

Our business will be based upon the principle of honest and conscientious distribution at minimum cost. Ours is an independent organization, with no hidden strings attached, catering to the independent producer. One motive alone—actual co-operation between the man who makes pictures and the man who sells pictures—will do much to eliminate the huge overhead expense necessary to operate the "in between system" heretofore used by distributing companies, resulting in the actual fact that exchange men will thus be enabled to purchase better pictures for less money than in the past, and the producer will receive quicker returns and better results.

We will distribute good standard pictures—the kind of pictures the market wants. Our program will range from one-reel novelties and comedies, two-reel comedies and westerns, to five and six-reel standard and special features. We invite your investigation and would be pleased to have you call and discuss the distribution of any subjects now in the making or contemplated for future production.

Very truly yours,
ANCHOR FILMS DISTRIBUTORS, Inc.

MRS/K

President.
In San Francisco

If Los Angeles, the world's film capital, had not been aware of the fact that San Francisco, her rival sister city, has long coveted at least a portion of the picture producing industry, she would indeed have proven herself to be inordinately stupid, for of late years the northern town has continually held forth the most remarkable inducements to us in an attempt to attract and profitably hold our favorable consideration of her as a film making centre.

That this effort has accomplished possibly less success than would have been anticipated for it, has been due to several reasons of various proportions.

First and foremost, it is no simple matter to tear an industry out of its especially constructed plants and created atmosphere. Furthermore the climatic conditions of the Bay region have never been proven practical for picture taking. These are but examples of obstacles which have not yet been overcome.

Nevertheless, the San Francisco cordiality, coupled with its list of diversified locations, has attracted a few active companies into that territory. It is about these outfits, made up to a large extent of former Hollywood picture people, that we are concerned in the following space.

A surprisingly humming little studio is the Pacific, the entirely modern plant which houses the active companies in the San Mateo district. It was planned and erected by Jasper of our own Hollywood Studios, and there exists a marked family resemblance in layout and lines between the two.

Isadore Bernstein, formerly of Universal and National, oversees things. The only unit now "shooting" is Jacques Jaccard's Monroe Salisbury company taking a Northwestern written by the director. More stages, dressing rooms, etc., are under construction, which would point to an expansion or an idea of space letting to location companies.

All members of the organization are enthusiastic about the environment and seem to appreciate the more friendly attitude of the San Franciscans as compared to the non-professional mental trend of Los Angeles.

This feeling is also held by the Paul Gerson people who are preparing to produce two-reel comedies down in the city proper.

However, if several theatre managers are to be credited, the Arbuckle case has done much to dampen the enthusiasm of the more conservative boosters. One showman even pointed that his houses had been materially decreased by the unpopular tragedy.

Even so, that which we saw of northern California production was very encouraging for it and we could not help considering that competition is a stimulation of which both the Los Angeles film man and the Los Angeles long-haired have been in dire need.

That this situation can become in anyway unfortunate for us by detracting one whit from Los Angeles' prominence or its control of picture production is unthinkable. In fact, a few northern studios are badly needed as headquarters for locationing outfits.

Our own associates are up there making good upon a pioneering proposition. We wish them only the best of luck.

British Complications

Just to prove that our American releasing problem is the "simplest thing in the world," the independent exhibitors to the contrary, we publish the following from "The Kinematograph Weekly." Truly there is much to be thankful for—always.

"It is probable that release reform will be hastened as much by the tactics of some renting concerns as by any other factor. One or two distributing houses are certainly, even if unintentionally, exposing the absurdity of the present system by offering features for short release to exhibitors whom they have previously loaded up with long-dated films. It is bad enough to be asked to shelve earlier bookings to make room for 'immediate' releases; when the same renter has to be paid for both bookings the joke becomes altogether too broad. Nor is the case any better if a producing organization, after filling up exhibitors with its films through a middleman, takes to direct distribution, or distribution through another middleman, on the short release system. In some cases the 1921 output of an American organization is being offered for early release while the exhibitor's books are filled up with its 1920 output. It is not fair trading, but immediate retaliation is difficult, and a real remedy can only come through all films being issued on the same plan, and on as short a trade show-release period as possible. At present, certain short releases are going into 'special exhibition,' because exhibitors loaded up with the same producer's earlier output, cannot take them; that state of affairs ought not to be allowed to continue."
News of the latest cinema project came to light this week through the filing of articles of incorporation at the local offices of the California Commissioner of Corporations by the National Motion Picture Finance Corp.

The new organization is capitalized for one million dollars. While no Los Angeles bankers appear among officers or directors on the official records, it is reported that not less than two Southern California banking institutions have agreed to lend their support to the propoion.

Canadian, eastern, middle west and Pacific Coast capital is said to head the enterprise for Laurence A. Lambert, for many years an executive of the Canadian Pacific Railway is named as president; Karl Merris, former general manager of the Decatur Fountain company, owned and operated by a million dollar company, is vice president; William W. Danaron, president of the Industrial Manufacturing Company of Kansas City, is vice president; Alfred G. Roberts, retired president of the Midnite company and vice president of Sunkist Candy company of Los Angeles, is another vice president; R. L. Caruthers, former secretary of the Green Ridge Coal Company of Oklahoma is secretary; and R. J. Schroeder, more recently vice president of the Farmers and Merchants' Bank of Independence, Mo., is treasurer.

President Lambert has been recently identified with Los Angeles business circles as the president of the Financial Loan and Investment company.

R. C. Millard, for several years controller of Universal City, has been chosen auditor. F. D. R. Moote and E. S. Patterson have been retained as legal advisors.

With the formation of this newest organization the picture industry will have two fiscal allies in the financing of independent production. The results achieved by the Cinema Finance Corporation is said to have made it possible to interest capital in another such project. The former organization has done much toward keeping Los Angeles the center of the screen world had associated with it John E. Barker of the First National Bank; John H. Miller, president of the Southern California Edison company, Motley H. Flint, and Dan Murphy, wealthy oil operator.

According to President Lambert, the new organization will not encourage wild-cat production. An advisory council is to be formed that will pass on the merits of every proposition before a penny is advanced. This council will be made of experts in production, exhibition, exploitation, story values, and other necessary lines to estimate in advance the possible return from every picture.

In no instance will more than fifty per cent of the cost of a production be advanced, and then only when the producing company has a specific contract for the release of its pictures.

The next Eugene O'Brien picture for Selznick is entitled "Channing of the Northwest" and is starting production at the eastern studios.

Richard Barthelmess' third production for Inspiration Pictures will be a version of George Hobart's play, "Sonny." The picture will be made in the east under the direction of Henry King.

Miss duPont and company are on location at Catalina where they are shooting scenes for the star's latest picture, "The Rat Trap."<ref> CAT R</ref> Scenes for "Human Hearts" are being taken at the studio under the direction of King Bagger.

Reginald Barker is casting his forthcoming production entitled "The Storm."

"The Land of the Lost" company, with Hoot Gibson, is on location for several days taking scenes in Palmulin, a short distance from Universal City.

Among the pictures soon to be released and now in the process of cutting are "Hervey," in which Herbert Rawlinson is starred; "Wild Honey," starring Priscilla Dean; "Slipper Tongue," starring Frank Mayo, and "Man to Man," starring Harry Carey.

Constance Talmadge, Director Sidney Franklin and the company which is making "The Divorcee," have returned from a three-day location trip to Catalina.

Director Frank Lloyd, who will direct Norma Talmadge in "The Duchess of Langeais," has established his offices at United Studios. Harry Wel is his assistant.

Nazarina will complete her production of Isen's "A Doll's House" by Christmas.

Jane Novak and the Chester Bennett company, which is making "The Starveling," have been locationing at Mount Baldy.

Benjamin B. Hampton has completed production on "Wildfire."

Lloyd Hamilton's present contract with Educational, calling for six pictures a year, has almost expired and the comedian is planning to take a trip to New York to negotiate a new contract for the ensuing year. Mr. Hamilton has just completed his fifth subject, which bears the title, "En Route," and will be ready to commence work on the final subject within a few days.

A number of sets are in the course of construction for the opening scenes in Jack White's latest comedy, which is scheduled to enter production this week. The picture, which will present Lige Rumen in the featured role, marks the fourth of White's series of seven pictures a year for Educational release.

"FACE OF THE WORLD"
Clune's

After having read perhaps a half dozen radical roasts upon Irvin Willat's production for Hodkinson, "Face of the World," we have just spent the best part of an evening thoroughly enjoying it. Moreover, consider it far the most interesting and artistic picture yet released by Willat upon this program. That Johan Bojer's novel from which the cinema story was adapted by the director has been quite cruelly murdered does not seem so irreparable in light of the fact that the result is an entertaining play which will probably hold forth a greater appeal than a more accurate translation of the original would have done. Personally we were somewhat surprised at the fact that there were no rollicking submarines necessary to the simple love story of Thora and Dr. Mark. However, the subject of submarines branch has arrived to the Willat miniatures which appear as expeditiously as usual.

Several of the situations contain carefully conceived plots, jumping with a jolt that has not always shown itself in this producer's work. The titles and photography by Clyde de Vina are more pleasing than the continuity.

The cast is excellent.

Barbara Bedford troupes through Thora, the human wife of a talented and ambitious poor man, doing the most consistently superior and "pointed" interpreting in her comparatively short career. Not a foot of histrionic is wasted nor an effect lost.

Edward Hearn, co-featured with Miss Bedford, is absolutely to be depended upon for a sincere, entirely convincing performance under any circumstance. Therefore, although Dr. Mark's footage has been slighted to a degree, he holds up his half of the bargain perfectly with an excellent characterization.

Lloyd Whitlock as Duprac, the heavy, is better situated than usual completing the triangle, which is distantly Victorian theme which has apparently been literally translated for it rambles on and on, dragging several unreal characters through plots and counter-plots, jumping ten years (half meal) and arriving—nowhere. The main trouble is the plot's absolute dependence upon coincidence which never reasonably exists, the connection of the three different stories included in the play. Modern producers should use better judgement than that of the writer and should confine the filming of a tedious tale like this.

The cast is really quite interesting even though several of the portrayals are greatly overdrawn.

Pauline Starke, as Gabrielle Gautier, the little French model, is as fascinating as usual but not quite so youthful for some unhappily reason. Since Gabrielle has no particularly vivid moments, however, there is nothing to set her out.

Percy Marmont does the artist Dole, the chief cog in the plot, very well, indeed. He is type and to all appearances a very good actor.

Raymond Mckee

Edward Langford enacts Gabrielle's adoring but misled husband satisfactorily, and Emily Fitzroy handles Mrs. Dole, the villainess. And, merciful heavens, what a villainess! She has the world licked on the ogre face, personality and carriage. The only difficulty is that there certainly never lived such a creature as she here offers. In any event, she is a sensation.

The direction is exceedingly uneven for while the scenes are staged well, it never overcomes a poor continuity by inserting interest into it.

The public loves clever performing and detail but it demands a story. This one is unforgivable.

"WIFE AGAINST WIFE"

Kinema

Whitman Bennett's production of "Wife Against Wife," an adaptation by Dorothy Farnum of George Broadhurst's play, "The Price," is a good example of time, money and talent squandered hopelessly upon a puny, almost distantly Victorian theme which has apparently been literally translated for it rambles on and on, dragging several unreal characters through plots and counter-plots, jumping ten years (half meal) and arriving—nowhere.

The main trouble is the plot's absolute dependence upon coincidence which never reasonably exists, the connection of the three different stories included in the play. Modern producers should use better judgement than that of the writer and should confine the filming of a tedious tale like this.

"THEODORA"

Pre-view

The Italian-made spectacle, "Theodora," which was produced by Union Cinematograph Italia, and is being released by Goldwyn after having been cut down to eighty-seven hundred feet by that organization, is principally noteworthy for its massive settings and, in so far as we know, unprece-dented mobs. Indeed, no previous production that we have seen from our own or the foreign countries can at all compare either in extent or management with the ones here seen. Particularly more realistic are they than those in "Passion," and other big German films.

As for the Byzantine court sets, we can not believe them to be studio built entirely. Certainly they are overpowering in their solidity and detail. Aside from these technical elaborations, however, there is not a great deal to recommend "Theodora" as a box office attraction. Its plot, the love story of Justinian, Theodora and Andreas is just another tragedy rather haphazardly developed without due regard for the human elements.

Outside of the work of a fascinating Frenchwoman, in the title role, the acting is reasonably less lively than the sets and entirely without transition. The male performances are altogether too effeminate to please American fans.

There is no exaggeration in the statement that this picture is stupendous, however, and the unusual "kick" in its wild lion work is not to be denied. "Theodora" might have cost anything.

"A PRINCE THERE WAS"

Grauman's

A simple, much padded, but exceedingly diverting little romance is Darragh Aldrich's "A Prince There Was," which Lasky chose as a starring vehicle for Thomas Meighan and produced under the direction of Tom Forman from Waldemar Young's scenario. Although it is largely to the credit of an unusual cast that has contained crowds to the story is in a measure overcome, the direction is also competent if not particularly brilliant, and the whole is fitted into convincing settings, as one would expect from the Lasky technical department.

Charles Edward Martin, the leading role, is a much more advantageous position for the star than have been countless others assigned to him. Martin is a dissipated millionaire who educates himself into the "prince" class. He is therefore, a thoroughly enjoyable "straight" flawless handled.

Mildred Harris supports Meighan in the principal feminine position, a type of thing which she is playing better now than she has ever handled. As the pretty young authoress, Katharine Woods, she makes a thoroughly interesting "feeder," in itself an accomplishment.

Charlotte Jackson, whom the titters still like to call "Peaches," is her most intelligently appealing young self in Comfort Breckinridge's "Bad Little Bird." Charlotte is one of the steadier burning infant lights of the cinema.

Nigel Barrie as a sympathetic editor and Arthur Hall as the deepest dyed of commercial villains are fortunate choices for their roles, while Guy Oliver, Fred Huntley and Sylvia Ashton offer some of their most superior characterization in the valet, Mr. Cricket and the landlord.

Harry Perry photographed the production to much more than satisfaction.

"WHAT DO MEN WANT?"

California

A vital theme of universal attraction which with subtle interpretation might have approached in value the one treated by Gardner Sullivan in Ince's "Hall the Woman," is included in Lois Weber's "What Do Men Want?" The continuity, direction and detail are so badly botched, however, that (according to the audience's own decree) it is to laugh—or else be repulsed, for there is no utilization of delicacy in the presentation of this sex subject. It's back is fatal! In any event the picture result is cheap, two painfully soulful love stories unevenly told. If the original (Continued on Page 14)

HUNTER AT MIRROR STUDIOS

Frank W. Tuttle and Fred Waller, Jr., have reunited the Mirror Studios to produce a series of five-reel comedy-dramas featuring Glenn Hunter.

Mr. Hunter, who is now playing the juvenile role opposite Billie Burke in the Booth Tarkington stage play, "The Intimate Strangers," will also be remembered for his characterization of Bobby in Mr. Tarkington's "Clarence."

Mr. Hunter has several pictures to his credit, having played opposite Constance Binney in "The Case of Becky," and more recently as the juvenile with Norma Talmadge in "Smilin' Through."

Shooting on the first picture of the series is in the second week of production under the direction of Mr. Tuttle, who also wrote the story and continuity. Mr. Tuttle was formerly associated with the Famous Players' scenario department, where he adapted several successes for the screen, notably "The Conquest of Canna."

Mr. Waller, who has charge of the photography in the Hunter series, was also lately identified with Famous Players, for which company he did the title work on "Deception," "Peter Ibbetson," "Footlights," "The Golem," etc.

Walter R. Sheridan is the assistant director. Albert Viragh Flower and Ernest Fegte are responsible for the art direction. The players associated with Mr. Hunter in the first picture include Marguerite Courtot, William H. Tooker, Beatrice Morgan, Mrs. Pat Foy, Townsend Martin, Lois Blaine and Osgood Perkins.

SUPPORTING SALISBURY

Surrounding Munroe Salisbury in the picturization of "The Great Alone," under production at the Pacific Studios at San Mateo, are Dza, a 15-year-old San Francisco girl, who is playing the leading feminine role; Lura Anson, who played the lead opposite Tom Meighan in "If You Believe It It's So;" George Wagener, the "Yussell of The Shiek;" H. Von Sickles, and Walter Law, heavy.

COMMONWEALTH SIGNS KING

Scotty King has signed with the Commonwealth Motion Picture Producers, of which Fred Caldwell is director, as casting director. Mr. King has also signed to play character parts in the five-reel westerns which this company is now producing.

WITH INCE

Lloyd Hughes and Frank Keenan have been selected for leading roles in "The Brotherhood of Hate," a Thomas H. Ince production, soon to commence under the direction of Lambert Hillyer.

MENJOU OPPOSITE NORMA TALMADGE

Adolphe Menjou, who is completing the role of Dudley King in the all-star cast of "Is Matrimony a Failure?" at Lasky's has been signed to play opposite Norma Talmadge in her forthcoming photoplay, an adaptation of Balzac's "Duchesse de Langeais."

SIGNS COWBOY TROUPE

Jack House and his troupe of cowboys have been signed by Clifford S. Effelt to appear in the series of eighteen Western comedy-dramas being made by Carl P. Winther and C. F. Reynolds. Their first engagement is in "The Grey Wolf," which features James B. Warner.

JACCARD STAFF

Justin McCluskey, who co-directed a number of productions starring Geraldine Farrar and Anita Stewart is Jacques Jaccard's principal aide in the filming of "The Great Alone" at the Pacific Studios at San Mateo. Jack Dewey, late of the Brunton lot, is technical director, while Frank Good is cameraman and A. J. Wood is art director.

IRENE RICH SIGNED

John M. Stahl has secured Irene Rich formerly Will Rogers' leading lady, to play an important part in "One Clear Call," which he is now filming for Louis B. Mayer. Miss Rich recently completed an important role in "The Strength of the Pines," starring William Russell.

TO WRITE FOR STANLAW'S

Sonja Levine, former associate editor of Metropolitan Productions, has been engaged by Famous Players to write for Penrhyn Stanlaws.

McDERMOTT IN SPAIN

Marc McDermott is to appear in "Spanish Jive," which John S. Robertson will film for Paramount in Spain.

IN COMEDY LEAD

Elmor Lynn, winner of the Thomas H. Ince beauty contest, will play the leading feminine role opposite Life Conley in Jack White's newest Educational comedy, as yet untitled.

NEW CASTING DIRECTOR AT "U"

N. W. Aronson, formerly associated in various capacities with Metro, Brunton and National Studios, has been appointed casting director at Universal City.

It is now announced by Paramount that Edith Roberts will not support Wallace Reid in his next picture, as a premature statement recently asserted. Miss Roberts was selected, but it was found that she could not complete her work on the Frank L. Packard story, "Tawned," which she is doing in conjunction with Tom Moore for J. Parker Read.

The leading feminine role in "Carry on the Race," the initial production of the Mission Film Corp., will be played by Catherine Murphy, recently a member of Margueret Anglin's company.

Alfred E. Gillstrom has been signed by Julius Stern, president of Century Comedies, to direct Harry Sweet.

Kewpie Morgan has in important part in "The Blockhead" company, featuring March 9th June and Billy Bevan recently completed at Sennett studios.

Ladye Horton, formerly associate editor of the Photodramatist, will handle publicity for the Mission Film Corporation for its first picture, "Carry on the Race."
There is one thing that the photodramatist residing in metropolitan centers must beware of. The most photogenic viewpoint! He must be brought to realize that motion pictures are shown in the tiniest hamlets, the smallest and most desolate outposts of civilization.

This does not mean that he should be circumscribed by his own stupidly engendered provincialism. But, for the sake of his own art, he must beware of the provincialism of great cities! The motion picture, as a universal language, must be essentially universal in its treatment of ideas and ideals.

Nothing makes for swifter, radical decadence than an over-sophistication. Now the successful screen writer, with considerable income, resident of a large city, is apt to become saturated with the atmosphere of a super-sophisticated group of fellow artists, and henceforth interpret life in terms of their codes and standards.

As a speculative thinker, the individual screen writer may entertain any views or theories of life which appeal to him; he may, with George Jean Nathan—Netzach by proxy—contemplate 'the late Jehovah,' he may theoretically agree that the belief in a devil just as impossible as a belief in a devil; but in his photoplay writing he must touch the common heart, the person who hopes, fears, suffers, plods, tears.

Therefore, he must know that the common people, in big city or rustic village, reverence their illusions; that without these illusions—such if they be—common man would face a stark, stony, pathetic, waste a world without color, without beauty. And beauty is the mother of illusion, which is hope.

The provincial concept of beauty constitutes a moral beauty. Your commoner has never soared beyond good and evil. The way a woman dresses and behaves is still a very significant thing to him. What would pass unnoticed in a fashionable cosmopolitan café, or in a group of “artists,” shocks and grieves the American peasant. His association of ideas indexes a cocktail-drinking, cigarette-smoking woman as the antithesis of what he would have his own mother, wife, or sister be. He still believes that a liberal diet of vices, an extravagant colurite, and a daringly low-cut gown are feminine devices for tempting the male of the species. To the man who moves in the same social stratum with modestly gowned women—most often women of culture, wit, and fine beauty—the colurite, the snaky silk-lined limp and the 'trapeze-like' cut gown represent the frame of a more or less exquisite portrait.

A certain prominent director has attained many beautiful and beautiful results and effects in his photodramas through contriving them in a pattern of sophisticated elegance. His screenwriters have to provide him with stories in which, say, sometimes infrequent, women are engaged in manifold intrigues. Cocktails of complex, subtle brews, by-pass the open mind, and are manufactured, pale, yet sensual tapestries; incense; cigarette-smoking flappers; all are mirrored in his cinemas. He has attempted the Continental note. Perhaps he has achieved it.

Now, I could not be honest with myself and still declare that I have not hugely enjoyed most of this director's handwork. One cannot deny beauty, and beauty he has attained; but his blend is too rich. Upon viewing one of his recent photoplays, I felt impelled to hide myself to the hills, to drink in the healing tonic of redolent trees and feel the thrill of strong winds. I longed for the reassuring touch of Mother Earth, for the softer tints and tones of foliage and rock—invigorating, clarifying. The views and the super-sophisticated photoplay affected me like an over-indulgence in French pastry. I needed the antidote of nature.

BARBARA MAIER

One note of beauty that has been missing in the films can be supplied, perhaps by the same director. Instead of the 'colour' induced by artificial surroundings, instead of beauty of voluptuous strain, producing what is arbitrarily termed a wicked atmosphere, why not the wantoness which comes from superabundant healthiness—the youthful impulses that leap from the sheer joy in breathing in the poetry of majestic forests or great rivers?

There is a vast difference between the interplay of healthful, natural forces, the romance of those in whom Life flows like a majestic torrent—of those who feel in their innmost fibres the meanings of the Earth—and the Earthly Paradise of a cigar drummer's daydreams.

But whether or not the photodramatist takes cognizance of a healthful or decadent beauty, he must successfully intrigue the scenario staff reader, who—despite his faults—has sapience enough to know that the profits in the motion picture industry are derived from the extensive exhibition of photoplays in small towns. One producer has said that he was infinitely pleased with the public accept ability of his productions in Peoria, Illinois, Des Moines, Iowa, Oshawa, Ontario, Indiana, or Orange, California, than he was with New York's or Boston's, as concerned with the urban audience. His possibilities and the small towns will rebel—and censorship will arise—if a sustained super-sophisticated cinema diet is proffered.

"A Blind Bargain" is the release title for the picture, "The Octave of Claudius", recently completed at Goldwyn.

GOLDWYN WRITER GIVES NEW ANGLE ON CENSORSHIP

That the censors are largely responsible for the present depression and falling off of attendances at motion picture theatres throughout the country was pointed out by Paul Bern, scenario editor of Goldwyn, before members of the Western Motion Picture Advertisers at their last meeting in Hollywood.

"The writer for the screen has become so handicapped by the censors that he cannot 'rhapsodically' commit his material to the motion picture public silly, weak stories that do not begin to portray life as it really is," said Mr. Bern.

"Sex is life itself. If it were not, neither the censors nor the motion picture industry would be in existence. Sex is a vital element in the construction of drama. It is drama itself. Without it there is little left for the drama. The abuse of sex themes of course, has been evident. But there is an abuse of everything else in life on the part of the minority.

"We cannot show on the screen, for instance, such things as mob fights because as one censor said, this would incite rioting on the part of the poorer classes. The great ingredient in a climax is therefore removed. In short, the punch is taken out of a situation, an episode, a picture. This happens so frequently that nothing but the weak, ordinary, passive remains. To show good we must show bad. To show virtue triumphant we must show what it triumphs over. Otherwise, there is no drama. I predict that if censorship continues the time is not far distant when the public, which is now turning away from the motion picture because of the insipid stories we are compelled to create, will desert these forms of entertainment to such an extent that our business will not be in the fifth but the twenty-fifth industry in this country."

Nell Craig, who played Princess Vashti in "The Queen of Sheba," is casting an important part in the next Hughes story, "Great Remembrance," now in production at the Goldwyn studio. Miss Craig was formerly starred by Essanay and recently played opposite Owen Moore in "The Poor SImp" and "The Desperate Hero."

Cleo Ridgely has been signed to play an important role in Constance Binney's next starring vehicle for Realart.

Alice Naison and Lucille King are playing in the supporting cast of Bobby Vernon in his new Christie comedy.

Robert E. Hews, who was recently appointed to the staff of the Hollywood Daily Citizen, has been made studio representative of the paper.

Winter Hall has been engaged to interpret one of the principal roles in "Carry on the Race," an all-star photoplay being directed by Clarence Geldert for the Mission Film Corporation.

Inaugurates Open Forum

As a demonstration of the sincere desire of the United Studios to fully cooperate with its producer-tenants, M. C. Levee, President of United, has inaugurated a series of weekly conferences which are being attended by Mr. Levee and his department managers and the representatives of the organizations which make their productions under the new United plan of cooperative production control.

The newly adopted rental proposition, under which the producer is charged a flat fee per picture, is a radical departure from the former Brunton cost-plus method, and Mr. Levee has planned the regular weekly "get-together" as the logical means of assurance of the smooth working-out of the plan through the medium of the open forum.

The first of these meetings, which was presided over by Mr. Levee, was attended by representatives of Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Joseph M. Schenck, who controls the Norma Talmadge and Constance units; Miss Nazimova, Jackie Coogan Productions, Allen Holubar, Richard Walton Tully, Chester Bennett Productions, Benjamin H. Hampton, Lewis J. Selznick, J. L. Atten-tendent, Mr. Levee's staff, were present.

In outlining the purpose of the conferences, Mr. Levee said he believed these meetings would insure the rapid solution of problems that might arise and that they would give himself and his producer-tenants the benefit of "the other fellow's viewpoint."

AIDS Christmas Fund

Marion Warde gave a benefit performance of a four-act comedy-drama at the Gamut theatre recently for the benefit of the California Children's Home Society Christmas fund.

Appearing in the cast of the play were: The Misses Ruth Willard Phillips, Virginia Moreland, Dorothy Nighingale, Freda Tweedy, Neil Fletcher; The Meehans, Percy Challenge, Billy Eugene, John O'Loughlin, Larkin Griffin, John Allison and Elliot S. Chess. Baby Nathalie Fuller and Master Wayne Griffin gave dancing and singing numbers between acts.

Harry Keaton, while working with Larry Semon at Vitagraph, was seriously injured and is at the Pacific Hospital.

"As Old as the Hills," is Educational's latest Bruce Barton release.

Mabel Normand and Fay Borden are enjoying a few days' respite at Palm Springs, Calif. Miss Normand has been suffering from a heavy cold.

Director Norman Taurog of the Larry Semon company, has purchased a home in Hollywood.

Address Writers

"The Thirty-six Dramatic Situations" will be the subject of a lecture which will be given by Mrs. Lillian Amber Hunt presently at the Story Writers Club. Mrs. Hunt is a member of the Advisory Bureau of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation.

To Address Writers

Billy Norwood, who appears as Sherlock Holmes in "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," a British production, which Alexander will handle here, is coming to America.

A surprise birthday party was celebrated recently at the home of Lige Conley, featured comedian in Jack White comedies. Many of the comedian's friends from the Hollywood film colony were present.

Several riders were slightly injured in spectacular stunts which occurred during the filming of Thomas H. Ince's "The Hottentot," in which Douglas MacLean, Madge Bellamy and Raymond Hatton have leading roles.

William V. Mong, who essays prominent roles in the two latest Frohman productions, "A Bride of the Gods," and "The Man Who Smiled," will arrive here presently from Chambersburg, Pa. Mr. Mong, who is under contract with J. L. Frohman, will be loaned to other companies until the producer begins his next picture.

The picture version of Sir James M. Barrie's "The Little Minister," which Pen- ryn Stanlaws, the artist-director, produced for Paramount with Betty Compson in the role of "Lady Babbie," is coming to Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre Monday, Dec. 19th.

FIRST NATIONAL NOTES

R. A. Walsh plans to take the negatives and prints of his latest production, "Kindred of the Dust," to New York in a few days, where a preview of the photoplay will be given in First National's New York offices.

Thomas H. Ince's "Hail the Woman" is now being exhibited in Chicago, San Francisco and New York. It will follow "Molly-O" and "Dissanel" here at the Mission Theatre.

Ben Turpin started work at the Mack Sennett studios recently on "Bright Eyes," his latest comedy in which he is supported by Phyllis Haver. Billy Watson is directing.

AT ROACH STUDIOS

Harold Lloyd is filming scenes this week near Santa Monica Canyon where sets have been constructed for scenes in his comedy, "He Who Hesitates," which is nearing completion.

H. M. Walker is titling "Scatter Your Shots," and "Rich Man, Poor Man."

"High Tide," featuring George Rowe, Ethel Broadhurst and "Sunshine Sammy," and Harry "Snub" Pollard's latest completed comedy, entitled "Stage Struck," are now titled and will be shortly previewed and shipped to New York.

AT THE INCE STUDIO

"Pawned," by Frank L. Packard, which is being filmed by J. Parker Read, Jr., is nearing completion.

"Jim," by Marguerite de la Morte, Milton Sills and John Bowers in leading roles, is being assembled for cutting by John Griffith Wray, the director, and Ralph Dixon, the editor.

HOLUBAR TO MAKE SIX PICTURES

Allen Holubar is to make six productions, starring Dorothy Phillips, at the United Studios. Contracts for studio space and organization and production facilities for the series have just been signed by Mr. Holubar and M. C. Levee, President of United. Mr. Holubar will announce the personnel of his business staff within a few days. He will personally direct each of the productions, and will be assisted by Harold S. Bucquet.

Work on the first picture will be commenced immediately. It is Harvey Gates' "The Soul Seeker," an outdoor story.

AT REALART

Director Frank Urson has started on a new Mary Miles Minter starring vehicle, the story of which is by Mary Morrison with scenario by Harvey Thew. Allan Forrest plays the male lead opposite the star.

Bebe Daniels has completed the Nina Wilcox Putnam story on which she has been working for nearly two months. It is expected that Miss Daniels will vacation for two weeks before commencing her next offering.

Realart's new 160x160 glass stage will be completed the last of this week, which will render Realart entirely independent of inclement weather conditions, giving the studio two big glass stages and one open stage.

WILLIAMS IN SECRET SERVICE STORY

Earle Williams will start work at Vitagraph within a few days on a secret service narrative, "The Man from Downing Street," by Florine Williams and Clyde Westover. It is expected that Edward Jose, who recently completed "The Prodigal Judge," starring Jean Paige at the Eastern Vitagraph studios, will direct.

O'CONOR PRODUCTIONS CHANGE STUDIOS

O'Conor Productions has made its last picture at the Brentwood Studio and is moving to the Caswell Studio, where production will be resumed immediately on Mirthquake Comedies.

LOCATIONING

Al Christie and his company are off to San Diego this week, Tia Juana, Ramona's Home and other points of interest along the border to film scenes for a new Mexican comedy in which Bobby Vernon is featured.

SILENT DRAMA GAINING IN CHURCHES

Despite the attacks from certain "reformist" quarters, the motion picture is gaining steadily in church exhibitions and other religious and welfare organizations. Recent estimates place the number of churches now equipped with projectors at 1298, Illinois leading with 79 and California following next with 51.

TOURNEUR STARTS LORNA DOONE

"Lorna Doone," popular and enduring classic of English literature, is soon to be presented in motion pictures by Maurice Tourneur, under whose direction it was commenced this week at the Thomas H. Ince studios. Madge Bellamy, lately featured in a number of Ince productions, has been selected for the e klein "Lorna."

"The Cave Girl," made by Inspirational Pictures, Inc., will be released through First National Exchanges.

Julian Ollendorf is making a reel of Sketchographs for Educational called "The Family Album."

Pathé Announces Release Theory for Coming Year

Special preparedness to meet the needs of exhibitors during 1922 is announced by Pathé.

In this connection special emphasis is placed on the increasing value of the program made up mainly of the best class of short subjects. In a statement published more than a year ago, Paul Brunet announced that this tendency was foreseen and that Pathé Exchange was concentrating on short subjects and serials—the episode character of the latter placing it in the same classification. The present announcement declares that energetic action under this policy enables that company to face the new year with confidence.

The claim is made of having very satisfactorily solved the "feature problem" so vexing to a large class of exhibitors—meaning the picture of from five to eight reels that is attractively exploited and relied upon to fill the house. The "problem" is that of the many exhibitors, who, in order to meet the expense of playing such a feature, feel it necessary to omit from their program standard short pictures, although aware that these are established favorites with their patrons. Even if the "feature" is a sure fire hit it does not lessen the need for a diversified program, according to this theory, but if it is lacking in broad popular appeal, many in the audience will regret their admission investment who would have gone away quite satisfied after a hearty laugh over a comedy following the feature, or contained in a short subject program. Such would also seem to them to come back again sooner than had been their intention.

Referring to conversations with exhibitors in different sections, the case is stated in this way:

The tendency of the times is to give more for a dollar. When a movie patent goes to a candy store she finds that more and better candy can be had for a dollar than at any time in the last three years. Naturally she expects a similar advantage when paying her money in at the picture theatre box office. An audience is a gathering of people brought together by different motives. A certain percentage come to see the "Feature" but there is also a large number who attend through a desire to see the News reels. Others consider their money best invested in novelties, or comedies. It takes all these different groups of people to make a theatre going public. And unless everybody in the audience gets something he or she especially likes, habitual attendance at that theatre is not to be counted on.

Roy Atwell is supporting Mary Miles Minter in "The Heart Specialist," under the direction of Frank Urson at Realeart.

Clara Horton first came into screen prominence when she played one of the leading roles in "The Yellow Dog," a Universal-Jewel production made during the war.

What Pathé announces to be the only motion pictures for public consumption showing President Harding addressing the 67th Congress at its opening session, will be presented in its News Reel, No. 95.

Walter Law, the well-known cinema actor, recently completed a 64-week tour of one of the bigger vaudeville circuits with a monologue act. He is just finishing an important part at the Pacific Studios, San Mateo.

SIXTH AND MAIN

On the other hand, the cast is wasted upon the parts. J. Frank Glendon, in the leading role, for instance, lacks the opportunity to do his best work and the author has so arranged his action that he loses much sympathy. At that, his performance of Frank, the husband, is the most attractive in the piece. Glendon's personality should never be stilled as it is here.

Claire Windsor's chief feminine position. Hallie, the wife, is also vaguely unappealing and insipid, perhaps again due to the creator's lack of perception. It should be said that Miss Windsor herself is showing marked improvement in her work.

George Hackathorne, always clever, renders Arthur, the weakling who goes painfully astray, as sensibly as the impossible part could be played, but the effort is a little too great.

Hallie Cooley as Yost, the evil influence, never very menacing, by the way, and Edith Keeler in the wallflower complete the cast.

Wid Armstrong distributes "What Do Men Want?" which was both written and directed by Miss Weber.

Supplemented by Sid Grauman's Christmas presentations, "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" will give its world premier at Grauman's Rialto on Sunday. Created from George M. Cohan's stage play and George Randolph Chester's stories this production was directed by Paul Borzage, director of "Humoresque."

Among those included in the cast are Sam Hardy, the original Wallingford in the Cohan play; Norman Kerry, Doris Kenyon and Dianna Allen.

ORIENTAL SHOWMAN IN STUDIO COLONY

Richard Bell, motion picture theatre circuit man whose main office is at Shanghai, China, has been a recent visitor at the Christie Studios, where a special film has been made to show Chinese audiences the inside of a typical motion picture studio plant.

Mr. Bell operates theatres, both for English speaking and native audiences through China.

FAIRBANKS TO ARRIVE SHORTLY

A general house-cleaning is now under way at the Douglas Fairbanks Studio and in the offices of the Mary Pickford Company at the United Studios, in anticipation of the return of the Fairbanks', who are expected to arrive in Los Angeles shortly.

At the Fairbanks Studio a new fire protection system has been installed, new film vaults and a series of cutting-rooms. It has been reported in foreign press dispatches that Mr. and Mrs. Fairbanks were considering a joint production called "The Florentine Lover," an Italian story which they had originally planned to do abroad.

Richard Tucker recently appeared at the Philharmonic Auditorium in "The Iron Judge," a one-act play by Joseph Jastrow, exploitation director at Goldwyn, and is now supporting Clara Kimball Young in "The Worldly Madonna," which Harry Garson is producing at the Garson Studios.

LYTELL AND DANA TO MAKE TRANS-CONTINENTAL TOURS

Bert Lytell and Viola Dana, of Metro's list of stars, are about to embark on a "get acquainted" tour of the United States that will take one player or the other into practically every big city in the country. When Metro decided that a vacation of probably six weeks would be necessary, through a readjustment of film schedules, both Mr. Lytell and Miss Dana decided to make use of this period to make their transcontinental dash.

GUBBINS ON TRIP TO CHINA

Thomas Gubbins, who assisted Norman Dawn in the direction of Sessue Hayakawa's latest R-C production, "The Vermilion Pencil," is expecting to leave shortly for China to bring back a large stock of Chinese costumes and studio properties. Gubbins is an expert on Chinese technique in pictures. L. W. Tung, Chinese business man of Los Angeles, is associated with Mr. Gubbins in the business venture and has already sailed for China.

Paul Terry, who creates the series of "Aesop's Film Fables" for the screen, has taken up the production of the recent R-K Klux Klan disclosures and made "The Wayward Dog," the newest animated cartoon of the series, which is scheduled for release the week of December 25th.

George Hackathorne is considering an offer from Archie Frazier, film magnate of Australia, to head a producing company of his own organization.

Legal Queries
ANSWERED BY IRVING BALTIMORE

Q. What is the duration of copyright in the United States?
A. Twenty-eight years, with privilege of renewal by the author or his next of kin, for a further period of twenty-eight years. Right of renewal must be exercised during the twenty-eighth year of the initial period.

Q. Under a contract for the services of an actor for a definite period, can he be forced to appear as provided for in his contract?
A. No. None can be made to perform a personal service of this character; but the actor would be liable for damages incurred by his failure to appear according to the terms of his contract. An injunction can be obtained, however, restraining the actor from appearing elsewhere, or for any other party, during the term of the contract.

Q. In the case of bankruptcy of a motion picture company, does one lose his claim for services rendered?
A. A claim should be filed with the Referee in Bankruptcy. The assets of the bankrupt concern are divided amongst the creditors. In the case of corporations organized under the laws of California, or any other state, where stockholders liability statutes are in force, the claim may be collected from the stockholders, according to their proportionate interest, provided suit is brought within a certain period. Action must be preferred against the stockholders of a California corporation within three years after the original obligation was incurred.

Q. Are any rights forfeited by distribution and display of stills, posters, or "paper" of any other character, without copyrighting the same?
A. Only the right to the reproduction of the individual pictures. In the case of a photoplay, no right to reenact a scene, or any portion of the same, would be waived by the display of such advertising matter.

LAWRENCE IN METRO FILM

William Lawrence has been signed by Metro to appear opposite Viola Dana in "Daphne's Disposition," her new Metro starring picture, a Harry Beaumont production. Mr. Lawrence's previous work under the Metro banner was in "Body and Soul" with Alice Lake.

Edward Pel is playing an important role in "The Dust Flower," by Basil King, which Rowland Lee is directing for Goldwyn. Mr. Pel will be remembered for his Chinese characterizations in Griffith's "Broken Blossoms" and "Dream Street."

Little Richard (Mickey) Daniela has just completed an engagement at Vitagraph in "Blue Bell," starring Alice Calhoun.

Mack Sennett has engaged S. T. Barnes as technical head of his studios and Paul Gurnin as master electrician.

Edwin Brophy and Martin Spring are serving as assistant directors to Sidney Franklyn in the filming of "The Divorcee," starring Constance Talmadge.

The little French refugee boy, Philippe de Lacy, will enact a prominent production in the first Mission Film Corporation picture, entitled "Carry on the Race."

CHARLES CONKLIN TO STAR

Charles Conklin, fun-maker of the screen and former Mack Sennett star, will soon be starred at the head of his own company, according to announcement made by Harry S. Haven, who is president and general manager of the newly formed and incorporated Charles Conklin Company. The pictures will be two-reelers based on original themes. Included in the plans of the concern is the launching of one, and possibly two, additional star companies as soon as the Conklin unit gets under way.

SALISBURY PICTURE UNDER WAY

Production at the Pacific Studios in San Mateo is well under way on "The Great Alone," the first of a series of pictures to be made by the West Coast Films Corporation at the former Salisbury. Jacques Jaccard is directing the picture and Isadore Bernstein, founder of Universal City, is supervising director of the company.

"The Great Alone" is an original story by Mr. Jaccard and James Colwell with its locale in Alaska.

TO CHRISTEN NEW STAGE

Saturday night, Dec. 17th, the employees of the Lazy Studio will hold a dance for the studio personnel and families to christen the number four stage recently re-covered and roofed with glass. The committee in charge consists of Gus Corder, chairman; Alvin Wyckoff, Betty Reinhold, Doc Graham, A. C. Martin and A. D. Wilkie. Fred Kiley, studio manager, offers a cup for the best dancing couple. Refreshments are to be served and all the stars will be there as well as others. The dance will be purely informal.

NEILAN'S LATEST NOW SHOWING

Marshall Neilan’s "The Lotus Eater," starring John Barrymore, is now appearing in First National theatres throughout the country. In the supporting cast are Colleen Moore, Anna Q. Nilsson, Wesley Barry, Lucy Fox, J. Barney Sherry and others.

CABANNE STARTS

W. Christy Cabanne’s next picture for R-C will be "Beyond the Rainbow," which will start production presently. The following have been secured for the cast: Court- enay Foote, Marguerite Courtot, Edmund Breese, Walker Miller, George Fawcett and Macey Harlan.

GOING TO ENGLAND

It is understood that Richard Stanton, former Fox director, has joined a London company in charge of its newly formed production chief and that he will go abroad in a few weeks. His first picture will probably be made in Switzerland.

MURRAY FILMS TO HAVE METRO RELEASE

Metro will release four Mae Murray photoplays during the coming year beginning with "Peacock Alley." Exhibitors of the city of the Golden Gate were given a preview recently of J. L. Frothingham’s "A Bride of the Gods," which will be formally released by Associated First National Pictures, Inc., during the latter part of January.

James V. Bryson will succeed George E. Kann as foreign export manager for Universal. Mr. Bryson went to Australia for Universal about fifteen months ago to open offices there.

MAY PRODUCE IN MANILA

It is reported the Charles Gordon Productions have been formed to produce in Manila. Gordon appeared in "A Connecticut Yankee."

LATE UNIVERSAL RELEASES

Late Universal releases are:

- "Shattered Dreams," featuring Miss du Pont (five reels).
- "Unmasked," 15th episode of "Winners of the West," (feature reel; two reels).
- "Westward Whoa!" (one reel comedy).
- "Shipwrecked Among the Animals," featuring Harry Sweet (two reels).
- "The Deputy’s Double-Cross," featuring Laura La Plante and Lee Shumway (two reels).

Recently completed Mack Sennett two-reel comedies now being shown throughout the country are "Made in the Kitchen," "She Sighs by the Seaside," "Call a Cop." and "Hard Knocka and Love Taps.

"Molly-O," starring Mabel Normand, is now being shown in New York, Los Angeles, Chicago and Cleveland. Her second comedy, "When You Leave Home," is being edited for early release. Included in the cast are Katherine Maguire, George O’Harra and Eddie Gibbon.

E. Richard Schayer is writing the continuity for the screen adaptation of William Leach’s widely read novel, "The Story of Clementina," purchased for Pauline Frederick. Production will be deferred until after the Christmas holidays.

Degrees of Showmanship

An artist is never great enough to profitably allow his selfishness or his temperament to interfere with his art. A showman never accomplishes for his house heights of popularity from which he can afford, consciously or otherwise to overlook his showmanship, his ethics if you will.

At the first Christmas-week performance at Grauman’s Theatre, several hundred patrons stood for one hour after the advertised opening time in a rain-tracked lobby awaiting admittance to the showhouse whose box office had collected their ticket money with no warning of the delay which was to bring them discomfort and disgust. Irate questioning brought no explanatory replies from the stoical attendants in charge and dissatisfaction ran high. A few of the more sensible fans, having recovered their admission, waded out into the deluge with thoroughly expressive countenances. Others remained in momentary expectancy dreading the cashier’s surrounding rush and desirous of keeping under some sort of shelter from the raging elements. Nevertheless, the waiting was not endured patiently as was indicated by occasional outbursts in the lobby and later in the theatre itself by a regrettable demonstration during a musical number. It was an atrocious afternoon, which will long be remembered by those who stood it out.

If we hadn’t personally experienced this identical procedure twice before under extreme weather conditions at this particular theatre, we would only remark it as a piece of sadly injurious inefficiency. But since it has preceded, we have wondered considerably—and still we cannot think it reasonable that even an unlimited number of observances regarding the size of the Grauman crowds in miserable weather will begin to offset the evil effect of the publicity spread by the “practiced ons.”

Whatever the circumstance the famous Grauman showmanship standard is the greatest loser. Neither its popularity nor the public’s good nature should be put to too tiresome a test. It doesn’t mean enough and besides it is unfair all around.

A Profitable Charity

While we are giving and receiving happy Christmas wishes we usually turn responsive ears to the charity pleas made by those who are perhaps more tirelessly un-selfish than we. The mission of George E. Pelton, one of our industry’s foremost benefactors of the needy, who collects money to facilitate the installation of the cinema in hospitals, public institutions, etc., should particularly appeal to the motion picture industry. Mr. Belton is doing a noble as well as a progressive work. What project is there to which we could more profitably contribute our bit at this season? Checks should be made payable to Charlotte Fisher, Superintendent of the Los Angeles Orphans’ home, 815 El Centro, Hollywood.

The Trade Press Remarks

What seems to be the general attitude of the trade press toward the recently formed National Association of the Motion Picture Industry is set forth in the Exhibitors’ Herald as follows:

“The negotiations that have been in progress for several weeks looking toward the formation of a new association of producers and distributors aimed largely to supplant the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry present several interesting phases.

“Readers will wonder why, if the negotiations have been in progress for several weeks, the trade papers did not print a report. The explanation is that the various trade publications were specifically requested to refrain from any possible premature announcement. Those associated with the new proposition apparently were so busy prevailing upon the trade press to withhold the report that they did not have time to guard themselves against talking outside the trade about the proposition which resulted in a New York newspaper getting and printing the report last week.

“The creation of a new association does not offer in itself an assured relief from the ills of the existing organization. The present National Association of the Motion Picture Industry has not been a failure, but there is no secret to the fact that it repeatedly has fallen far short of expectations. This has been more due to the apathy of the persons who should be interested than to any other single cause. The absence of team-work has been another factor. But a new association can hardly be expected to fare any better if every time an individual or a company is dissatisfied with something that is or is not done they cease co-operation with the organization and commence to oppose it publicly.”
TOURNEUR SIGNS KEENAN

Frank Keenan of stage and screen, is returning to the silversheet after a long absence. Mr. Keenan is to appear as “Sir Enson Doone,” one of the featured roles of Maurice Tourneur’s production, “Lorna Doone.”

BENNISON IN SPOKEN DRAMA

Louis Bennison is leaving the screen for a while a fill a stage contract in Australia, which will be followed by a season in London.

DAVIS TO REMAIN WITH ROACH

Mildred Davis, who has been playing opposite Harold Lloyd for two years, signed a new contract recently with Hal E. Roach to continue under his management.

ALGIER ASSISTANT TO STAHL

Sidney Alziger is working with John M. Stahl on “One Clear Call.” Previous to his six years of studio experience, Mr. Alziger played on the stage in “The Pink Lady,” “Babes in Toyland,” “A Knight for a Day,” “The Tourists,” and other operatic and stock engagements.

HUGHES IN INCE SPECIAL

Lloyd Hughes has been chosen for a prominent role in “The Brotherhood of Hate,” which recently started production at the Ince studio.

Thomas Meighan’s newest leading lady is Helen Ferguson. Just recently Miss Ferguson was featured by Goldwyn.

Elise Hamilton is playing an important role in Jack White’s latest Hamilton-White comedy under production at the United Studios.

Thomas H. Ince has selected Frank Keenan to interpret a leading role in his forthcoming photoplay entitled, “The Brotherhood of Hate.”

Baby Josephine Adair is supporting Ella Hall in the Emory Johnson production and Elizabeth, her sister, is with the Jackie Coogan company.

Jane Starr is now playing the society butterfly in “The Misleading Lady” at the Raymond Theatre in Pasadena with the Smith-Ring Players.

Nick Cogley and Fred Kelsey have joined the cast for “One Clear Call,” John M. Stahl’s third independent unit production for Louis B. Mayer.

Jack Pollo is being starred in a series of two-reel semi-westerns which Arthur Delmar is directing. Martha McKay is playing the leading feminine role.

Joel Day is playing the role of Abraham Lincoln in the Buffalo Bill serial now being made by Universal.
A PERSISTENT CONTROVERSY

Like a muse, I am striking a note that will be responded to on all sides, and that will inevitably be put under cant, by virtue of a recrudescence of that antiquated polemic: are artists born or made? The motion picture is a form of art drawn from divergent pathways, the jousting ones on both sides uniformly recusant. I, for one, believe that the technique of screen writing as well as the technique of screen acting, direction, and cinematography can be taught—and learned. Whether an art perception or conception is congenital and innate or can be developed, is a matter which completely eludes me, is a moraæluche which I prefer to leave to the ministrations of some avatar.

Acting, novel, and play writing, and screen writing have been taught in this country for some time back; and it would be the veriest recalcitrant who would doubt at least the partial efficacy of such instruction. Naturally, the earnest, perspicacious, and most naturally endowed persons succeed, while the supine and dull-witted fall to profit from the results of their studying.

It is the very objector to norms who finds himself cleaving to the fixed precept that screen writing, for instance, cannot be taught: the free-thinker too often becomes orthodox. So now we have the say they saw the inside of a dramatic school, while writers say they just sat down and wrote. Granted. But this only means that they did not pursue a systematic course of study: that they pursued an eclectic method, a sort of second-hand absorption of what others had learned, a gathering of the shards of technique. It seems to me that the rub of the disputation is this: Does one prefer to learn directly and systematically or indirectly and irregularly?

However, a dialectic approach would convince me that any man or institution may teach any theory and technique of screen writing. The master must be prepared by any qualified individual or group, i.e., those who are indisputably authoritative.

I understand that Maurice Tourneur, claims that there is no motion picture technique, that the photoplay is still nascent, and far from viable. This may be so, but we know that at least a certain form of continuity writing, of story preparation, is in vogue. That form is transient, deliquescent, is at least conjecturable—but there is a "present" technique, just as there is in the cutting, colligation, and assemblage of the picture. And just so is there a properly well defined technique in direction, lighting, cinematography, and acting. There is much that is definite that is adhered to between the first cry of "Camera!" and the final projection upon an argent canvas.

That motion picture technique will be subject to much elaboration in the future, near or remote, is feasible; coeval with the passing of all art and literature through the alembic of Time. But the screen writer is not a living—easy as you and I, he is the present; he must seize upon instruments that are handy, and must not, in the interest of his nearest art, attempt to fly before developing the ground.

I do not believe that the inauguration of scenario classes in many colleges and universities, or the teaching of the technique of photoplay writing by correspondence, is either an impractical or premature procedure on the part of the educators interested. There can be little doubt that the modern picture is an American contribution to the Arts, despite the affiliaction occasioned in so-called cultivated circles today on the wings of such fatidical information. D. W. Griffith's declaration that an eighth art was in the making is not of very dusk, many of them so low in key that for a while they resist the scrutiny. Their rigid and heavily enameled surfaces have the colours of night when the moon is small and chill and hard, of ancient tapiseries with tarnished gold, or scree leaves in November and the smoke-blue of winter. But the silver coldly burns amid profound and unendable blacks; rims of dreamy light glow pales as the green skies of after-sunset; dustest gold of night-cloud edge is subtly and mystically harmonized with sable and with the aureate browns of embossed leather. The fanfaren of romance breathe through the tender, mysterious tones, the sensitive-feeding forms, of course. Time, which actors veers in the sinister gloom; the sea creeps away from a dark like an opened flower; sails belly into the fathomless heaven and heave their craft towards the indifferent sorcerer's moon; a skeleton rider with scythe flits round the track into the dun immeasurable distance. Of course, this is not the description of characters, but it is adequate description; such descriptions of background would make for an adornment, and a mood in screen writing that would prove inspirational to directors of a higher type men like Tourneur, Ingram, and the DeMilles, for instance. The language of feeling and poetry is the language of the higher drama and enwriten it will inspire continuity writers and directors to more poetic and artistic efforts—to finer employment of nuance—to all contributing factors that will make possible imperishable celluloid documents.

The technique of the short story or the novel is entirely disparate from that of the screen. Drama and poetry is the rub in the photodrama. Only the language of pictures can avail. The feeble efforts of eminent authors—a generous, kindly interpretation of the word eminent—to write for the screen, and their dismal and nearly complete failure to master the screen idiom, should thoroughly eciliate the whole problem.

The screen never will stand in need of ardent pioneers, trained in the rudiments of screen writing, as it does today. Young America should be taught to express itself in the art form which is primarily America's. The rhythm, the symbolism of the arts which will some day interpret nation to nation and race to race.

FLORENCE LAWRENCE

simply crass prejudice or naive pomposity.

The handwriting is on the wall.

There has been a recent free-for-all denigration of the films in bookish as well as evangelical quarters, the one on the grounds of the rocco treatment accorded literary masterpieces, the other on the ground that certain directors elaborated their cinema cans with pornographic scenes and florid dashes of wild women, pre-eighteenth amendment disciples, and occasional ribald screen sonneters. Furthermore, one Burton Rascoe in a recent BOOKMAN referred to all scenario writers as the backwash of literature. According to certain self-constituted intellectuals, it is direly unwise to even consider learning to write for the screen, lest one forge the blemishes of the pale leaders of thought and culture—and lose the track to the Paranivanic bliss of these tall-browed ones. Well, what of it? Let the high-brow retain his unassuming Thules, let him continue to rant and storm and buffet his edilonic foes with steel and pen alike.

I am still in hopes that the writing of scenography, or photoplay synopses, will advance to a point far beyond the present. That either photodramatists or continuity experts will be up to the level of this in this decade is improbable. Yet there is this possibility: writing in terms of sequential pictures inevitably connotes a pictorial idiom. For instance, what marvelous visualization is expressed in the language of the critic Paul Rosenfeld, in describing some paintings by Ryder in a recent DIAL. Among other things Rosenfeld writes: "They are pools Little two-year old Bruce Geroni is on location in Arizona with the Thomas Meighan company filming “Proxy Daddy,” under the direction of Al Green.

The Associated Advertising Clubs of the World have issued a bulletin warning that an old film called “Three Musketeers,” is not the production made by Douglas Fairbanks.

Julian Saenger and E. V. Richards, Jr., of New Orleans, are guests at the Ambassador Hotel. Mr. Richards is general manager of the Saenger Amusement Company of New Orleans and one of the original First National franchise holders of the exhibitors’ circuit.

DIRECTOR HOWE PASSES AWAY

The entire film colony is mourning the death of Elliot Howe, director of Benjamin Hampton Productions. Mr. Howe and Jean Hersholt recently completed the picturization of “Wildfire,” the latest B. B. Hampton production.

LEGAL QUERIES

Q. What is necessary to assign rights to a copyrighted work?

A. Assignment must be in writing and filed for record with the Register of Copyrights, Washington, D. C., within three months; otherwise the assignee is precluded from setting up any rights against subsequent purchases for value.

If any rights are reserved by the assignor, the same, or the rights conveyed, should be specifically set forth.

For example, if the intention is to convey only photoplay rights of a novel, the assignment should specifically state that such rights alone are conveyed; should the conveyance be couched in general terms, the assignment may easily be construed as conveying photoplay, stage, and rights of every nature incident to ownership of copyright.

Q. In case of breach of contract by producer, can the actor accept other employment and sue for full amount provided for in contract?

A. He may sue for full amount provided for in contract, but can only recover the amount actually lost by reason of the breach, said loss being established by the difference between the compensation provided for in the original contract, and the sums he earned, or could have earned, in other employment during the period covered by the terms of the contract. This, of course, would not oblige the actor to accept other unsuitable employment, in order to reduce the damage sustained by him. However, any moneys he may have realized from suitable employment, whether accepted or not, may be claimed by the producer as a set-off.

Q. In conveyance of motion-picture rights by the author, without specifying any restrictions, does he forego all rights therein?

A. No. Although he cannot further avail himself of his work for motion-picture purposes, the purchaser or his assignee cannot garble or revamp the story as he may choose. The producer may make any reasonable adaptation, but cannot, without the author’s permission, rehash the tale so that it will not reflect the story of the author. The author’s reputation may suffer greatly by a mongrel reproduction of his story, and the law will accord him appropriate protection.

This subject is reminiscent of a phase of the recent suit involving Ferdinand Pinney Earle’s “Rubaiyat,” and of Fanny Hurst’s reported scoring of those responsible for the picturization of her novel “Star Dust.”

Although there is record of no case where damages were awarded in an instance of this character, the trend of decisions, and the equities of the case, would indicate that the author, in case of an unreasonable perversity of his story, may enjoin its showing, or recover any damages sustained thereby.

CLYDE FILMORE

WAR FILMS AT ANNAPOLIS

“T he Battle of Jutland,” the film portrayal of a naval conflict, is to be presented at the Naval Academy at Annapolis on January 7th by Educational, under the direction of Admiral Wilson, superintendent of the Academy for the benefit of the naval students and officers at the Academy.

For the army and navy officers unable to attend the showing at Annapolis, Educational will repeat the program at the Marine Barracks at Washington shortly after the presentation at the Academy.

LEHRS ENTERTAIN

Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Lehr entertained at their home recently. Among the guests were Charles Chaplin, Richard Dix, Rupert Hughes, Mr. Chas. G. Norris and Mrs. Kathleen Norris.

As hostess, Mrs. Abraham Lehr introduced as the guest of honor, Mabel Normand, starring in Mack Sennett’s production of “Molly O.” at the Mission Theatre.

Messrs. Ball, Adams, Smith and Atkinson, visiting from England, were also guests of the evening.

George Hernandez, who recently completed a leading role in Constance Bingham’s new picture, is playing an important part in “The Trail of Kisses,” a Winter-Ryndels production, which features James B. Warner.
Production Notes

AT UNITED

Constance Talmadge's starring production, "The Divorcee," which Sidney Franklin is directing, will be completed within two weeks.

Director James Young will start production on "The Masquerader," starring Guy Bates Post, on December 27th.

Emory Johnson is in San Francisco filming exterior scenes for his personally directed production, "The Midnight Call.

Lloyd Hamilton's Hamilton White Comedies, is finishing the fifth of his series and Jack White is starting on his fourth production.

J. L. Frothingham is titling "The Man Who Smiled."

AT THE INCE STUDIO

Work on the Thomas H. Ince production, "The Brotherhood of Hate," a drama of the Kentucky mountains, has commenced under Lambert Hillyer directing.

Le Roy Stone, working under the direction of Thomas H. Ince, has finished cutting "Skin Deep," a forthcoming First National release.

Final scenes of "The Hottentot" are being filmed under the direction of Del Andrews and James W. Horne.

AT VITAGRAPH

"The Man from Downing Street," starring Earle Williams, is due to start production within the week.

Belcher's Griffith is in Florida, with her company, filming "Island Wives." Webster Campbell is directing.

David Smith will direct Alice Calhoun's next picture, the script of which is now being prepared.

EDUCATIONAL RELEASES

Current Christie Comedies recently completed and delivered to Educational for release are: "One Stormy Knight," "A Rambling Romeo," "By Hook or Crook," and "Twas Ever Thus.

The next Torchy Comedy featuring Johnny Hines as the office boy of the Sewell Ford Stores, will be "Battling Torchy." "Torchy's" current release is "Torchy Takes a Chance."

STEWART STORY CHOSEN

Louis B. Mayer has selected "Rose o' the Sun" as Anita Stewart's next starring vehicle for Associated First National release. Madge Tyrene, former newspaper woman, is making the screen adaptation of the story by Countess Barycynska.

LATE UNIVERSAL RELEASES

Late Universal releases are: "Across the Dead Line," starring Frank Mason (2 reels).

"PENROD FINISHED"

With the completion of a special prelude in which historic American youths are portrayed, Marshall Neilan has just finished his picturization of Booth Tarkington's "Penrod" with Wesley Barry in the title role.

Under Mr. Neilan's direction, D. J. Grey, film editor, is now cutting and assembling the picture, the advance print of which will be shipped to Associated First National Pictures, the distributors, within the coming week.

TAKES OVER CACTUS FEATURES

Roger-Halperin Productions have taken over the production of a series of eighteen out-of-door pictures co-starring "Bob"

"ANN MAY"

Reeves and Maryon Aye. Albert Rogell will direct and Victor Hugo Halperin will write the stories, as well as assume the business management of the organization.

"VAN LOAN CONTEST JUDGE"

H. H. Van Loan, photo-dramatist, departed for Phoenix, Arizona, to conduct a photo-play contest, of which Mr. Van Loan is to judge the winner. First prize will be a scholarhip in the Palmer PhotoPlay Corporation; and other prizes will aggregate $150 in gold.

Following his appearance in Phoenix, Mr. Van Loan may make a short tour of California with "Flightin' Mad," his latest photo-play, which features William Desmond.

His local appearance, it is reported, will be at the new Pantages Theatre.

COMPLETES TITLING "MONTIE CRISTO"

Thos. N. Miranda, Fox editor, has just completed titling the latest Fox Special, "Montie Cristo." Among the pictures Mr. Miranda has titled during 1921 are "Shame," All Star; "The Last Trail," All Star; "The Connecticut Yankee," All Star; "The Road Demon," Tom Mix; "The Primal Law," Dustin Farnum; "The Big Town Round-up," Tom Mix; "At Your Service," Mix and the Selig-Kirk special; "The Rosary," soon to be released.

"THE PREVIEW THEATER"

There is a movement on foot fostered by Mr. Al Nathan of this city, whereby, if he receives the cooperation from the various studios making films at Los Angeles for distribution throughout the world, he will sponsor a unique theatre, in fact the only one of its kind in the world. He has properly negotiated for the theatre that will bear the unique title of "The Preview Theatre." The name of the theatre is what it means, he says. It is the intention of Mr. Nathan to exhibit exclusively pictures of the foremost studios and directors of Los Angeles, prior to the usual cut of them, which is usually done in New York City, after the negative arrives there. He will set aside one night each week for a well-known studio, and this will be maintained throughout the coming year. For example, every Monday night will be Goldwyn Night, every Tuesday night will be Universal Night, Wednesdays might be Paramount Night, and so on, each night being devoted to the particular studio furnishing the film for that evening. Sunday night will probably be devoted to independent producers, not affiliated with any releasing concern or studio.

Mr. Nathan's intention is to show these films at the "Preview Theatre," twice nightly, the first performance starting at seven o'clock, and the second at nine o'clock, in the evening. He will apportion a certain amount of seats gratis each night to the studio, a certain amount to the press, so they may review this picture before it leaves for New York, and also a certain amount of seats to the exchange manager, so he may invite such exhibitors as he wishes to see the film for booking at their theatres. This also gives him two or three extra months in advance to work upon his customers, before the finished print returns to California for release. The balance of the seats will be sold to the general public at fifty cents, a price which will include war tax. This is merely to defray the overhead expenses, and at the same time gives an audience to the director of unbiased opinions, who will approve or disapprove the picture, according to their own opinions. This is just what the director seeks, and can get in no other way.

In addition to the showing of this feature, in order to round-out a complete program, another feature will be introduced, which is also an innovation to Los Angeles, and that will be in the form of introducing for the first time to the public, an opportunity for various dancing schools, to stage a Prologue each week, given by the pupils at the institution, who have graduated, or are about to graduate from that particular school. In presenting these schools, Mr. Nathan has in mind such schools as the Denishawn School, Norma Gould's School, Earnest Belcher's School, Dagmar Dalgin's School, and schools of this calibre. Each school will present a little tableau, which will run the entire week, and will in no way conflict with the pictures shown on that night.

A further innovation will be the introduction of a string quartet of ladies to furnish the necessary musical embellishments.

Mr. Nathan has already made arrangements with a few of the local producers, and contemplates the closing of the final deals with the remainder, in the next few days, at which time he will also announce what theatre he has secured for the showing of these pictures.

Lois Zellner is responsible for the scenario of "My Boy," starring Jackie Coogan, now playing at the Cinema.

When William Farnum completes his present picture for Fox he intends going to Havana for a short vacation.

Looking Ahead

As we look another new year in the face we are slightly disturbed by an echo of the bitter wall raised over recent studio inactivity; for while there is not now the panic in the air that threatened for a time, several thousand actors are still resenting the foreign invasion that by filling many theatres the country over, with German and Italian films, has resulted in decreased domestic production and consequently in a less cheerful holiday season for their individual homes. When any man's personal comfort is hit he meditates and agitates—and the average picture man has experienced many balmier days than 1921 has included in its trying calendar.

Meanwhile, the larger producer is strangely silent probably for the very good reason that he has nothing to report. Capital is overly difficult these days and we doubt not that many are hanging on by the eye teeth who have not as yet been suspected of such.

One encouraging circumstance, however, appears upon the horizon. If our big, standard outfits are suffering untimely lay offs, there are yet some half dozen more companies shooting in Los Angeles this week than there were one year ago now, which indicates that history is repeating itself in the independent line. The small picture man did considerable to the apparently substantial General Film Company in the cinema's younger days. It is significant that four reliable releasing and two financing concerns for the independents have been lately organized. They are sure to find much business to consider.

Nevertheless this type of production has not yet been organized to the point where it is making up to the free lancer for that which he has lost in other quarters. We hope that the situation will soon be developed to such a position, for nothing but commercial selfishness is ever to be expected from any set of allied magnates.

Under no circumstances should we indulge in hysteria or pessimistic exaggeration. Conditions are undoubtedly improving if but slowly.

Maybe our attitudes have more to do with the general atmosphere than we have imagined. In any event we cannot afford to overlook even the slightest detail which might strengthen our prospects for 1922. The new year must unfold a new story. Every one's energy is necessary to help.

The Ohio Convention

We reprint the following report upon the new organization of the Ohio exhibitors from the Moving Picture World both for its news value to our industry and to give us an excuse for the observation that every picture body and thing seems to have the strength of real organization behind it, save the Los Angeles independent producer. He is about old enough to find interest in worldly things if he has himself to support and competition to meet. However, we’re off the subject.

"The most important convention of Motion Picture Theatre Owners yet to assemble in Ohio was opened on December 12 in the Waldorf Hotel, Toledo. Exhibitors from all the principal cities in the state were present, as well as visiting delegations from New York, Michigan, Illinois and other states.

"Among the leading representatives of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America were Sydney S. Cohen, national president; Senator James A. Walker, national counsel; Sam B. Berman, state secretary of New York; Francis Holley, director of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Public Service Department; M. J. O'Toole, chairman of the Public Service Department, member of the National Legislative Committee, Scranton, Pa."

"The purpose of the meeting was to more completely solidify Ohio exhibitors in a state-wide organization for the purpose of affording a better degree of protection to them in all matters requiring attention in and out of the industry. The special matter to be considered by the Ohio organization is possible adverse legislation which may come forward at Columbus after the new year, as well as to care for legislation of a national character at Washington.

"A number of conditions within the business itself, affecting the relative interests of producers, distributors and exhibitors, are also to be considered with a view to making such proper adjustments as will set aside every element of injustice and give all concerned a square deal in the conduct of their business. There are now two divisions of the organization in Ohio representative of the northern and southern sections of the state. For the purposes of purely local matters, these two bodies may still continue to function, but for all matters affecting the state as a whole, as national legislation, the state body created will have complete charge.

FILMING RUSSIAN SCENES

Ariel Vargess, the International News cameraman, is at present in Russia, and is supplying International News reels with pictures of life and conditions in the land of the Soviet.

It was Mr. Vargess who made the first official pictures of Pope Benedict XV at the Vatican last week, and which were included in the International News reels as the news film "beat" of the year.

PREPARING MACDONALD'S NEXT

Violet Clarke's story, "Domestic Relations," which Katherine Macdonald has just completed, won for the writer a long term contract with B. P. Schulberg, president of Preferred Pictures, the organization that makes the Katherine Macdonald screen product.

Miss Clarke is now engaged in preparing the scenario of Miss Macdonald's next offering, "White Shoulders," by George Kibbe Turner. Under her contract with Mr. Schulberg Miss Clarke will confine her writing to the Katherine Macdonald productions.

COMPLETES SECOND

The Commonwealth Motion Picture Producers are now cutting and editing "No Ransom," which is the second of a series of twelve comedy dramas with western settings. "5:13," the first, is now being released through the Allied Enterprises. These scenarios are written and directed by Fred Caldwell.

EARLE FILES SUIT

As the result of the departure of Mrs. Queen Boardman, Herbert D. Newcomb and a film cutter for New York City with the uncompromised "Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam," Ferdinand Earle has sent notices to all motion picture distributors in America warning that he has filed suit against The Rubaiyat, Inc., seeking to enjoin them from releasing, distributing or exhibiting the picture he produced.

SOUTH SEA PICTURE FINISHED

Mesers. Alder and Unander announce the completion of The Far East Productions Company's first presentation, "The Lagoon of Desire." The film has been edited and titled and will be taken to New York immediately.

The cast of "The Lagoon of Desire" includes Ruth Renick, Edward Hearn, Walt Whitman and Frederick Stanton.

A company organized in Los Angeles is producing, in a series of pictures of two reels each, adaptations from Grimm's Fairy Tales and other childhood classics.

CHET WILCOX敵, who directed Katherine Macdonald's last screen product, "Domestic Relations," a future Associated First National Picture release, is now engaged in editing the film.

NORMAND RESUMES WORK

Mabel Normand has resumed work on her next Mack Sennett feature, "Suzanne," after having been confined to her home with a severe cold.

"The Fox," starring Harry Carey, was presented on Broadway, New York recently, in the Central Theatre.

AT GOLDwyn

The photography on "The Dust Flower," a Bob Wood story, will be completed shortly. In the cast are Helene Chadwick, James Renick, Claude Gillingwater, Mona Kingsley, Edward Peil and George Pecord. Rowland Lee is directing. Charles Kenyon made the adaptation in collaboration with the author.

Gouverneur Morris' Chinese fantasy, "What Ho—the Cook," has been retitled "Whims of the Gods."

"Watch Your Step" has been chosen as the release title for Cullen Landis' first starring vehicle, formerly called "The City Feller." This Goldwyn picture was written by Julian Josephson and directed by William Beaudine.

AT UNITED STUDIOS

Production on Norma Talmadge's first starring vehicle, "The Duchess de Langeais," will be commenced on January 24. Frank Lloyd will direct.

Constance Talmadge will complete "The Divorcee" within a week and will take a brief rest before she commences work on her next production.

Jackie Coogan's second starring story, as yet untitled, will be completed in two weeks.

Chester Bennett, who is directing the starring activities of Jane Novak, is reading a script in search of another vehicle for Miss Novak, while he is editing her recently completed production, "The Starveling."

Madame Alla Nazimova and her company, filming Ilsen's "A Doll's House," for her coming United Artists release, are on location at the beach where a rocky coast line is being used for one of the final scenes. The work of cutting and titling the picture will be started immediately as it is scheduled for release the second week in January.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Harold Lloyd is taking the final scenes this week for his comedy temporarily titled "He Who Hesitates." Mr. Lloyd is also supervising the cutting and assembling of the picture, four reels of which are nearly completed. H. M. Walker has titled two reels.

Harry "Simm" Pollard finished a comedy this week and began production on a new one which R. J. Cedar is directing.

The following comedies were shown this week in preview at the studio: "Pardon Me," "A Simm" Pollard picture; "High Tide," a comedy, with Ethel Broadhurst, Mark Jones, George Rowe and "Sunshine Sammy" and "Rich Man, Poor Man," a comedy with "Paul" Parrott and Ethel Broadhurst.

Plans are being prepared for another building to be erected on the Mack Sennett lot which will be used for a gymnasium.

Thomas H. Ince is preparing to produce "Bell Boy 13," starring Douglas MacLean, as an early Summer special.

The recently completed Frothingham photoplay temporarily titled, "A Bride of the Gods," has been retitled "Shattered Idols."
“RIP VAN WINKLE”

Clune’s
Joseph Jefferson’s stage version of Washington Irving’s quaint legend, “Rip Van Winkle,” is now released for the screen by Ward Lascelle, its producer. Perhaps the playtoplay’s chief charm lies in its pictorial value, for the performances are also attractively executed, while the effective subtitles do much to increase the delicate comedy, through which the story is simply unfolded by the direction. The settings are all just what the imagination would paint them, for the village of Failing Water.

Five generations of the Jefferson family have played old Rip, the title role of the piece, for in it this time is featured the screen’s own Thomas Jefferson whose portrayal of the famous character is undoubtedly as lovably wayward as any has ever been. He gives Rip the originally endowed irving combination, a boyishly miscellaneous mind and on old man’s tender heart. The kiddies will dote on him. Technically the interpretation would have been greatly improved by his affectation of a more realistic make-up in that section of the story which shows the hero awakened in a new world after twenty years of sleep.

Milla Davenport enacts Gretchen Van Winkle, Rip’s wild cat spouse with a fire that marks her as vividly as the other role. Gretchen is consistently well played.

Gertrude Messinger and Francis Carpenter are happily cast in Meenie Van Winkle and Heinrick Vedder as children. Their round little faces and yellow heads are delightfully Dutch.

Daisy Robinson and Hal Craig enact the youngsters grown.

Pietro Sossa as Derrick Van Beekman, the exaggerated villain, provides a necessary obstacle to two and Max Asher is an excellent type for Nick Vedder, the tavern keeper.

“Rip Van Winkle” makes an exceedingly appropriate holiday program. It is a Houdson release.

“MY BOY”

Kinema
Sol Lesser presents Jackie Coogan in the child’s first starring vehicle under his present contract, “My Boy,” a picture which must be admitted to far exceed “Peck’s Bad Boy,” an earlier offering with the lad, from the standpoint of appeal, story, continuity and performances. We understand the original to have been prepared by Jack Coogan, Sr., Louis Zelner translated it to the screen. The direction by Victor Heerman, the titling and general arrangement are all meritorious. A well balanced combination of tears and laughter also pleases greatly. “My Boy,” will do much to increase Jackie’s popularity.

Certainly he has a rich opportunity in Jackie Blair, a little orphan immigrant who swallows Ellis Island official and attaches himself to a lonely old Captain in lieu of the agency family connections. The young actor has a remarkably sympathetic personality and an even more unusual power of transition with which he backs it up. His tense and boyish senseless and sincere as his smiles. With such a range his favoritism is indefinitely assured.

The Captain, the lad’s gruff friend and benefactor, is perfectly played by Claude Gillingwater who enacted the Earl in “Little Lord Fauntleroy.” The two roles form a striking contrast proving this artist’s great versatility.

Mathilde Brundage is fortunately placed and does excellently in Mrs. Blair, the boy’s aristocratic, unknown grandmother.

Milla Davenport and May Foster complete the cast in minor roles.

First National distributes “My Boy.”

“ALIAS LADYFINGERS”

Loew’s State Theatre
A very entertaining comedy drama of crooks and others is Jackson Gregory’s “Alias Ladyfingers,” a Bayard Veiller production, starring Bert Lytell for Metro. It is even rendered fascinating by a succession of surprise twists that are a credit to the author’s originality and to the direction’s capability in “putting them across.” The satisfactory scenario is by Lenore Coffee, while Arthur Martinelli’s photography is up to his high standard.

The star’s pleasing personality is allowed full swing in Robert Ashe, alias Ladyfinger’s, a safecracker with a responsive heart. Ladyfingers is a sympathetic but tricky young man who provides some all around refreshing enjoyment. Lytell needs just such situations.

Ora Carew is suitable in Enid Cameron, the young lady, who captures the hero’s attention and Frank Elliott gives one of his well known “slick” heavy performances in Justin Haddon, a lawyer.

Edythe Chapman, however, lifts the picture from the merely satisfactory to the entirely worthwhile with a truly wonderful characterization, Rachel Stetherill. A hard hearted, long headed, stubborn, old millionairess, who continually brings misery upon herself and those she cares for while conserving a forlorn, romantic, live spirit, she is the loveliest work of Miss Chapman that we have witnessed. She is consistently played and could not have been improved.

De Witt Jennings as Lient. Ambrose, Stanley Goethals and Edward Connelly, complete the cast.

THE MAGIC PEN OF MOTHER GOOSE

The first animated cartoon in “The Magic Pen of Mother Goose” series, produced by the Harry Levey Service Corporation, and just released through National Non-Theatrical Motion Pictures, Inc., has already been booked for the primary classes of New York and Indianapolis public schools.

“It is just what we have been looking for and wanting for the primary grades,” said Miss Hochheimer, assistant to Dr. Cran- dill in charge of Visual Education for the New York Public Schools. “Give us more of them.”

“We'll,” answered Harry Levey, the producer. “Hey, Diddle, Diddle, is the first in the series. We’ll take the children into partnership and let them vote on the mother goosery that they want to see next on the screen. Tell all the children who see this one to write to National Non-Theatrical what they want next. If the teachers approve the idea and its execution why not let the children have a say?”

JANE STARR

A PARISIAN SCANDAL

Superba
The most noticeable thing about the screen stories which Universal has been handing to Marie Prevost as starring efforts is their uniform senselessness. “A Parisian Scandal,” the latest even does its best to outdo the others in this respect with a certain degree of success. In any event its plot is zil from a dramatic, a comedy or any reasonable consideration while we detected no theme whatsoever. To make matters less interesting the scenario by Doris Schroeder drags unmercifully in spots, Louise Winter is reponsible for the original.

George Cox’s direction and the somewhat elaborate settings afford this picture’s only relief from absolute inferiority as even the able performers in the cast find it too great an effort to rise above the insinuate individuals whom they play.

If Miss Prevost hasn’t some genuine comedy to substitute for the innately affected mannerisms which have been hung onto all of her starring roles thus far, she won’t last long nor so far. We have been more than disappointed in her recent work. Here she does Liane Oudoff, a forced Parisian flapper.

Tom Gallery, in the male lead, doesn’t help matters much although he shows a little more “speed” than he has previously been known to. Gallery plays Basil Hammond, a professorish young man in goggles.

Bertram Grassby and George Fisher are good for several laughs in rather inconsequential positions, Baron Stranksy and Emile Carret.

George Perdizal, Lillian Lawrence, Lillian Rambeau, Mae Busch and Rose Binse fill the remaining parts.

Productions on this order are hangovers from an earlier and less human cinema age.
Where to Find People You Know

STAR'S HUSBAND IN SUPPORT

Rudolph Cameron, Anita Stewart's husband and manager, has been drafted from his executive position in the star's company to be her leading man in "Rose O' the Sea," an adaptation of the Countess Barcynska novel which Fred Niblo will direct. This will be Mr. Cameron's first appearance on the screen since the old Vitagraph days of nine or six years ago. Miss Stewart's leading man. One of their last pictures together, "Clover's Rebellion," is still being reissued and exhibited. "Rose O' the Sea" will be presented by Louis B. Mayer through First National.

CHADWICK AND DIX TOGETHER AGAIN

Helen Chadwick and Richard Dix will be together again in "Brothers Under the Skin," a Peter B. Kyne story, which will soon go into production at the Goldwyn studios under the direction of E. Mason Hopper.

TEARLE WITH TALMADGE

Conway Tearle will play the male lead with Norma Talmadge in her forthcoming photoplay, "The Duchess of Langeais," about to start production at the United Studios.

MAYER SIGNS COOLEY

Hal Cooley, who appeared as leading man with Doris May in her initial Hunt Stromberg picture, "The Foolish Age," released by Robertson Cole, has just been signed to play with Anita Stewart in her new picture starting this week at the Mayer Studio.

JOINS PICTURE ENTERPRISE

Mrs. A. B. Masaheker has associated herself with the Commonwealth Motion Picture Producers. At a recent meeting of the Board of Directors, Mrs. Masaheker was elected to membership on the Board, and appointed to the position of General Manager.

It is understood that Ernest Butterworth, juvenile of the silver sheet, is to be featured by the Maple Leaf Productions. Coming releases in which young Butterworth appears are "Her Mad Desire," with Anita Stewart and "Jim," the recently completed Thos. H. Ince special.

Al Reitie, location manager of the United Studios, has also been made Superintendent of Studio Grounds.

Allen Holubar, who is commencing production on "The Soul Seeker," the first of his series of six pictures at United Studios has selected Byron Haskins as his cameraman.

Barney McGill has been signed by Maurice Tourneur to photograph "Lorna Doone," which commenced this week under the personal direction of Mr. Tourneur.

Wid Gunning, accompanied by Howard Estabrook, vice-president of Wid Gunning, Inc., will leave presently for San Francisco and New York, returning to Los Angeles in February to proceed with production activities.

IN SPOKEN DRAMA

Ruth Renick has deserted the films long enough to appear in a series of stage plays at Phoenix with a stock company. The Arizona capital is Miss Renick's home town.

LYTELL BEGINS TOUR OF UNITED STATES

Bert Lytell clambered aboard the Pullman that will serve as his home for the next six weeks the other morning for the first lap of his trans-continental tour of personal appearances.

When Bert concluded work on "Sherlock Brown," the new Bayard Veiller production in which he is starred, he decided to devote his long-time ambition to work before the footlights once more.

Plans for Mr. Lytell's new series of Metro pictures will be announced immediately after his return to the company's Hollywood studios.

CLUB MEMBERS IN FILM

Leon Rice, Vice-president of the Mission Film Corporation, returned recently from a business and professional trip to San Francisco.

A number of San Francisco Club women, who are interested in the Mission Film Productions, will come to Los Angeles around the first of the year to take part in the Red Cross scenes in the first production, "Carry on the Race," now being filmed at the Jesse D. Hampton Studios.

LINDER ON BENEFIT PROGRAM

Max Linder recently gave a comedy reading scene from his burlesque on "The Three Musketeers," at the Examiner's Christmas benefit for poor kiddies.

Dr. W. E. Balsinger, face specialist, will be in Los Angeles at the Clark Hotel for a month, starting January 15, to attend to his picture patients.

Barbara la Marr has been selected by Rex Ingram for the role of Antoinette de Mauban in his Metro production of "The Prisoner of Zenda."

"Broken Nose" Murphy, who insists he ranks above Bull Montana in Hollywood's screen beauty classes, has been selected for a part in Viola Dana's new Metro picture, "Daphne's Disposition."

Victor Potei, "Slippery Slim," has donned the habiliments of a lean Romeo for George W. Baker's Metro production of "Don't Write Letters," in which Gareth Hughes is starred.

The last interiors for "The Great Alone," which Jacques Jaccard is directing for the West Coast Films Corporation, have been filmed with Monroe Salisbury as the star. Jaccard will take his company to Blairsden in the Feather River country for a few weeks, where snow shots will be obtained.

Frank S. Mattison, Director General of Shiller Productions, which has been producing one and two reel comedies since last April at the Monttelre Studio in Yonkers, N. Y., has closed up the eastern studio, and is at present visiting relatives in Los Angeles.

BURTON RASCOE'S ARTICLE

I have always believed that fools enter where angels fear to tread; but often in moments of droll, though somewhat poignant reflection, a dark veil lifts, the spirit of the cosmos chuckles ominously back of my shoulders, and the bitter revelation of the "low-down," the subconscious urge, the true motive, stares at me morbidly. Try as I may, by whatever process of rationalization, I cannot avoid the monstrous truth: the angels would like to be fools—for a while at least—and are very jealous of fools. True, angels prefer that all adhere to angelic conventions, but sometimes fools seem to have a different wonderfully gay season of life that the angels begin to doubt themselves. What happens then? Well, what happens whenever one is jealous or fearful of anyone or any class? What happens when the dusty, bookish angels find themselves outnumbered by earth-bound and vulgarly-bounded fools? What happens when it is somehow tragically sensed that the fools have a little wisdom and much wit, despite their lack of classified and catalogued knowledge—when fools jest with intellectual seraphs, when Herr Nietzsche terms the paths of distance seemingly spanned?

An angel by the name of Burton Rascoe, in the November number of THE BOOKMAN, writes a most convincing and irrefutable article damming the motion picture of today; he has marshalled his facts in an impenetrable mass formation. Yet even the attaining of angelic stature is within the realms of limitation, and I fear that Mr. Rascoe, like the rest of us absurd and ridiculous mortals, lives most of his days and nights in the Halls of Illusion. Life, like an opiate, has lulled him to pleasant dreams, from which—even as you and I—he only occasionally awakes.

In this dream state, so accurately described by Mark Twain in "The Mysterious Stranger," and by James Branch Cabell in "Jurgen," one is often entirely engulfed in the loving or slaying of phantoms; one is often actually slain in turn by Time while blinking in the humorless fields of some fabulous, quixotic Dreamland. In this state, one becomes easily aroused to frenzies over inconsequential things, forgetting or forgetting the grand perspective of Eternity. In this state, one is apt to be "het up" about such things as art and industry, and to actually separate and minutely define them. This is, of course, a bit of irony on the part of the Cosmic Jester.

Mr. Rascoe in his article dams the motion picture of today. Why is this a breakfast, why the note of rage? Why the hysteria, the calling of names, the sticks-and-stones attitude? Instead of calling scenario writers "the backwash of literature," directors "vain-glorious," and actors "strutting pomade addicts," thereby weakening some otherwise sound argument, why didn't Mr. Rascoe remain "the gentleman" by employing the aristocratic weapon of silence? He could have thus asserted his contempt, without descending to the grosser vibrations and so betraying his innate jealousy of fools.

MIRIAM BELLAH

Only a bizotted ass would assert that the motion picture has produced any work of Art of unusual significance, or that at its heights it has approached the masterpieces of the drama and the printed word. But scenario-writing is a few years old; there has hardly been time enough to develop any Molières, or Bostands—or Eugene O'Neills! Our playwrights and fictionists are the result of long evolution, with much tradition and example to build upon, whereas motion picture writers, directors, actors, and cinematographers are still experimenting—or being experimented with.

The grave trouble with Mr. Rascoe is that he really wants a millennium, where his brothers and sisters of the human race will all appreciate Bach, Beethoven, Sophocles, Aristophanes—and Burton Rascoe. He has not glimpsed or at least fastened upon the fact that he is only aware of the importance of his likes—which are himself—because he is able to look down upon the likes of others. (Again I feel indebted to Herr Nietzsche's "pathos of distance.") Therefore, for the intellectuals to become conscious of themselves the presence of the anesthetic masses is required—for contrast.

Mr. Rascoe and all other intellectuals should root out their damnable jealousy and substitute an attempt at understanding or even pity—which is on the borderline of revelation. It is a fact that in all ages a great majority of folk have admired and loved things simple, sentimental, or obvious. No matter what strides the motion pictures make, there will always be a demand for photoplays which match the average comprehension, just as there will always be a demand for such songs as Gus Kahn composes and such novels as Harold Bell Wright achieves.

As to what is art or what is not art, I would refer Mr. Rascoe to the dialogues of Nietzsche. I do not believe anyone capable of proclaiming where art begins and where it leaves off. Even among the self-conceited intellectuals, two "authoritative" critics have been known to pass diametrically opposed judgments upon a tome or a painting or a musical composition. Straddling space is preferable to such mental acrobatics.

After all, Rascoe's attitude is an expression of class-consciousness. He wants only that called Art which he and his class can respond to with respect or reverence. But he analyzes with such a conviction that there are millions of souls who find beauty in things which he denies, who laugh where he sneers, who weep at things which would bothe him.

Many things Mr. Rascoe says about economic conditions as determinants of photoplays are unquestionably sound. Perhaps in some quarter a finer artistic consciousness will be aroused which will function—so that the few as well as the many may be entertained, cinematically speaking.

However, it is always just as important and probably more important, that the masses be entertained and instructed with photoplays they can understand and enjoy. While it is urbane that the motion picture field, to quote Mr. Rascoe, "is held at pres by ex-chaffeurs and ex-scene shifters," it is quite probable that these fellows speak the language of the masses, that they have it in their power to make the people laugh and cry, and think, who would fall asleep during "The Last Night of Don Juan."

There is a deeper law than economics which causes all forms of entertainment and instruction to be published for the few, and not to the many rather than the few. The many will not be overlooked while the few are being catered to, and the many are congenitally unable to rise to the concepts of the few.

Paradoxically enough, Mr. Rascoe—of the intellectuals—childishly refuses to be perverted by movie censorship because the movie magnates and the press did not cry out against the suppressions of Dreiser's "Titanic," or against the imponding of "The Little Review," "The New York Call," or "The Liberator." Poor Mr. Rascoe, don't you realize that ninety per cent of the movie magnates and editors never heard of the above books and publications, much less of their being suppressed or impounded?

How does Mr. Rascoe think the motion picture to evolve art if it is to be circumscribed by moralists? Suppose, to terminate futile argument on both sides, that we would proceed to dividend to his question that the motion pictures are today an industry, not an art? How about all our tomorrow? And doesn't Mr. Rascoe realize that if the moralists censor movies, they'll later go after literature and the drama? Isn't there a common cause here?
CHRISTMAS PARTY HOSTS

Hal E. Roach and Mrs. Roach acted as hosts recently when the Christmas doings at Hal E. Roach Studios took place at which to present Mr. Hal, who prepared a costume for Mr. Roach, the leather traveling bag and to Hal Roach for his new cruiser the Gypsy, a ship clock of bronze with the name of the craft engraved on it. Both gifts were from the employees of the Studios.

TO LECTURE ON CONTINUITY WRITING

A series of lectures on continuity writing will be given in the Union League building, beginning next week by Wycliffe A. Hill, President of the Photoplaywrights League of America. It is stated that Mr. Hill will make a tour of all the large cities in the United States during the year 1923 for the purpose of lecturing on photoplay writing under the auspices of the League.

LINDER ENTERTAINS

Max Linder was host recently to a merry Christmas party. His guests included Charlie Chaplin, Gloria Swanson, Jack Gilbert, Leatrice Joy, Gouverneur Morris, Bessie Love, Gaston Glass, Ruth Wightman, George Gomier and Lila Lee. Dancing was enjoyed with music by a jazz orchestra.

TENDERED FAREWELL DINNER

As an appreciation for his seven years' service with Universal, George E. Kann, who has resigned his position as Universal Export Manager to head the Export Department of the Goldwyn organization, was the guest of honor at a surprise farewell dinner given by Universal employees recently in New York City.

Clarence Geldert, President of the Mission Film Corporation, addressed the Brotherhood of the West Adams Methodist Episcopal Church recently on the subject of "A Clean Screen." This is Mr. Geldert's plan to interest the public in the industry as something more than a business, and get the men and women of America working for clean pictures and supporting the producers who are making them.

Co-starring Elstie Ferguson and Wallace Reid, "Forever," a George Fitzmaurice, Paramount production opens at Grauman's Theatre. Among those in the cast are Elliott Dexter, Dolores Casinelli, Montago Love, Barbara Ivan, George Fawcett and Paul McAllister.

Monte Montana, who is being featured in a series of shorts at the Western Classics Studios, under the direction of Bob Horner, has returned from San Diego, where he spent Christmas with friends.

VACATIONING

Bebe Daniels is now enjoying her first vacation in several months, having just completed "A Game Chicken," an original story written for her by Nina Wilcox Putnam.

After finishing a comedy part as the cardinal in Max Linder's burlesque on "The Three Musketeers," Bull Montana has sailed for Honolulu.

GETTING ACQUainted WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE

Cecil Holland

Cecil Holland, the screen's pre-eminent make-up artist, whose series of articles upon picture make-up proved so popular when they appeared in Camera a couple of years ago, has, in the past few months had more distinctive work to his credit than is often the case in this or any other business.

Besides creating unusual and invaluable types out of his make-up case, Mr. Holland is a recognized character actor. He will soon be seen in "Penrod," Nelan's latest production, and he interprets dual heavies in Lasky's "Moran of the Lady Letty." Not long ago he played Roger Unthick in "The Great Impersonation," and a part in "A Wise Pool," both Paramount offerings.

The remarkable character make-ups in "Little Lord Fauntleroy" are the responsibilities of this versatile young man as is the one affected by Claude Gillingwater in Jackie Coogan's "My Boy."

Mr. Holland numbers among his more spectacular creations the ape-man, played by Bull Montana, in Nelson's "Go and Get It," and the blind soldier in Pickford's "The Love Light."

A man with the ability of this one is not only an asset to any profession, he is indispensable to it.

ELIMINATE DAYTIME NOISES AT UNITED STUDIOS

Through an innovation just put into effect by M. C. Levee, President of United Studios, the carpenters and set-builders at United will work after hours, thus eliminating the daytime noises that hamper production and affect the work of the directors and players.

HAYAKAWAS ENTERTAIN

The Viscount Elchi Shibusawa, of Japan, who was a recent visitor in Los Angeles on his way home from the arms conference at Washington, was the guest of honor at a tea given by Mr. and Mrs. Sessue Hayakawa at the R-C Studios in Hollywood. The Hayakawas explained the mechanics of picture-making to their guests, showed them the shops and stages of the studio, and then took them to the projection room where bits of Hayakawa's last picture, "The Vermilion Pencil," were screened.

SONG FOR NEXT TALMADGE PICTURE

The Norma Talmadge Film Company has just closed a contract with M. Wilmut & Sons, music publishers, whereby the song, "Smilin' Through," by Arthur A. Penn, will be used in various ways as an exploitation aid, when Norma's next First National Picture, "Smilin' Through," is released in February.

Teddy, who has become famous as a dog actor in Mack Sennett Comedies, was an active waiter during the holidays in collecting funds for the Salvation Army's Christmas benevolences. Wearing the gara of the army and carrying a tambourine he collected large sums.

GEORGE BERRELL

McGEE RETIRES

One of the real pioneers in motion pictures in Los Angeles, James L. Mcgee, manager of the Selig Studio and Zoo for many years, has resigned from all business activities.

Besides his fourteen years with Selig, Mr. McGee was previously with Henry W. Savage for seven years.

EXPLOITATION WEEKLY MAKES ITS DEBUT

A new weekly magazine published by the Universal Exchange to create exhibit and enthusiasm in the exploitation of Universal productions in the New York territory, made its debut recently.

The new publication is called "The Big U Exploitation Weekly," and it is written and edited by Marc Lachman, Exploitation representative of the "U" Exchange.

Katherine Macdonald has just been selected by the directors of the Annual Photo Exhibit of Beautiful Women of the World to represent the most beautiful woman in America at the exhibit which will be held at the Swinger Galleries, Kansas City, commencing January 2d.
Gunning announces expansion

Wild Gunning's arrival from New York last week brought out several facts regarding the Wild Gunning corporation, which are of importance to the independent motion picture producers, for whom Mr. Gunning has established an independent market for his product.

In the expansion of his Los Angeles branch, Mr. Gunning announces the following appointments, effective immediately: George Slater, formerly of the local publicity office and Frank Herin, formerly of Paramount and Realar in Seattle, as special representatives of the Gunning company; James Burdon as sales assistant and booklet; Isabel McWilliams as cashier.

In addition to the distributing branch, Mr. Gunning will, as in the past, maintain his personal offices, which will be in charge of C. H. Goodwin, Mr. Gunning's personal representative, handling producing and detail.

Mr. Goodwin, who has been in New York with Mr. Gunning for the past four months, was formerly of the George Loane Tucker productions staff.

All the profits of the distributing corporation, of which Mr. Gunning owns 190 per cent of the stock, will be divided among the actual workers who sell and exploit the productions, adopting the co-operative plan of paying well those who work intelligently and earn unusual reward, thereby applying for the first time in the film business the profit sharing principle well known in commercial fields.

Late Universal releases

Late Universal releases are:

"Cupid Inco," featuring Marie Prevost (five reels).

"The Cave of Terror," 17th episode of "Winners of the West," featuring Art Acord (five reels).

"Pinky Anne" (based on the Collier Series--"The Leather Pusher's" Round One, "Let's Go" (two reels).

International News Nos. 5 and 6.

"The Die Roomer," featuring Harry Sweet (two reels).

"Captain Kidd's Finish," featuring Mack Wright and Lilian Byron (two reels).

Beranger's European film

At this printing George Beranger is taking the final scenes of a super-production of "Sinister Street," adapted from the books of Cooper Mackenzie, "Youth's Encounter" and "Sinister Street." Those in the cast are John Stuart, Molly Adair, John Reid, Any Vervet, Roger Treville, Madame Polux and A. Poultain. "Sinister Street," a British production, comes to America early in the New Year.

Caldwell preparing third

Director Fred Caldwell and staff, of the Commonwealth Motion Picture Producers, are engaged in writing the continuity for "Dominating Influences," which will be the third of a series of twelve comedy dramas to be released through the Affiliated Picture Enterprises.

EDWARD HEARN

Plans for Mr. Neill's next production to be made in Los Angeles, are now under way. The picture will be based on a Saturday Evening Post story, negotiations for which are practically completed. Actual shooting on this film will be started within the next ten days.

INCE STUDIO NOTES

F. Ely Pagot, of the scenario staff, has received a bonus for suggesting the title, "Skin Deep," under which the Incé production of Marc Edmond Jones and directed by Lambert Hillyer, will soon be released. Ashton Sills and Florence Vidor are featured.

Irvon V. Wellat and his company making "Pawned" are in San Francisco where final scenes are being filmed along the waterfront.

Interiors for Thomas H. Incé's "The Hotlentot," have been completed under the direction of Del Andrews and James W. Horne. The production will be finished this week. Douglas MacLean, Madge Bellamy and Raymond Hatton head the cast.

Jean Havez has written music and verses for a song entitled "A Sailor-Made Man," which will be sung at the Los Angeles showing of Harold Lloyd comedy of the same name.

AT LASKY'S

William DeMille is just getting into the story of "Bought and Paid For," which he is producing, and which CharlieBernanke is adapted from the play by George Broadhurst. It is announced that Mr. DeMille is adhering closely to the stage version. Agnes Ayres and Jack Holt play the leading roles with Walter Hiers in the part which Frank Craven created.

With E. D. Rayday practically through with his production starring Betty Compent entitled "The Green Temptation." This picture has been made with the working title of "The Noose" and is adapted from a magazine story by Constance Lindsay Skinner.

With the first suggestion of a return of clear weather James Cruze took a portion of his company making "Is Matrimony a Failure?" to Bakersfield for the last shot. Ray Barnes plays the leading role with a big cast, including Lois Wilson, Lilac Lee, Walter Hiers, and others.

Wallace Reid, originally played by Philip Rosen, is back from the Mohave desert and nearby locations, where scenes were made for "Across the Continent," which Byron Morgan wrote expressly for Mr. Reid.

Back from Arizona, where in spite of the rain they succeeded in getting what they went for, Thomas Meighan's company, directed by Alfred Green, making "The Proxy Daddy," is now at work on interior scenes at the studio.

Way Mark's company is completing "Through a Glass Window" on location. This is a Realar picture. Maurice Campbell is directing the story by Olga Frintatula. Playing the male lead is Edward Hearn, who recently returned with the first company to actually make pictures in the South Sea Islands.

Constance Binney is completing scenes in "The Sleep Walker," a tale which treats of somnambulism. Edward LeSaint is directing. It is a Realar picture for release through Famous Players-Lasky Corp.

RC STUDIO NOTES

Pauline Frederick, Susse Hayakawa, and Doris May, with their respective companies, are scheduled to start work again on January 25. Miss Sneydy for Mr. Reid will be a film adaptation of William J. Locke's novel, "The Glory of Clementina." An original screen story, "Gay and Devilish," will be Miss May's new starring vehicle, while the name of Hayakawa's next story has not yet been announced. Officials of the studio have also stated that a company of well-known players will probably be organized at once to begin on a special production. R. J. Tobin, vice-president and general manager of the studio, is expected to return within a few days from New York, where he has been conferring with other company officials on future activity at the local studios.

AT METRO

Maxwell Karger, who heads a Metro production unit that bears his name, has selected to direct a new special picture. Filming of the starless feature will be started in Hollywood on the resumption of work following the midwinter vacation at the studio.

Carey Wilson, who has just been added to the Goldwyn scenarios staff, has completed a one-act play entitled "Saffron."

"PENROD" LEAVES FOR NEW YORK.

The celluloid "Penrod" is en route to New York.

Under the care of D. J. Gray, film editor for Marshall Neillan Productions, the motion picture version of Booth Tarkington's book and play is crossing the continent to the headquarters of Associated First National Pictures, which organization will handle the distribution.

Leeds Baxter, business manager for the Neillan organization, is also making the trip east with "Penrod" to arrange for the special handling of this production.

The final editing of the picture is being handled by Mr. Grey on the train so that it will be ready for presentation before the First National officials by the time the print reaches New York.

"The meeting was opened about 2 o'clock by M. G. Smith, a well-known Toledo exhibitor. Mr. Smith welcomed the exhibitors and then introduced Director of Lawton of Toledo, who spoke for Mayor Cullin Schreiber, who was unable to be present. Mr. Lawton said that no class of men come in more frequently or more frequent contact with the public and that their influence for good in this relation is incalculable. He told of the efforts put forth by a number of theatre owners which added materially to the elements of entertainment, education and general instruction in different localities.

"James A. Mattox, president of the Southern Ohio Exhibitors Association, was then introduced by Mr. Smith and made a very pleasing response to the address of welcome made by Mr. Lawton. He expressed the hope that the theatre owners would measure up to the exalted station set for them by Mr. Lawton and that they would in every way conform to the duties incumbent upon them as caterers to the entertainment and general welfare of all communities.

"Secretary Alphonso of the New York State exhibitors, told of the efforts made at Washington to bring about the repeal of the 5 per cent tax law. He declared that the value of organization in New York and other states and urged all of the exhibitors to pay special attention to the work at hand and realize how important organization is to them in this state.

O'Toole on Legislation

"M. J. O'Toole of Scranton, Pa., spoke on legislation generally. He called attention to the need for a better understanding between the people of all localities and the picture theatre owners and said this could be brought about through elements of service which the screen is able to give. He said that it is true that there would be no more adverse legislation, as the power of the screen for good would be so manifest in all parts of the United States as to bring to the side of the theatre owner favorable public opinion which would not be set aside.

"He instanced the fact that the present president of the United States, Warren G. Harding, was a newspaper publisher in Marion, Ohio. He placed beside Editor Harding the motion picture theater owner in the United States. He declared that both are practically in the same line of business from the standpoint of publicity, one presenting news and other information on a printed page and the other visualizing it on a celluloid film. Both are operating constructively for the good of the community, both are to the credit of the industry. Where the promotion of progressive public programs are necessary, and yet one is free of taxation because this service is generally recognized and other pays taxes because his division of the service is not as fully recognized.

Cohen Reviews Events

"National President Cohen was next introduced and was received with applause. Mr. Cohen told of the development of the national organization from the initial meeting in Cleveland two years ago. He pointed with pride to the fact that the organization grew with such rapidity that at the Minneapolis convention this year, over 2,000 exhibitors were present from all parts of the United States.

"He said that the purpose of picture theatre owners of America is the protection of its members and their investment and, were it not for the efforts of this organization many theatre owners would be in a deplorable condition today.

"He called attention to the negotiations with Famous Players-Lasky and said that he was pleased to say that all of the promises made by Mr. Zukor since the Minneapolis convention had been and that the best of feeling now prevails. He said there were a few matters yet to be taken up and expressed the hope that they would be adjusted in the same agreeable manner.

Massachusetts' Peril

"Mr. Cohen dwelt at length on the work of the national organization in legislative matters. He claimed that were it not for the power thus presented and the ability of the theatre owners to concentrate their energies along this line, there would be no realization of any of the benefits for which legislation of all kinds would have passed in the various states. He said that in Massachusetts there was to be a state-wide referendum on the question of censorship and that this was the first state where such a condition was presented. He called attention to the great importance to every exhibitor in the United States, as it tends to fasten permanently censorship on the country if the people of Massachusetts declare in favor of it. He added that the national organization and the Massachusetts exhibitors are arranging to defeat the proposal in the referendum.

"Referring to the question of other producing companies and the manner in which disputes were being adjusted, Mr. Cohen called attention to complaints against Associated First National Pictures, Inc. He alleged there was nothing personal in any of these disputes and the only purpose was to bring about justice for the exhibitor. He said, would be done irrespective of the personnel of any of the companies involved.

"The dinner at the Elks Club Monday night was an interesting affair and brought to the front a number of persons friendly to the motion picture interests of Ohio, and such no manner familiar with the business. At the speaker's table the rather odd situation was presented of law-makers from two different states, mingling with the wardens of the State Penitentiary, in close association with three ministers, all fraternizing with the representative picture men and women of the state.

"Senator James A. Walker of New York City was introduced as toastmaster. The first speaker introduced was Mr. O'Toole, who spoke on public service within the lines of the motion picture industry.

"The Rev. Dr. Arnold of the Washington Street Congregational Church was next introduced. He told of the use of motion pictures in teaching religious lessons and said he regarded them of the utmost importance and second only to the pulpit in potency in public appeal.

Praise from Pastor

"The Rev. S. McLeod Smith, secretary of the Federation of Churches, said that he came to this section from Buffalo, where he had the opportunity to put over the code of law in New York State. He said he was in favor of censorship but at the same time recognized the fact that the picture people are improving the character of pictures and making them more educational and serviceable to the people. He said unless the picture interests had the church behind them that they would fail in any effort put forth.

"Dr. Francis Holley told of the work being done and said if the Bureau of Commercial Economics in conjunction with the Public Service Department in forwarding industrial, educational and other programs of a helpful nature in the United States and elsewhere.

"Mrs. Titus of the Toledo Federation of Women's Clubs and currently in the motion picture committee that organization, complimented the picture people on the many improvements in pictures and extend commendations to the girls and boys, who are the agency of the members of the women's clubs.

President Cohen's Talk

"National President Cohen was greeted with applause when he was introduced by Senator Walker as the "George Washington"

Filmar Colony and Church

By Ben. B. Hampton

Misunderstandings which have arisen between the film colony of Los Angeles and the church element are the result of the attempt before prohibition of screen notables to live a Manhattan life in a "home town" city, and because of the fact that disgruntled girls who had not made good in the films claim to be "movie stars" whenever they became involved in scandal.

I predict that the time is not far distant when film folk and church folk will walk hand in hand, and together put their shoulders to the wheel of universal welfare.

I am not making a defense of the film colony—it is not necessary—but rather analyzing the conditions that have brought about a misunderstanding between the two elements in Los Angeles.

Having been a newspaper and magazine editor myself before becoming a photoplay producer, I appreciate the fact that because of their position in the limelight any action on the part of screen stars is of necessity vastly more news value than similar incidents in the lives of doctors, lawyers, ministers, or society men and women.

In New York there are thousands of professional people, and because of its area and population their individual actions are swallowed up in the vastness of the metropolis.

In Los Angeles, with its six hundred thousand against Gotham's six millions, the arrival here of a new type of individual such as the photoplayer aroused a general interest that caused the public to take a keen personal interest in their actions every hour of the twenty-four.

Their midnight parties in beach cafes and suburban country clubs, before the Volstead act, attracted the attention of the other classes who were having parties at the same type of resorts, and because of the prominence of the film stars their parties were related from town to town, each time possibly receiving added imaginative details.

If a lawyer and a cinema celebrity were in the same auto in an after-midnight wreck, by reason of modern news values, the name of the latter got all the play in the head-lines, and the former was lucky to get mentioned at all.

Los Angeles has become the home of a great player population, and is still recognized as one of the greatest home-loving towns in America, despite its metropolitan growth. Suppose that the 2,500 lights of the photoplay world were all a force for evil, this city would get a reputation for wickedness and vice all over the world.

In a few isolated instances players have given themselves over entirely to the pursuit of the primrose path, and have gotten into trouble as a result. But why condemn the remainder of the 2,500 for the tactical errors of a few.

The minister's son is on trial for murder; but does the community say that all minister's sons are potential murderers?

A doctor is charged with assault, but do we find the medical profession blacklisted on that account?

A lawyer is threatened with disbarment for dishonorable practice; but we are not condemning every member of the Los Angeles County Bar Association.

The individual players that are deserving of censure should be censured, but the entire motion picture colony should not be carelessly thrown into the shadows because of a noisy, foolish minority.

The publicity work for many picture stars has been crude. Press agents have tried to make the public think of their clients as exotic, erotic, esoteric individuals, have emphasized their freak pets, their champagne baths, their silk pajamas and diamond studded lingerie so that they have literally made curiosities out of them. For Los Angeles, at least, the public should be made to realize that the photoplay workers are just plain, every day folks, living quiet lives, having babies, buying their homes and becoming normal, sensible citizens of the capital of the motion picture world.

Producing in Oakland

The Stewart Motion Picture Company has taken a five-year lease of the Smith estate of East Oakland, Calif., where they will make pictures with all star casts.

Marie Walsham has already been signed. Webster Cullison is supervisor of direction.

Why Studios "Close Down"

It is both notable and significant that most of the studios which have NOT "closed down" during the last year have been regular clients of the Photoplay Sales Department of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation.

Four years ago we expressed the opinion that producers who consistently select their plays because of their intrinsic screenability, rather than because of their "literary" value, were destined to achieve and maintain financial success.

And now, four years later, we hold tenaciously and justifiably to the same opinion.

Nor have the producers who have regularly come to Story Headquarters for their stories had occasion to differ from that opinion. They have been too busy making good pictures for a market that is starving for good pictures to entertain the thought of "closing down."

It is not the policy of the Palmer Sales Department to urge the purchase of one story at a high price (just to make a sale), but rather to endeavor to select material that will make for continuous successful production.

Goldwyn Studios, Culver City, Calif., will consider synopsis of stories, either original or published, for their various stars as follows: Society drama for Shirley Mason; drama for Jack Gilbert; comedy-dramas and westerns for Tom Mix; western or out-door stories for Bill Russell and Buck Jones; and heavy dramas for William Farnum and Dustin Farnum. All scripts should be addressed to D. A. Epstein, and if unavailable will be returned within five days.

R-C Productions, Hollywood, Calif., are in the market for both published and original stories submitted in synopsis form, preferably by trained writers with screen angle. Stories may be of any type suitable for the following stars: Pauline Frederick, Sessee Hayakawa, Ioris May; also can use stories for special casts. Writers should avoid prachments and propaganda. Scripts should be sent to the Scenario Department, and if unavailable, will be returned within two weeks.

Thos. H. Ince Productions, Culver City, Calif., will consider stories submitted in synopsis form as follows: light comedy for Douglas MacLean, and virile dramas with big theme and unusual twists for Ince specials with all-star casts. Scripts should be sent to the Scenario Department, and if unavailable, will be returned within two weeks.

Metro Pictures Corp., 900 Cahuenga Ave., can use outdoor stories for Bert Lytell and light comedies or comedy-dramas for Viola Dana. Scripts should be addressed to the Scenario Department, and if not accepted, will be returned within ten days.

Chester Bennett Production, Brunton Studio, require stories, either synopsis or ideas, suitable for Jane Novak. Must be something very good with new twists. Outdoor stuff in the north woods type and snow scenes preferred. Scripts should be sent to the Scenario Editor, and if not accepted, will be returned within two weeks.

Campbell Comedies, Fine Arts Studios, are in the market for five-reel comedies featuring children and animals, submitted in synopsis form. Send scripts to the Scenario Editor and a report from them can be expected within ten days.

Lasky Studio will consider good stories, either published or original, suitable for their several stars, Betty Compson, Gloria Swanson, Dorothy Dalton, Thomas Meighan, Wallace Reid, etc., and for stories with big theme for all-star special features. Scripts will be read and reported upon in order of receipt, but should be heard from within three weeks.

Christie Film Co., 6101 Sunset Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif., is in the market for original stories for all-star casts, submitted in synopsis form, preferably one and two-reel farce comedies, written around young and likable people, newsweds, etc. Scripts should be addressed to the Scenario Department, and if unavailable, will be returned within three days.

The R-D-F Film Corp., Balboa Studios, Long Beach, will consider original stories dealing with Royal Northwest Mounted Police or any other outdoor subject submitted in synopsis form for Matar casts. Communications should be addressed to R. S. Roussel, and if rejected scripts will be returned after a week.

Cosmopolitan Productions, New York City. In the market for published stories only, submitted in synopsis form, for all-star casts. Scripts should be addressed to John Starbuck, Assistant Editor, Scenario Department.

Selznick Productions, West Fort Lee, N. J., will consider stories based on plays, books, magazine stories or originals, preferably presented in synopsis form. For special productions anything strong and dramatic, for several characters of equal importance, must be "different," and abundant in opportunities for the very best in picture production. For the company's several stars, stories should be as follows: Comedy-dramas, society and otherwise, in which the star has an unusual role, for Elaine Hammerstein; comedy-dramas or dramas where an action is required, preferably of typical middle-class American life, for Eugene O'Brien; strong, virile dramas, society, business or unusual stories for Conway Tearle; strong dramas with great acting opportunities, for William Faversham; farce comedies, and swift-moving comedy-dramas, for Owen Moore; comedies or comedy-dramas for Martha Mansfield; dramas in which the leading role is very dramatic and unusual, foreign types in American settings desirable, for Zena Keefe. Address all matter to The Scenario Department of the above named company.

Charles R. Seeling Productions, 1240 So. Olive St., Los Angeles, Calif., will consider stories for five-reel westerns, either published or original, with both synopsis and continuity, suitable for the male star. "Big Boy" Williams. Address scripts to the above company, and if unsuitable, they will be returned at once.

In "The Light in The Clearing"
At Clune's Broadway
You!

You are a creator, an interpreter or a builder in one of the world's greatest industrial, educational and artistic undertakings. You are well known in your profession as a competent worker with a big future or you are famous among the peoples of the universe as that irresistible fascination, a player of the silver sheet. Further than this, you take big chances with your money and art in the cause of progress and you assist materially in the financial maintenance of your government. Your charities cannot be numbered. Therefore you are not only a popular entertainer and educator of the world but a highly desirable citizen of the United States of America, and as such you find yourself continually affected agreeably or adversely by such legislations, sentiments, and financial conditions as your banking and trading neighbors experience; this, in addition to the hundred and one circumstances and regulations that you feel peculiarly through your own line of endeavor.

Now, as a great artist, a public benefactor and a self respecting human being, do you set forth your political, religious and professional views that they may be noted and taken into account as an element not to be overlooked by your national politicians, legislating reformers and the outside capital within your own industry when they are arranging your destiny in their conference rooms? Do you even dominate the community that you brought about by your presence and that your dollars are still nourishing? You don't and you know you don't, or if not, we are telling you now. Even in the capital of your great industry you count merely as any wealthy booby always counts with an outfit of ungrateful commercial vampires. You're a woolly sheep who will be led to the shearing perhaps with a hypocritical smile, perhaps with an undisguised kick. Sheared, however, you will be by those who do not even sense your mentality and soul. Why? In what does your futility lie?

In your good nature and your unusual modesty, the two great sins of an otherwise quite human people. Where are they who have manufactured the famous "temperament and egotism" stories of the picture celebrity? Rather where are they so credulous as to take studio vagaries with which you amuse yourself and friends as the real expression of your personality which in its very reticence has failed to protect itself?

Did it never occur to you that a little fiery display for the benefit of your city officials, city merchants and city professional slickers might serve a more profitable end, now and again, than the meaningless ones in your dressing room? If your agreeable disposition refuses to rise at obvious wrongs you are yet an actor! If you consider the maneuvers of your Railroad Commission which grants advanced rates to Los Angeles telephone, gas and street railway corporations at a time when your phone has been dead for three weeks, your gas is half air and you haven't been seated in a public conveyance for six months, you do notice a tightening of the spinal column, you are really that greatest of all creatures, a fighting child of the flesh!

If you are in favor of an ad valorem tax on imported films, if you are strenuously opposed to censorship, blue laws and unfair taxations, you stand between the sharks within and without your business and your fellow workers as a humanitarian. There will be several million years in which to wax good natured when you have gained planes where earthly hostilities are unknown. You may dwell in becoming modesty when the other fellow has learned to comfortable than genius.

Let your gift of expression advance your material self that eats, sleeps, and is supposed to get its jobs largely over the willing wire as well as your art and you will have accomplished a man's place in the world, sometimes more comfortable than a genius.

This little paper, run for the picture people by picture people, has generalized for you through the several years past, but your individual viewpoints are more vital. Self appreciation embracing a little talk and much action is your salvation now. All of Camera's resources are at your disposal when you awaken to your responsibilities and privileges. The work ahead of you is exceedingly great but the cause is your own.

European Notes

The German "Film Express," published in Berlin, provides the highlights on European production and exhibiting conditions which we reprint below. Some of the attitudes expressed are more than significant.

"The American film duty bill having passed the House of Representatives, is now under discussion in a Senate committee. The bill provides for a 30 per cent ad valorem duty on all cinematograph pictures imported, but the most important point is that the ad valorem is based on the cost of a similar piece of work in the United States. Foreign manufacturers are agreed that the adoption of such a law would absolutely close the American screen to work produced elsewhere, and the American bill has therefore caused the greatest uneasiness throughout the

“FOOLISH WIVES” HAS NEW YORK OPENING

At last “Foolish Wives” is ready for release, and will open at the Central Theater, New York City, on Jan. 11th.

On June 15, 1921, Von Stroheim shot the last scene and since that time, the job of cutting down the 226 reels to about 14 has occupied the attention of Universal production chiefs.

A statement recently made arrangements have been made for the first run throughout the country.

PRODUCERS INTERESTED IN “MAIN STREET”

Several producers are understood to have launched deals with the Shuberts for the film rights to “Main Street” by Sinclair Lewis.

The Shuberts hold a large amount of theatrical property generally considered available for films.

SERIAL FOR GREAT BRITAIN

D. J. Mountain, export manager of Arrow, has sold “The Blue Fox,” an Ann Little serial for Great Britain through Interocian Film Corporation.

ACQUIRE WESTERNs

McGovern & Egler have acquired the rights for a series of twenty-six two-reel westerns featuring Shorty Hamilton. Six pictures have been completed. W. A. S. Douglas directed them and is now at work on the seventh at the W. M. Smith studios in Tulsa, Okla.

BAN HAMON PICTURE

The Clara Smith Hamon picture, “Fate,” which was to have been shown in Duncan, Okla., has been barred by the City Commissioners. County officers stopped the picture recently at Comanche, Okla.

 STEWART PICTURE UNDER PRODUCTION

Anita Stewart’s new picture, “Rose O’ the Sea,” recently went into production at the Louis B. Mayer Studio with Fred Niblo directing. Dal Clawson is chief photographer and Doran H. Cox is serving as assistant to Mr. Niblo.

ROSS PRODUCTIONS

A new company has been formed to film several stories written by G. Harold Ross. It will be financed mainly by Mr. Ross who is president of the company, by Mr. Bertrand Gilmore of San Francisco, who will play leads and by D. L. Harwood of Los Angeles.

Pyramid Pictures’ first release will be “My Old Kentucky Home,” which Ray C. Smallwood is directing. Smallwood’s next picture will be “The Queen of the Moulina Rouge.”

“Shadows of the Jungle,” the circus serial which the Warner Bros. are making, will be released via the independent market and not through Federated Film Exchanges, as originally announced.

BUTLER COMPANY ON LOCATION

David Butler and the players associated with him in the making of “According to Hoyle,” enjoyed their Christmas day in the little town of Telchichi taking scenes for the forthcoming picture. W. S. Van Dyke is directing, with Arthur L. Todd at the camera and Charles J. Chic, assistant director.

AT THE UNITED STUDIOS

Mary Pickford is busily engaged in conferences with her business staff concerning the development of Jack Pickford’s production of “The Tailor Made Man.” It has been erroneously reported that Miss Pickford will direct her brother, but she will have an important hand in supervising the production.

Norma Talmadge is under way with “The Duchess de Langeais.” The artisans are rushing the extensive sets which will be one of the features of this production.

Chester Bennett is cutting Jane Novak’s “The Storyteller.”

Emory Johnson has completed “The Midnight Call.”

NATIONAL EXCHANGES, INC., NOTES

Expansion of National Exchanges, Inc., of New York City, is indicated by the increase in the Board of Directors just announced by the corporation. The officers now are Walter L. Johnson, President; Hunter Bennett, Vice-President; Dale Hanshaw, Secretary, and Daniel A. Kelly, Treasurer. Mr. Hanshaw and Mr. Kelly succeed Earl H. Hopkins who was Secretary and Treasurer.

The Board of Directors is increased from three to seven members and is composed of the four officers and Earl H. Hopkins, W. F. Ashley, Jr., and George D. Proctor.

Mr. Johnson and Mr. Bennett succeed themselves as President and Vice-President.

Distribution is through thirty-one exchanges in the United States and Canada.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Harry “Snub” Pollock is playing a dual role in his present production. Marie Mosquini heads the supporting cast, while others are William Gillespie, Mark Jones, Sam Brooks and Jack O’Brien. R. J. Ceder is directing.

Additional sets are being constructed for Harold Lloyd’s comedy temporarily titled “He Who Hesitates.” The remaining scenes in which the comedian does not figure are being taken this week. The work of cutting and assembling the picture and title writing is still proceeding.

H. M. Walker is titling the latest Lloyd comedy and several Pollard pictures.

A children’s comedy in two reels is being arranged for early production by Sam Taylor and Charles Parrott, and will be directed by Fred Newmeyer. “Sunshine Sammy” will be featured.

Douglas Fairbanks’ next will be another story by Johnston McCully, who wrote “The Mark of Zorro.”

“FOREVER” Grauman’s Rialto

No recent filming of a classic has occasioned more interest and comment within the picture profession than has that of “Peter Ibbetson” (re-titled “Forever”), Du Maurier’s sensational novel which is just released by Paramount. This, both on account of the popularity in its circuits of the stories and also of J. Paul Raphael’s successful version of it and because of the surprising fact that, cast in the tragic title role, was a screen comedian, Wallace Reid.

If we were at first startled by the arrangement we have been equally pleased with the general outcome, a production that is an achievement for its artistic producer, George Fitzmaurice. With the strokes of a master, he has painted into his picture all of the delicately toned romance with which the author unfolded the radical basic theory in his story. The performances too are guided to great beauty by the same hand which utilizes the clever material at its disposal to the best possible advantage.

When we consider that nearly as much has been dared by those who screened “Peter Ibbetson” as was ventured in its original publication, we appreciate the extent of Fitzmaurice’s ability as a human story teller, for while the theme has already been enthusiastically accepted in its various forms by the artistically educated, it is the picture theatre masses (having at best little knowledge of the fine arts yet ordering the financial fate of all photodramas), that are meeting it now with something akin to reverence. Only the subtle handling of “Forever” makes it live for the average film fan. Arthur Miller photographed the Ouida Berge scene exquisitely. The detail has been faultlessly managed.

As for the famous Peter himself, he is well accounted for by the surprising Mr. Reid who plays the part picturequely and convincingly, deserting his comedy affectations for the more fascinating serious romance at which, by the way, he is exceedingly apt. He runs the gauntlet in the love-making line as Peter, the French-born, English-raised lad whose real nature is never separated from its Southern gardens of his youth. The gentle honor of those gardens remains ever in his consciousness rendering him a convinced murderer, then a “lifer,” finally bringing him the blessing of a love almost too spiritual for this earth.

Possibly a little more characterization could have been employed in this interpretation, but for the audience nothing is missing. Reid invests very profitably more interest than is often found in his rather care-free work, here. He is strikingly graceful.

Elise Ferguson is lovely in the intense Duchess of Towers, the grown Missie, the adoration and delight of his entire life. Her smallest touches contribute indescribable refinement to her character which is the poem of a love too tender to be held, too sweet to be broken, a romance of separation.

There is something quite wonderful about this actress whose personality expresses itself in a vision of beauty. She is perfectly placed in this playhouse.

Montague Love and George Fawcett offer two artistically executed roles, Col. Ibbetson and Major Bucknose. The exaggerated villainy of the Englishman is always fitting and the Napoleonic veteran is a gem.

The parts are highlights which add immemorably to the dramatic value of the production.

Elliot Dexter, Paul McAllister, Dolores Cassinelli, Barbara Dean, Nell Roy Duke, Charles Eaton and Jerome Patrick ably dispatch the remaining work.

One can only regret the retitling of this lovely story. It is otherwise a credit to Paramount.

Gertrude Short occasions several further laughs as Justine Tate, Barbara’s pal.

Wallace Reid’s “Forever” is, through and through, a thoroughly odious heavy, Countess de Mournay, who is nicely balanced by Clarence Goldart’s Count.

Lucien Littlefield in Betty Briggs, an absolutely irrelevant part, the slight value of which lies in its ridiculousness, Henry Barrows and Pal complete the cast of this Paramount production.

“LOVE’S PENTALY” Clune’s

Hope Hampton Productions presents its star in “Love’s Penalty,” a current local release, written and directed by John Gilbert. Now if he just hadn’t written the story—but he did, we saw it and a review has to follow. Perhaps it would be best to start by saying that this screenplay has more moral than entertainment value, but the statement is inadequate. The plot is based upon the old idea of the vengeance of a girl brought down upon the man who had ruined her sister and inadvertantly caused the girl’s death, but more clumsily arranged it could never have been, even in the dark ages, gone by. It starts as a lecture from the pulpit but whether the lesson is on the need of discretion between young girls and their employers or the futility of human vengeance would be hard to state. The last scene is set under a Christmas tree which may or may not be a part of the rector’s story. There is no way to tell from the cutting. The direction clarifies none of the muddled situations. The result of the whole is far from what the public has been educated to expect.

Miss Hampton as Janis, the stronger sister, is more animated than we have known her, but her transitions are neglectful. The part is not particularly sympathetic.

Jack O’Brien in an entirely meaningless, unjustified position plays opposite the star, but it is Percy Marmont who offers the important male role in Saunders. This last is the one relieving performance in the cast.

Landers Stevens is also among the list of players.

A mediocere star like Miss Hampton should be well bolstered by superior story material and careful direction.

Otis Harlan and Thomas Ricketts are playing important roles in “The Duchess de Longeaux” starring Norma Talmadge under the direction of Frank Lloyd.

Betty Ross Clarke interprets the principal feminine role in the next Earle Williams-Vitagraph production entitled “The Man from Downing Street.”

Marguerite de la Motte will go with Douglas Fairbanks for his next picture after she is through with “Jim,” which John Griffith Wray is directing for Thomas H. Ince.

Thomas Holding has been engaged to enact a principal role in Anita Stewart’s forthcoming photoplay, “Rose o’ the Sea,” which Fred Niblo is directing.

Art Lee, well known make-up artist, is now devoting his time to making up his artists at the Caswell Studio, and not at his home as heretofore.

BABY PEGGY MONTGOMERY

The parts are highlights which add immemorably to the dramatic value of the production.

Elliot Dexter, Paul McAllister, Dolores Cassinelli, Barbara Dean, Nell Roy Duke, Charles Eaton and Jerome Patrick ably dispatch the remaining work.

One can only regret the retitling of this lovely story. It is otherwise a credit to Paramount.

Gertrude Short occasions several further laughs as Justine Tate, Barbara’s pal.

Wallace Reid’s “Forever” is, through and through, a thoroughly odious heavy, Countess de Mournay, who is nicely balanced by Clarence Goldart’s Count.

Lucien Littlefield in Betty Briggs, an absolutely irrelevant part, the slight value of which lies in its ridiculousness, Henry Barrows and Pal complete the cast of this Paramount production.

“LOVE’S PENTALY” Clune’s

Hope Hampton Productions presents its star in “Love’s Penalty,” a current local release, written and directed by John Gilbert. Now if he just hadn’t written the story—but he did, we saw it and a review has to follow. Perhaps it would be best to start by saying that this screenplay has more moral than entertainment value, but the statement is inadequate. The plot is based upon the old idea of the vengeance of a girl brought down upon the man who had ruined her sister and inadvertantly caused the girl’s death, but more clumsily arranged it could never have been, even in the dark ages, gone by. It starts as a lecture from the pulpit but whether the lesson is on the need of discretion between young girls and their employers or the futility of human vengeance would be hard to state. The last scene is set under a Christmas tree which may or may not be a part of the rector’s story. There is no way to tell from the cutting. The direction clarifies none of the muddled situations. The result of the whole is far from what the public has been educated to expect.

Miss Hampton as Janis, the stronger sister, is more animated than we have known her, but her transitions are neglectful. The part is not particularly sympathetic.

Jack O’Brien in an entirely meaningless, unjustified position plays opposite the star, but it is Percy Marmont who offers the important male role in Saunders. This last is the one relieving performance in the cast.

Landers Stevens is also among the list of players.

A mediocere star like Miss Hampton should be well bolstered by superior story material and careful direction.

PALMER OFFICES OPENED IN NEW YORK AND CHICAGO

As a result of the recent trip East of Roy L. Manker, Vice-President and General Manager, and Samuel M. Warmath, treasurer, of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation, from which they just returned, the scope of the service rendered by the Corporation has been considerably widened. Palmer offices have been established at 322 South Michigan Boulevard, Chicago, and at 527 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

The New York office is in charge of Frances White Elijah, of Santa Barbara, Calif., winner of the first prize of $2,500 in the recent national-wide scenario contest conducted by J. Parker Reed, Jr. In addition to branch bureaus of its department of education which will be maintained at the Chicago and New York establishments, there will be conducted subordinate offices of the Photoplay Sales Department. The Palmer Sales Bureau, which the Corporation claims to be "story headquarters of the world," recently inaugurated a daily synopsis service covering centuries of the world's literature, that has attracted the favorable comment of the scenario department heads of all the leading studios.

PRODUCER'S AND STAR'S SCREEN DEBUT

The starting of production on Richard Walton Tully's "The Masquerader" at the United Studios this week with Guy Bates Post in the starring role, marks the screen debut of both the producer and the star. Each of them has established himself as a recognized leader in his department of the amusement field. Tully has sponsored several productions, each of which has registered an overwhelming hit on the speaking stage.

PREPARING STORIES FOR TALMADGE SISTERS

AT LASKY'S

Following his picture, "Across the Continent," Wallace Reid will next make Richard Harding Davis' play, "The Dictator," under the direction of James Cruze. This play is the one in which Will Collier starred on the speaking stage and is being adapted to the screen by Walter Woods. It will be supervised by Thompson Buchanan.

When Thomas Meighan completes "The Con Men," under the direction of Alfred Green, his next photoplay will be George Ade's "Our Leading Citizen," written expressly for the star. Waldo E. Young is adapting the story and Frank E. Woods will supervise.

Aarnes Ayres' next starring vehicle will be the William D. Taylor production of W. Worthington Maughan's original screen story, "The Ordeal," adapted by Beulah Marie Dix.

"Val of Paradise," a story by Viola E. Roe, adapted by Will M. Ritchey, will supply Jack Holt with another star picture in the near future. Joseph Henabery will be the director and Rollin Sturgess will supervise the picture.

George Melford returns next week from New York to make a vacation extending over the holidays and is scheduled to begin work January 23rd on a picture which he will produce with Dorothy Dalton, entitled "The Cat That Walked Alone." This is an adaptation by Will M. Ritchey, of the story by John Colton.

Paul Powell is spending most of his time at the Lasky Ranch making "Theron of Lost Valley" with Dorothy Dalton as star. Fernhyn Stanlaws is hard at work on his forthcoming production which has the working title of "Over the Border," based on a short story by Sir Gilbert Parker, entitled "She of the Triple Chevron." Betty Compson is engaged in a close study of the role which she will assume in this picture. The full cast has not as yet been chosen.

EMERSON TO TALK ON BEHALF OF ACTORS EQUITY

John Emerson, President of the Actors Equity Association, has come to Washington to appear before the Senate Finance Committee which will again take up the tariff schedule dealing with motion picture importations.

Mr. Emerson will speak for a tariff, along the lines that protective measures are necessary to guard the native industry, from foreign aggression.

Paul E. Rogers of Fox will represent the National Association on the tariff question.

Lloyd "Hani" Hamilton, star of Educational-Mermaid comedies, will return to the United Studios this week after a week's visit to his parents in San Francisco. He will commence work at once on the last in his series of six pictures a year for Educational.

Wesley "Freckles" Barry rode the trick male at the Charity Circuses and Bazaars for the benefit of the Los Angeles Children's Home Society New Year week. "Freckles" attracted a lot of dollars for the fund to care for the Orphan kiddies during 1922.

Kathleen Lewis and Robert Chandler have been added to the cast of "Lorna Doone," which Maurice Tourneur is filming at the Thomas H. Ince Studio in Culver City.

Jake Abram, who has been ill for some time, has completely recovered and is ready for work in the studios.

Kenneth Gibson, son of Lee McGenous Gibson, Newspaperwoman, will interpret the role of Bobby Blessington in Richard Walton Tully's "The Masquerader," which goes into production presently at the United Studios.

Col. Gordon McGee is impersonating a sergeant of the Northwest Mounted Police in House Peters' Universal-Jewel starring vehicle, "The Storm," which Reginald Barker is directing.

Leonard Clapham is included in the cast of "The Storm," the new Reginald Barker photoplay starring House Peters.

Grace M. Adair,
Advertising Sales Manager, "Camera!"
4513 Sunset Boulevard, Los Angeles.
Dear Miss Adair:

It may please you to know that a small advertisement in "Camera!" was the means of obtaining a LEADING ROLE for Miss Carmen Arselle. Miss Arselle is playing opposite Dick Hatton in the Prairie production, "Four Hearts," a five-reel state-rights feature to be distributed by this company.

Mr. Hatton was in search of a leading woman and happened to pick up a copy of "Camera!" from my desk. He saw Miss Arselle's picture in her advertisement, arranged an interview and signed her.

If the players generally only realized the great value of advertising, "Camera!" would be treble its size—and their bank accounts would be treble their size.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE!

With best wishes, I am

Sincerely

W. M. Parker,
H.WP

VETS IN PICTURE JOBS

The motion picture industry ranks high among businesses striving to aid the unemployed ex-service men.

"Hey Eddy!" was the password at the Lasky Studio for several days recently when William D. Taylor engaged veterans to play the parts of French, Italian, Belgian, British and American soldiers in "The Noose."

Besides engagement of war veterans as extras, these men are employed in various capacities around the picture plant, as well as vocational training students of motion photography and other technical subjects.

Hope Hampton, the First National star, is due here shortly to make a picture.

The wife of Alec B. Francis, well known character actor of the screen, passed away recently after a brief illness.

"Forever," co-starring Elsie Ferguson and Wallace Reid, opens its second week at Grauman’s Rialto Sunday, Jan. 8th.

Viola Dana, Metro star, left for New York via San Francisco. She will make personal appearances at screen theatres while away from the studio.

Bert Woodruff is convalescing after an automobile accident and will be ready for work in about three weeks.

Little Richard Hendrick, child actor, has recovered from an attack of diphtheria which for a time caused alarm among his professional friends.

Marie Mosquini, leading lady in Harry "Snub" Pollard comedies, will make her first journey east in March or April.

The Screen Artists’ Guild, recently formed, will attempt to bring about better productions through cheaper manufacturing costs. Norma Talmadge and Charlie Chaplin are figures in the move.

Lilliam Guenther, the child actress, has returned from Arizona where she has been on a concert tour. Lillian will start on another tour the first of February taking in the middle west.

Lloyd Hamilton's latest release, "The Va- riant," opened the new Vermont Theatre on Vermont Ave. recently. This marks the fourth new theatre in Los Angeles that has shown a Lloyd Hamilton comedy on its opening night.

"The Eskimo Baby," an original song by Hazel Madeleine Lindoff, was recently featured by the Blue Bird Cafe, Ambassador Hotel, Morocco Theatre, and Loew’s State Theatre. Remick is handling the song for Miss Lindoff.

Harold Lloyd, Mr. and Mrs. Hal Roach, Mildred Davis and her mother left recently for New York to be gone a month. Many of the studio people were on hand to wish them good luck and a happy New Year.

"Just Around the Corner," a Cosmopolitan Production, will come to Grauman’s Million Dollar Theatre, Monday, Jan. 9th. The cast includes Margaret Seldon, Lewis Sargent, Sigrid Holmquist, Fred G. Thompson, Edward Phillips, Peggy Farr, Mme. Rose Rosonova and William Nally.

world. In some states counter-measures against the American film have been considered.

"But now the American film industry itself has taken a decided stand against this film produced in an energetic protest against the bill, pointing to the fact that the American film is absolutely capable of competing both at home and abroad. After this step by the largest American trade association, the bill in its present form may already be considered as miscarried, and thus the threat is discredited of a grave danger. The film business is international, and can thrive in all countries only if all artificial barriers are removed and a free exchange from people to people is secured. The film is not only a piece of goods as every other merchandise, but the film is the product, apt to bring the peoples of the earth again in closer touch. From this viewpoint the government of each country must look upon the intrinsic nature of the film."

"The President of the German Republic, Mr. Ebert, recently visited the film city Woltersdorf, where the 'May Film-Gesellschaft,' in close connection with the 'Europäische Film-Allianz G. m. b. H.,' is at present finishing the grand film work, 'The Indian Sepulchre.' It must be considered most gratifying and helpful to the interests of the entire film industry that the leading personalities of the Republic is manifesting such a vivid interest in the young German film industry. The visit paid by the President to the film city Woltersdorf was not meant for the film, "The Indian Sepulchre," just finishing, but for the organization of the film city on the whole."

"In Belgium the film-control commission of the department of justice (section for protection of the youth), has been exercising its functions in the past few months. The films shown in so-called family presentations must bear the stamp of this commission. Children under 16 may attend only such performances. It has already been reported in the 'Lichtbild-Bühne' that the owners of cinemas took defensive measures against this and organized a boycott against the censorship, although they were willing to have children barred from their shows. Report has also been made of the counter-measures adopted by the Belgian government, which contemplated the organization of a provisional distributing agency by the state until such time as the boycott against with "

"The new censorship is based on the law of November 1, 1920. Under this law, youths under 16 are forbidden to attend any film show except such as are especially approved for the youth by the control-commission. Violation of the law is punishable by imprisonment from one to seven days, and by a fine of five to 25 francs, or both. In addition, the offending cinema can be closed for a term not exceeding six months."

"A royal decree with the following constitution of the control-commission: It is erected in the department of justice, and is composed of the director-general, a vice-director, and a number of advisors and substitute advisors.

"The president divides the commission into committees of five members each, and names the chairman of each committee. Each committee must contain one member who is appointed by the royal government. A detailed scenario and a list of all titles, subtitles, commentaries and tests must be submitted to the commission, with the name and titles of the producer and the length of the film. The commission can restrict itself to the examination of the material, but is also empowered to require that the film shall be shown for it. The commission is obligated to make its decisions as quickly as possible, and to notify interested persons of such decisions."

Film Colony Rumors

It is rumored that a new co-operative company with a capitalization of $250,000, well-known as Co-operative Producers, are about to start production at the "U." F. H. Croghan and David Hartford are president and vice-president respectively. It is understood that Lewis Stone, Lon Chaney, Noah Beery and Henry Otto have already been signed for forthcoming productions.

It is understood that Louis B. Mayer is about to add two new companies to his producing units. Further details to follow later.

Local film circles are interested in the reported engagement of Mary Miles Minter and T. E. Dixon, son of the pencil magnate, who just arrived from New York where Mary met him last year. The report is that Director Cupid will screen the final fade-out on this romance next summer.

Sponsoring of a film studio to make pictures in Mexico is particularly for Latin American exhibition is being considered by the National Motion Pictures Finance Co. While this company would not erect its own studio there, if conditions warranted, much of the money might be advanced by the California corporation. Dr. Miller has just returned from Mexico as the guest of President Obregon, and he believes that American-made pictures are not sure fire in their appeal to the Latin-American populations of Mexico, Central and South America.

Rockett Brothers claim that their plans for the new year will necessitate their starting production activities in about three weeks.

There is a possibility that Anna Stewart whose contract with Louis B. Mayer terminates presently will join the R.C. forces. Other players who are mentioned as future R.C. stars are Robert Gordon and Pat O'Malley.

PATHES PRESENTS FUCH WITH TOUR FILM

Through the courtesy of Paul Brunet of Pathes, Marshal Fuch took with him when he returned to France recently, a tworeel motion picture record of America's reception to him on his tour of the United States and Canada.

MADAM PETROVA'S PLAY IN NOVEL FORM

Olga Petrova's stage play, "The White Peacock," in which she is at present starring, will make its bow presently as a novel. The Four Seas Publishing Company of Boston, Mass., recently made Madam Petrova an offer for the fiction rights.

CLEVER DOG CHOOSES CAMERA!

"Pal," Harry Lucenay's intellectual bulldog, who has a prominent part in Wallace Reid's latest picture "Rent Free" can actually read, for it is told to pick out "Camera!" from the other newspapers and periodicals laid on it, and he can do it without any cue whatsoever. He is the only dog in the world who is able to do this astonishing trick.

Why Studios "Close Down"

It is both notable and significant that most of the studios which have NOT "closed down" during the last year have been regular clients of the Photoplay Sales Department of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation.

Four years ago we expressed the opinion that producers who consistently select their plays because of their intrinsic screenability, rather than because of their "literary" value, were destined to achieve and maintain financial success.

And now, four years later, we hold tenaciously and justifiably to the same opinion.

Nor have the producers who regularly come to Story Headquarters for their stories had occasion to differ from that opinion. They have been too busy making good pictures for a market that is starving for good pictures to entertain the thought of "closing down."

are the greatest single force for progress in the world.

The present purpose is entirely different. It is this: “Taking a course,” or reading a few books, or listening to a few lectures on "How to Write Motion Picture Scenarios" or "How to Make a Success Raising Onions," is only a very small beginning. It makes a good leavener for the necessary ingredients of natural talent and hard work. The recipe might run something like this: "Add as much education and information as possible to as much talent and ambition as happens to be in the pantry at the time and then pour in hard work continuously until done. Serve hot."

Heywood Broun wrote the other day that the mere mechanical task of writing is as arduous and uninteresting as the job of making buttonholes—thousands of 'em day in and day out. The rewards of success at writing are, however, a heap more noticeable than the rewards that come from doing buttonholes.

Hard work—everything else being equal—is the big thing. A serious purpose and hard work that disregards everything else in life so far as is humanly possible is necessary to real success in any field of endeavor. Of course, this doesn't affect the dilettante, or any one else who's merely a dabbler.

Paul Bern, editor of the Goldwyn Scenario Department, has written an article called "Advice to the Amateur Scenario Writer." He begins by saying:

"Don't write scenarios. But if you feel you really must, that there is nothing that means more to you than the writing of stories for the screen, then go ahead, and write voluminously and exhaustively and continually."

Mr. Bern then goes on to detail some necessary points such as, to write simply, to avoid speech as much as possible, to be dramatic and stirring, to be bright and not morbid, to deal with subjects with which you are familiar, and concludes with the words: "Don't write scenarios, but if you feel you must, then write with everything in you, with your heart, your soul, your blood—for the screen is a jealous mistress and demands everything you have to give. Then perhaps you will succeed."

Which all means that the way to write for the screen is to work like the dickens. There's no short cut to success as a motion picture writer any more than there is to success in any other profession. If there was one, a lot of the people who are giving advice would be following it.

TULLY HONOR GUEST

Among the guests of honor at the annual dinner meeting of the California membership of the Alpha Delta Phi Fraternity, held recently at the Union League Club, was Richard Walton Tully, the noted producer who is now on the coast filming "The Masquerader," starring Guy Bates Post.

The toastmaster at the banquet was the Right Reverend Bishop Joseph H. Johnson. This was the first occasion of its kind where a film producer was one of the guests of honor and a speaker. Mr. Tully was a member of the fraternity at the University of California, from which he graduated in 1901.

CUMMINGS TO START NEW SERIES

Irving Cummings is about to star in a series of stories of five reels or more. The first will be "The Man from Hell's River," an adaptation of the James Oliver Curwood novel, "The Coyote."
Shouting Truth from the Housetops —truth is a rare thing anyway. But oh how rare a thing it is to find the truth about the motion pictures.

And that is the very reason for the existence of SCREENLAND—a motion picture magazine that is made where the movies are made.

Whether you are a motion picture fan or not you will enjoy its many pages of rotary gravure, that new and beautiful way of printing photographs in colors.

You will enjoy the fiction, too, because it is the best that money can buy. Sometimes it is about the moving pictures, but always it is interesting—and think of this, it is illustrated by pictures of the stars themselves who pose in the characters of the story! That is something new.

Then, if you are a fan, you will turn to the "Little Hints for Playgoers," because here you will find the real truth about the latest pictures.

Being made where the movies are made, it is naturally in SCREENLAND that you find the actual stories of the stars and productions, and there is a something in these stories that cannot be put into them by writers and editors who live miles and miles away from the place these stories deal with—HOLLYWOOD, the wonderful.

You will probably turn next, if you are an aspiring scenario writer, to the department entitled "What's the Matter With My Story?" This department is a treat to all of our readers who are also writers, because it enables them to send in their stories for a thorough criticism and analysis without any charge whatsoever.

And such writers! Elinor Glyn, Rita Weiman, Rob Wagner, Byron Morgan and Gouverneur Morris—every one of them writing all about the pictures they are making, and writing about them especially for you through the columns of SCREENLAND.

Of course, we have intimate photographs and chatty stories, too. One just couldn’t help it when one lives here as we do in the heart of an industry so full of romances as the motion picture industry is.

We are just as anxious to have you see the first copy of SCREENLAND as you will be to see the next one. We will send you one for nothing if you ask for it—

Or just clip the little coupon below and write your name and address on it and send it in with $2.00. That means twelve months of the newiest, breeziest, classiest motion picture stories and photographs you ever read or saw in all your life. And remember—it is all the truth, because it is "made where the movies are made."

A Few Observations

We thought that it was about time for the re-issue artists to get busy again after the dull spell and here they come insolently offering for sale “The Two Orphans,” an “Edison-Film Torino-Attraction,” after the manner of the contemptible publicity pirates that peddled an unauthentic, antiquated version of “The Three Musketeers” at the time of Fairbanks’ release of the big picture.

This week’s thieving exploiters, however, are more brazen than ever, when they catch-line their inserts with this startling intelligence, “The Production with a Million Dollars Worth of Publicity behind it.” Boasting of one’s dishonesty is a dangerously daring thing and in this case the whole project is doomed to failure, for the ordinary exhibitor is far too intelligent a man to permit of his being roped into dealings with any such public-fooling aggregation.

One is tempted to question “of whose property?” to the admonition “get your share” further on in the insert. Since organizations of this calibre never seriously injure any big producer, Frank Valle’s, which is making a stab at this deal, may never even be noticed by Griffith, but the entire exhibiting business should recognize and side-step those who indulge in these detestable practices. Strange, isn’t it, that there are yet individuals in the world who overlook the fact that everything gained must be equivalently paid for?

Before leaving the poor Orphans, we wish to remark that they have been further maltreated by the most incoherent review recently inserted appearing this week in the Moving Picture News. In his criticism of the latest Griffith Production, Laurence Reid with many lofty but oft-repeated phrases, undertakes an analysis of the play which he compares somewhat unfavorably to Ernst Lubitsch’s “Passion,” before winding it up with this illuminating praise: “richly photographic mediums such as the closeup and the long shot and the soft focus serve to feast the eye with their appealing effects.” Meaning which?

We understand that Hearst, through his Chicago American, is pushing a movement to preserve for posterity those films which shall be annually voted the year’s best, and presented to some governmental agency. To this end Watterson Rothacker has been consulted upon the life of film as it is now prepared and the possibility of eventually insuring a photodrama for 15,000 years that coming civilizations may study the beginning of screen literature.

This is an entirely commendable, far-sighted project, and one worthy of every encouragement. Unlimited vision is necessary to all progress.

The French “Musee Pedagogique,” connected with the Ministry of Public Instruction, is placing motion picture equipment and films in all of its country’s schools. After all our efforts in that advanced direction, we have let France beat us to the absolute decision that the visual method of education is the most efficient. Both the French and the cinema will profit by this significant step.

A great deal has been lately argued upon the first run exhibitors’ presentation policy, which was attacked some weeks back in these columns by Wm. D. Taylor for the Motion Picture Directors Association. The directorial body contends that present day showmen are injuring the cinema by the so-called bolstering process of their features with prologue effects, straight vaudeville, etc., which latter is claimed to detract from the picture in its own house besides necessitating the high admission rates through which attendance is diminished. It was pointed out that vaudeville is for the vaudeville theatre and that it is often boring to picture fans, anyway.

Personally we have suffered this experience but having attended approximately three hundred such embellished performances in the past year, we could not be perfectly sure that our taste in the matter coincided with that of the casual observer. Upon our last review day, however, we were lent confidence in our own opinion when, after sitting through an hour’s preliminary regulation entertainment at one of the city’s foremost picture theatres, the film production put in its appearance to be met with this breathless ejaculation from the rotund lady at our elbow, “Well, thank Fortune, that’s over. Of all the tedious programs—” Later that day, our own housekeeper came forth with the intelligence that one of the week’s most successful releases had been spoiled for her by the “long drawn out acts” preceding it. Thereafter we conducted a private research upon the question to be continually met with different expressions of this identical attitude. We offer this information in great triumph, but of course our pain has been more severe and longer endured than most.

A suggestion that the exhibitor could advantageously spend an hour weekly in his audience might not come amiss. His ticket buyers usually know what they want; likewise that which is undesirable to them.

NELL SHIPMAN TO START PRESENTLY

Nell Shipman is now selecting the cast for her next feature, "The Grub Stake," written by Miss Shipman, nearly all of the scenes for which will be made in Alaska. Bert Van Tuyle, Miss Shipman's manager and director recently returned from a location hunt in that country at which time all arrangements were made for housing and transporting the entire company.

Felix Graf, manager of Miss Shipman's wild animal zoo, which now comprises over 100 animals, will leave for Alaska in a few days to purchase three complete dog teams to be used in the coming production. He will also purchase polar bears and other animals to add to the zoo. Nearly all of Miss shipman's former staff will be re-engaged.

COMPANY STARS CECIL HOLLAND

Proctan Arts, a new producing company, has recently been formed to star Cecil Holland, character actor and make-up artist, in a series of short subject novelties. The first of these pictures has already gone into production at the Fine Arts Studio under the direction of Raymond Cannon. Wm. Foster, secretary of the A. S. C., is photographing the series.

JESSE D. HAMPTON STUDIOS

G. M. Anderson will have three units of the amalgamated productions at work within the next few days. Of these one is already under way, with Stanley Laurel, the English vaudeville artist featured. Fred Church will be the leading man for the Anderson westerns.

Clarence Geldert is busy directing interiors for "Carry on the Race" the Mission Film Corporation picture.

Producer J. L. Frothingham has instituted a new departure in the film business by the shipping of his prints on his latest production, "Shattered Idols," to the various First National exchanges throughout the United States, direct from Los Angeles. Heretofore, it has been the custom of producers to send their negatives back to New York, where prints are made and distributed.

AT THE UNITED STUDIOS

Jack Pickford is conferring with the Pickford organization about the details of his forthcoming production, "The Tailor Made Man." It is understood that Anthony Paul Kelley is negotiating with the Pickfords over the writing of the script.

Jackie Coogan's current production, now nearing completion, will be called "Lost and Found."

Allen Holmes has commenced production on "The Soul Seeker," starring Dorothy Phillips.

More than two months will be required in the making of the Norma Talmadge production, "The Duchess de Langeais," which is now in progress.

Caldwell Casting

Director Fred Caldwell of the Commonwealth Motion Picture Producers is now casting "Dominating Eyes," which is the third of a series of twelve, five-reel western dramas to be released through the Affiliated Pictures Enterprises.

AT UNIVERSAL

Production is nearing an end on "Peter Man," the film script written by Louis Victor Eytinge, a prisoner in the Arizona state penitentiary. Herbert Raleigh is the star of the production; Tod Browning, the director, and Barbara Bedford, the leading woman.

Director Reginald Barker, House Peters and the full cast of "The Storm" are spending ten days at Bear Valley, filming exteriors.

Frank Mayo is filming country club scenes for "The Way Back," his current starring effort.

Film editors under the supervision of Frank Lawrence, are busy preparing for shipment "Human Heir," starring House Peters; "Thy Servant's Wife," with Miss du Pont in the stellar role; and Marie Prevost's latest comedy-drama, "The Dangerous Little Demon."

WESTERN PICTURES NOTES

Most of the scenes in "Vivin Cummings'" forthcoming starring feature, "The Man from Hell's River," by James Oliver Curwood, will be photographed at Truckee. The cast selected to date includes Eva Novak and Wallace Berry. Abe Friedman has been retained as cinematographer.

As soon as word comes from Bear Valley that there is a heavy fall of snow, Charles W. Mack will take the Lester Cuneo company there for scenes in "Snow-Bound," the Henry McCarty--Lo Meehan story. Francesca Billington will probably play opposite the star.

Final scenes were shot this week at the Louis Burston studio on the David Butler picture, "According to Hoyle." It will be about three weeks before Mr. Burston will start casting the next Butler picture.

Webster Cullison, who directed the "Philo Gubb" comedies featuring Victor Potel, is preparing a melodrama for the independent market, which Western Pictures Exploitation Company will distribute.

The acreage of the Martin ranch, near Los Angeles was used recently by Albert Rogell to take cattle and riding scenes with "Bob" Reeves and Maryon Aye for the forthcoming Cactus feature in which they are co-starring. Victor Hugo Halperin wrote the story which is entitled "The Coward Test."

Edna Schley has gone to New York to close a contract for a story from which she will make her forthcoming production. Miss Schley will start casting on her return from the East.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Harry "Snub" Pollard finished a comedy this week in which he was assisted by Marie Mosquini, and will start presently on a new one which Charles Parrott will direct. Marie Mosquini will again play opposite the comedian. Mr. Pollard's film, "From the Press," and "The Avnil Chorus," were previewed recently at the studios.

SEMON BUILDING STUDIO

Ground was broken recently at the Vitagraph Studio for the new Larry Semon studio which will be erected immediately.

T. J. Crizer is still working on Harold Lloyd's comedy temporarily titled "If He Hesitates." (Continued on Page 8)

Current Reviews

"THE LIGHT IN THE CLEARING"

Clune's

The long-awaited release of "The Light in The Clearing" has taken place and it is now the public's opportunity to see what T. Hayes Hunter, the producer of "Earthbound," has there been a decided Irving Bacheiller's widely read story. Perhaps peculiarly, that story which, augmented by the Hunter reputation, will do the attracting at the box office, pans out to be the one unsuitable element in the photoplay. This is because it is fundamentally a novel. That William E. Lights on has adapted it as lucidly as he has, is to his own great credit, but there are too many threads in it to render the result a compact photodrama. Nevertheless, the almost perfect casting of the realistic characters and the competent management of the whole by the director gives us a picture play fraught with delicate situations, and intense crises. Drama is its keynote, by means of which its opening, carrying and completing are achieved. The photography by Bertoloni presents some quite wonderful weird effects and is otherwise lovely.

The most vivid, predominant portrayal in the cast is Rovin' Kate, a mad outcast, superbly shaped by Eugenie Besseer in a heart-rending force irresistible in its strange simplicity and subtly affecting in its exceptional artistry. From Kate's thrilling introduction through her anguish to the action as the cheated mother to her tranquil finish, she is the work of a great and a true artist. Added to Miss Besseer's indescribable performances in "Scarlet Days," "The Greatest Question," etc., and her various comedy efforts, this part establishes the fact that here is the screen's foremost feminine interpreter.

The next strongest position in the tale is Ben Grismash, a miserly blackguard, characterized colorfully by Frank Leigh. As the loveless money seeker of a little New England town, Leigh is perfectly convincing, but it is the subtlety in Grismash's repentance, made too late to save the life of either son or to bring happiness into his own, that determines his life in the portrayal.

Amos Grismash, his greedy, unpleasant little son who comes to crime and death through the neglect and perversion of his parent is excellently done by George Hackatherone.

Andrew Arbuckle, Arthur Morrison, Albert Lee, John Roseleigh, and J. Edward Brown are picturesque types to be situated in Horace Drunkenberg, Uncle Peabody, Aunt Deel, Joe Wright and Squire Fullerton. Edward Sutherland and Clara Horton in Bart and Sally control the young romance. The Dial Film Company presents "The Light in The Clearing" through Hodkinson.

"TWO MINUTES TO GO"

Kinema

There is something funereal about the backing of any proven artist into mediocrity. It is so senseless. Nevertheless that is often the trend when a picture stars an actor who lacks and accomplishes his own direction. However, in the case of Charles Ray, we had considered his career a decided difference. Our proof was the "punchy" "Scrap Iron," his first personally produced release. That, in spite of his auspicious start, things have not held up so well for him can only be deduced from his last two, below-standard pictures, "The Midnight Bell" and "Two Minutes to Go."

The latter, a Richard Anders story, summarized by Al Ray, is the current First National release. It is a single college year and is evidently appeared a lot pepper on paper than it turned out on celluloid.

Truman Van Dyke provides opposition in "Angel," the caustic yell leader, and an invaluable touch is offered by Tom Wilson in the football coach. You can bank on Wilson to do something perfectly in most Ray vehicles.

Lionel Belmore, Lincoln Steedman, Gus Leonard, Bert Woodruff and Frances Dumas acquired dispatches committee and George Rizard's photography is very good.

"JUST AROUND THE CORNER"

Grauman's

They claim for "Just Around the Corner" the exploitation that it is another "Humenousse" and for once they almost tell the truth for this Cosmopolitan production of a Fannie Hurst story possesses much of the human interest appeal that marked the former and is certainly within the experience of a greater class than was the Borzage picture which it will be recalled, was basically Hebrew.

"Just Around the Corner" is a chronicle of the sorrows and happiness of the Birdsons, a family representative collection of America's great lower middle class which dwells in the city. Including such homely details as only that great humanist, its authoress, would think to embrace in a story, it has been transferred to the screen for everyone's enjoyment by Frances Marion in a complete screen adaptation.

Miss Marion has also guided the interpretation of the play with her direction, a great improvement, by-the-way, over her work on Pickford's "Photodrama," it displays an unusual comprehension of detail here and makes her uncomplicated little tale live strenuously for her audience.

If there is a noticeably weak spot in the picture, it falls at the end which dwindles out somewhat. However, the dozens of laughs and tears of torture of very callow youth and the average loving but forceless mother are better entertainment than that to which the public is accustomed. The finish will matter little to it.

Henry Cronjager's photography is also excellent.

Andrew Birdson the invalid mother who follows her instinct faithfully in her care for her children, Margaret Seddon gives a finished performance. The part which she plays is exceedingly natural and shows considerable capability.

In this story, however, it is the two youngsters, who approach the sensational in their clever balancing of pathos and comedy.

Lew Sargent, a former Fox kiddie, plays deliciously the big hearted, "hard boiled" Jimmie, who in a messenger's uniform casually heads the household though he is as yet several years removed from manhood; and it is he who at one moment sends the house into an uproar with his ingenious mannerisms only to pull tears from it the next with the helpless, frightened childishness which will create the sympathy. Nineteenth of the picture's sympathy is his. The box has a great future.

In an equally serious piece of acting, if one is to truly prove less popular from the fan's viewpoint, is accomplished by Sigrid Holmquist in Essie Birdson, the weaker-minded sister, doped by the dazzle of her first love affair. Thank fortune in this character we enjoy an illiterate screen youngster undisturbed by superfluous amounts of beauty or the luxurious manners of our best.

STERLING PLAYERS SUPPORT GUY BATES POST IN "THE MASQUERADER"

Supporting Guy Bates Post in "The Masquerader," which marks his film debut and also the first screen offering of Richard Walton Tully—to be distributed through First National—is a cast of exceptional merit, fully up to the statement of the personnel of this star's and this producer's stage companies. The film is being directed by James Young, whose most recent post was with Katherine Macdonald on "The Innfeld," a forthcoming First National release. Wilfred Buckland is the art director of "The Masquerader;" he will be remembered as the first man in the industry to hold such a position and as the leader in his field today as well. George Benoit, a veteran cinematographer, with a rich experience in France and this country, is at the camera.

Edward M. Kimball portrays Brook, the aged and devoted valet to Chilcote, one of the two characters played by the star. Kimball's wide film experience amply fits him for this important role. Herbert Standing, another veteran of stage and screen, soon to be seen in Mack Sennett's second dramatic offering, "For Love of Money," plays Herbert Frey in "The Masquerader." Lawson Butt, especially remembered for his sympathetic performance in "The Miracle Man," will be seen as Mr. Lakely, a newspaper publisher. Kenneth Gibson will create the film characterization of Bobby Blessington, Chilcote's faithful secretary.

The women in the cast present names of equal prominence on the screen. Eve, Chilcote's wife, will be portrayed by Ruth Sinclair. The role of Lady Astripp, the vampire of the story, has been entrusted to Marcia Manon, whose recent performance in "Ladies Must Live," was a memorable contribution. Robins, the devoted landlady of the boarding house where lives Loder—the other character portrayed by Guy Bates Post—will be played by Barbara Tennant, the well-remembered star of Eclair and World Film days.

The story of "The Masquerader" treats of the substitution of one John Loder, an ambitious and earnest newspaper writer for his distant cousin, Chilcote, the leader in the House of Parliament, who has allowed the morphine habit to drag him down to the lowest stages of depravity. As will be remembered by those who have seen the stage play and who have read the original novel, the story affords many opportunities for lavish production as well as highly dramatic acting, not only in the stellar roles but throughout the personnel of the cast.

PARAGON PREVIEW

A preview of Paragon Productions current picture was held Wednesday evening at the Glendale theatre. Jack Richardson, formerly of the Sennett studio, is being starred in Paragon's present series which is being directed by Bruce Mitchell. The company is producing at Universal City.

Dick LaReno is cast in "With Stanley in Africa," which Edward Kull is directing for Universal.

CADMAN WITHHOLDS MUSIC FOR RUBAIYAT FILM

New and unusual complications were injected into the legal controversy over Perdimand Earle's film version of "The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam" when Charles Wakefield Cdman, composer, who wrote music to accompany the programma recently received a registered letter from "The Rubaiyat, Inc., pointing that he will refuse to comply.
This stand was taken by Mr. Cudman on the eve of the premiere performance of his oriental rhapsody, "Omar Khayyam," by the Philharmonic orchestra in Los Angeles.
The composition will be withheld from the-tricial performance until the suit now pending in Federal court over the Rubaiyat film is settled.

DE LA MOTTE COMPOSES MUSICAL COMPLIMENT

Marguerite de la Motte, star of J. L.
Frohnhirnham's "Shattered Idols," soon to be released, has composed a musical selection as a compliment to the producer of this picture.

ADOPTS PROFESSIONAL NAME

Kathryn Cuddy is to be the professional name of Mrs. John J. Cuddy, whose fairy plays for children are to be filmed by the Mission Film Corporation.
Mrs. Cuddy is at the Jesse D. Hampton studios studying production methods during the making of the first Mission picture, "Carry on the Race."

VITAGRAPH PRESIDENT IN NEW YORK

President Albert E. Smith of Vitagraph left recently for New York where he will remain several weeks. Mrs. Smith accompanied her husband east.

CHRISTIE RECIPE FOR GOOD COMEDIES

At Christie, who is producing the two-reel Christie Comedies for Educational's program of short pictures for the whole family, has set up an ideal for his staff in making his comedy films which takes hard work to live up to. "I want to preach the doctrine of DO rather than listing a lot of disagreeable DON'TS," said Christie in discussing the dif-culty of evolving humorous situations for the camera to record. "Don't rules are generally made to be broken, and I hate rules around our studio, anyway. I would rather set up a standard of things to try to do.
Here is this standard for the two-reel com-dies."

1. Get a plausible story which might happen to real people. It may be worked out farcically or in regular dramatic and logical sequence. But it must be entertaining.

2. All the actors must look like human beings whom one might meet in every-day life.

3. Take your time. It is not how many pictures you make but how good they are that counts. This advice is particularly for directors.

4. If you are torn between sticking to the story or going ahead for a laugh, stick to the story. If the story is amusing, the chuckles will take care of themselves.

5. Make the backgrounds as beautiful as you can. Few people will notice the expensive rug on the floor, but they will notice it if the floor were bare.

6. Try to take your part without trying to be funny.

7. Try to seem to enjoy your work. If you don't enjoy it, find other work.

8. Make your pictures for your family.
The majority of the people who see them in theatres are just about like your own wife and kiddies!"

W. S. Smith, general manager of the Vitagraph studios, has returned from a week's rest at his ranch near Colton.

"Buddy," sixteen-year-old brother of Marguerite de la Motte, J. L. Frohnhirnham star, is spending a few days with his sister at her Hollywood home.

Gale Henry recently completed an important role in "The Noble Cow Person," staring Jack Richardson for Paragon Produc-

A. S. C. BALL AT AMBASSADOR

Reginald Lyons is busy these days arranging for the A. S. C. ball which takes place at the Ambassador on the evening of February 4.

VENIZELOS IS GOLDWYN GUEST

Eleuthereus Venizeles, one of the world's outstanding figures at the Peace Conference, visited the Goldwyn Studio recently and saw for the first time how motion pictures are made. The formerPremier of Greece was accompanied by his bride.

LINDER BACK ON JOB

Max Linder, French comedian, who lost the loss of his sight for three weeks from the burning rays of powerful lights, is back at work making scenes for his trav-estory on "The Three Musketeers," which will be released this spring by Goldwyn. He was surrounded himself with a big and notable cast headed by Jobyna Ralston,
Bull Montana, Caroline Rankin, Harry Mann,
Jack Richardson, Majel Coleman, Florence
Gilbert and others.

COOLEY TO REBUILD

Hal Cooley, playing opposite Anita Stewart in her current picture, has sold his residence in Hollywood's residential section and has purchased two lots in Beverly Hills where he will build a new home at once.

Dick Wayne, who lately finished playing the leading role in "The Husband's Trademark," with Gloria Swanson for Famous Players-Lasky, is beginning work this week in the leading role of the new Mission production, "Carry on the Race."

RAYMOND MCKEE

LEHR CONTINUES IN NEW YORK

Abraham Lehr, vice-president in charge of production at the studios of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation in Culver City, is in New York, conferring with Samuel Goldwyn and other officials of the company on matters pertaining to production policy. At present the studio organization is well ahead of the schedule for the current season.

Ewing Scott of the Vitagraph forces is not only a performer upon the violin but also portrays facial likenesses with pen and ink.

Through the co-operation of the Union Pacific railroad, Universal has secured typical engines of 1870 to be used in the filming of "In the Days of Buffalo Bill," under Edward Lachmille's direction.

Irving M. Lesser, independent film distributor, leaves Sunday for New York to be gone about three months. During his ab-dence the Los Angeles office will be in charge of Mike Rosenberg, treasurer.

Walt Whitman and George Derrell will intterpret prominent roles in "The Grab Stake."

Nell Shipman's next starring vehicle about to start production under the direction of Bert Van Tuyle.

Thibet, or not Thibet—that is the question in the mind of Carl Gantvoort, Benjamin B.
Hampton leading man, who recently received an offer from a British capitalist to head a company of film players now being organized to make a series of photoplays in Thibet, Persia and India.
GERMAN NOTES

According to Prague statistics, Germany furnishes 61 per cent of films for the Czechoslovak cinema theatres.

The distinguished Berlin film journalist and advertising expert, Arthur Mellini, died, 45 years old.

The well-known Italian film actor Maciste was engaged by Director Jacob Karol to appear in a series of German films.

The cinema theatres in Frankfort-on-Main having been closed six weeks as a demonstration of protest against the amusement tax, they were reopened on August 18th.

An agreement was concluded between the German and Italian governments whereby both countries may mutually facilitate the importation of certain goods, among these, the film.

The "Lichtbild-Buhne" publishes statistics showing that the taxes levied from the cinematographic trade in the United States in 1925-1926 amounted to $9,628,714.25, and from the film industry to $5,951,187.75.

The Coal Commissioner for Greater Berlin has consented to an increase of the electric current contingent allowed to the motion picture theatres, from 35 to 80 per cent of the 1916 consumption.

The increase of duties provided in the contemplated financial reform for Germany will also embrace the importation of films. It is intended to raise the import duty, now amounting to 200 mark pro kilogramm, by doubling this amount, and in addition the corresponding gold premium will be levied.

CHAUTARD TO DIRECT FREDERICK

Director Emile Chautard has arrived at the R-C Studios in Hollywood from New York to direct Pauline Frederick in her next R-C production, a film adaptation of William J. Locke's novel, "The Glory of Clementina." He was accompanied by Albert Lena, his assistant.

Mr. Chautard directed Miss Frederick in some of her previous photographs including "Paid in Full," "Out of the Shadow," "A Daughter of the Old South," and "The Final Reckoning," based upon the play, "The Prince of Zila." All of these pictures were made in the East, this being Mr. Chautard's first visit to California. He is expected to start work with Miss Frederick's company within the next few days.

Among other screen players whom Mr. Chautard has directed are Elsie Ferguson, Florence Reed, Tyrone Power, Alice Brady, Lina Cavallera, and Clara Kimball Young.

FOX ORIENTAL DISTRIBUTION

Fox Film has closed a deal with Middle East Films, Ltd., for distribution in the Far East.

CAPELLANI TO FILM IBANEZ STORY

Albert Capellani is to direct "The Enemies of Women," a Belasco-Ibanez story for Cosmopolitan Productions.

Harvey Gates, scenario writer is in the hospital convalescing from an operation.

R.C. STUDIO NOTES

Director William A. Seiter is losing little time between productions with Doris May in her series of comedies. "Boy Crazy," was recently completed and production is expected to start presently on Miss May's fourth photoplay entitled, "Gay and Devilish." Pauline Frederick's latest production, "Two Kinds of Women," adapted from Jackson Gregory's novel, "Judith of Blue Lake Ranch," is scheduled for release the latter part of this month. The completed print was recently shipped from the Studios after having been edited under Miss Frederick's supervision.

CHRISTIE NOTES

During the year of 1922 the Christie Company will offer twenty-four two-reel comedies. Players who are being featured successfully in comedies now in preparation for early release through Educational exchanges are Dorothy Devore, Bobby Vernon, Viora Daniels and Neil Burns.

The forthcoming release which will feature Dorothy Devore is "One Stormy Knight." This has been practically finished and is now being assembled by director Hal Beaumont, who is also starting a novelty with Bobby Vernon featured.

The picture with Neil Burns featured is "A Rambling Romance." The next Bobby Vernon picture will be "Hokus Pokus," a story by Frank R. Conklin.

The fourth picture under way is to be called "Twas Ever Thus" and was written by Robert Hall. This will feature Viora Daniel and is to be directed by Al Christie. For this picture Christie has transformed the interior of an entire stage into a western ranch.

"ORPHANS OF THE STORM" OPENS IN NEW YORK

David W. Griffith's "Orphans of the Storm" opened at the Apollo Theatre, New York City, recently. Mae Marsh was one of the box-holders.

Constance Talmadge is making the final scenes of her starring picture "The Divorcee."

NEW YORK SCHOOLS TO HEAR FILM LECTURES

Through an arrangement between the Board of Education and the National Association of Motion Picture Producers, William A. Brady, D. W. Griffith and Paul H. Cromelin will speak against censorship in several high schools in Brooklyn, Manhattan and the Bronx between Jan. 12 and Feb. 27. These lectures will not take the form of debates.

Among the champions of censorship who will seek to justify legalized screen control are Mrs. Clarence Waterman, Cannon William S. Chase and Frederick Boyd Stevenson, all of whom figured in the campaign which resulted in the enactment of a censorship law in New York State. Joseph Levenson, secretary of the Motion Picture Commission, will be another speaker.

PATHÉ ACQUISITION OF LOUIS NALPAS PRODUCTION

Pathé announces the acquisition of the European production, "Mathias Sandorf" from the Jules Verne romance bearing the same title.

Louis Nalpas arrived from Paris recently and signed contracts with Paul Brunet conveying to Pathé Exchange, Inc., distributing rights of "Mathias Sandorf" in this country.

FIGHT OVER CONVICT’S SCENARIO

Nate Watt, director-producer, has filed suit through Attorney George Clark to restrain Universal from using “Peter Man,” a scenario written by Louis Victor Eytinge, a “Lifer” in the Arizona State prison.

Eytinge has sold many screen and magazine stories, using much of the money in prison welfare work.

Federal Judge Trippe issued an order to Universal to appear before Judge Bledsoe to show cause why they should not be restrained from producing the story.

ROLAND AND HUTCHINSON TO CONTINUE IN SERIALS FOR PATHÉ

Serials figure largely in the plans of Pathé Exchange, Inc., for 1922. At least four new ones are promised for release during the coming year. Charles Hutchinson in the “Stunt Star” of one now well along in production, and Ruth Roland is now at work on another, produced by Hal Roach under his direct supervision.

“LIFE” INCLUDES FROTHINGHAM FILM

“Life,” the national weekly, has rated J. L. Frothingham’s dramatic adaptation of E. Phillips Oppenheimer’s novel, “Passers By”—“Pilgrims of the Night,” as one of the ten best pictures of the year 1921.

PREPARING SECOND

The Paragon Company has completed its first picture, “The Noble Cow Person,” featuring Jack Richardson, and preparations are being made for filming its second.

GOLDWYN BUYS NEW HUGHES STORY

Goldwyn has purchased the screen rights to another Rupert Hughes’ Story entitled “Bitterness of Sweets.”

The cast for Nazimova’s “Salome” is now being assembled and actual shooting will begin within a few days.

AT LASKY’S

A big company of players and technicians have gone to Truckee for exterior snow scenes of the Paramount Picture “Over the Border,” with Betty Compson, Tom Moore and a cast of prominent screen artists. The company will be gone for some time.

Gloria Swanson, the star, Rudolph Valentino, leading man, and others in “Beyond the Rocks,” Elmo Glyn’s story have been working at the Lasky Ranch where scenes depicting a fete at an English country home are being filmed.

George Melford has returned from New York and will begin work later in the month on his production, “The Cut that Walked Alone” with Dorothy Dalton. With James Ayres and Jack Holt in the leading roles, Walter Iwers and others in important parts, Wanda Hawley is completing work on “The Truthful liar,” a Reelart picture for Famous Players-Lasky.

“Bought and Paid For” is being made into a motion picture at the adventurized concern and skill of William de Mille.

MOTHER’S CLUBS ENDORSE FABLES FILM

The Queensboro League of Mothers’ Clubs placed their mark of approval upon “Aesop’s Film Fables” by featuring this Pathé release on the film program at their annual fair held recently in the Good Citizenship League Auditorium at Flushing, Long Island. What is interesting in this screening of “Aesop’s Film Fables” especially gratifying is the fact that the Mothers’ Clubs have for their foremost object the betterment of the screen in securing clean and wholesome films for children.

WESLEY WITH WARNER BROS.

Wesley Barry will again appear in pictures under the supervision of Marshall Neilan. Wesley will appear in two features which are to be made in ten weeks.

One will be “From Rags to Riches” in which Joe Santley starred for Al H. Woods; the other will be “Little Heroes of the Street,” by Ler Parker. Both pictures will be produced by Harry Rapf, directed by William Nigh and distributed by Warner Bros.

This new arrangement with Neilan is similar to the one under which “School Days” was made.

HAMPTON TO FILM FIVE NOVELS

Five novels are to be filmed in 1922 by Benjamin B. Hampton, according to the terms of his new releasing contract with the Goldwyn distributing organization.

“Wildfire,” the first to be filmed from Zane Grey’s novel, will soon be in the Goldwyn offices in New York, and this week production started at the United Studios on “Golden Dreams,” another Grey title . . .

Claire Adams and Carl Gantvoort have the leading roles in both “Wildfire” and “Golden Dreams.”

Producer Hampton’s executive staff as announced this week now consists of Jean Hersholt, Dick Rush, Gus Petersen, handling directorial duties, William Edmonds and F. H. Sturgis, camera work; E. Richard Schay, scene editor, Arthell Travis, film editor. In his business organization is Havings Mumper, general manager; Norris Mumper, business manager; Grady Ewing, assistant auditor; Jack Schweitz, assistant auditor; Harry Hammond Beal, publicity director; Rose Kurland, assistant publicity director; and Ettinge Warner, Eastern representative.

ROY STEWART JOINS THE NATIVES

That all motion picture people do not clinch the East as their native habitat is evidenced by a perusal of the membership roll of Ramona Parlor No. 109, Native Sons of the Golden West.

The following members of the profession, who are active committee men for the big membership drive which Ramona Parlor has under way, first saw the light of day within the confines of California, the land of sunshine, fruit and flowers plus the animated celluloid:

Trotwood D. Crittenden, actor, Ince Studios.

Alfred L. Gilks, cameraman, Lasky's.

Charles J. Marley, Exchange manager, Vitaraph.

Frank E. Lowry, director and producer.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Dane announce the engagement of their daughter, Mildred, to Edward Capps, D.D.S. Miss June has the leading heroine role in support of Jilly Bevan, one of the newest stars of the Mack Sennett organization.
“THE IRON TRAIL”

California

Rex Beach Productions offers a screen version of the author’s story, “The Iron Trail,” through United Artists this week. The exploits of a young Irish railroad man against terrible opposition in Alaska are dwelt with chiefly in the play which is an entertaining melodrama of the old style. In it, as might be expected, the parts are played without characterization and the direction lacks not to insert living touches. The suspense is let down slightly by the overdoing of it and because of surplus subtitles at a time when the whole needs snapping up, if anything. Nevertheless there are several real punches and a lot of fast action.

Wyndham Standing plays the Irish Prince characteristically, lending him considerable hero charm.

The feminine lead is done by Alma Tell who is not entirely easy on the screen, perhaps due to inexperience. Anyway as Eliza Appleton, a star reporter, she cuts a rather interesting figure.

Reginald Denny also plays a principal part in this picture which, was directed by R. Wm. Neill.

“THE DIGEST OF THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY”

HOST TO JAPANESE CADETS

Sessue Hayakawa was host at the R-C Studios recently to officers and men of the Japanese training ship, Taisel Maru, commanded by Captain K. Asari. The majority of the visitors were naval cadets who are enjoying a trip around the world as part of their training for commissions in the Japanese navy. Mr. Hayakawa explained the various details of picture making and showed his guests some of the sets used in his recently finished production, “The Million Pencil,” adapted from Homer Lea’s novel of the same name.

Mrs. Grace Johnson and Mrs. Charlotte C. Heinez were again elected President and Secretary-Treasurer of the Photoplaywrights at the first meeting of the season held recently at the clubrooms on the eighth floor of the Bruck Shops. Mr. Everett Frost was elected Vice-President.

Mr. Le Roy Armstrong, author and dramatic critic, will speak at the next meeting.

POST AND TULLY TENDERED RECEPTION

The formal inauguration into filmdom of Guy Bate Post and Richard Walton Tully inspired a unique reception and luncheon by local press members at the Universal Studios recently.

TEACHERS TO SEE “SCHOOL DAYS”

Before Warner Bros. release “School Days” in New York City, a private showing of the film will be given to all the public school teachers of the city by arrangement with the Board of Education.

Charles King, Havana manager for Universal, is in New York for conferences at the home office.

Chief Light heart, a full blooded Cherokee Indian is playing the part of Sitting Bull in Universal’s serial “In the Days of Buffalo Bill.”

ELECTED TO PRESIDENCY

At a recent meeting of the Board of Directors of the Commonwealth Motion Picture Producers, Mrs. A. B. Maescher, who is the General Manager of the Company was elected to the Presidency of the Board.

Elise Ferguson and Wallace Reid, co-starred in “Forever,” based on that immortal romance, “Peter Ibbetson,” opens its third week at Grauman’s Rialto Sunday, Jan. 15th.

R. J. Tobin, vice-president and general manager of the R-C Studios, has returned from a flying trip to New York, where he was in conference with officials at the Home Office in regard to R-C production plans for the coming year.

GOLDWYN STAFF ADDITION

Richard Butler Glaenzer, short story writer and critic, is the latest literary celebrity to heed the call of the silver sheet. Mr. Glaenzer has been added to the Goldwyn scenario department, of which Paul Bern is head, to write originals and adapt others.

“Beggar and King,” a volume of poems by Mr. Glaenzer, issued by the Yale University Press, established him as one of America’s foremost poets. He is the author of “Literary Snapshots” and recently completed a history of the World War for Nelson’s Encyclopedia.

WITH WESTERN CLASSIC

Nelson McDowell having finished the part of “Sandy McFarlane” in a Paragon Western special, has signed with the Western Classic to play a character lead.

GREGORY FEATURED

Eric Gregory is being featured with Monty Montana in “Neath Western Skies,” a Bob Horner production.

IN MACDONALD’S NEXT

Nigel Barrie, Charles Gerard and Charles Clary, have been engaged to support Katherine MacDonald in “Friday to Monday.” Her next photoplay for Preferred Pictures, which Chet Withey is directing.

Edwin Booth Tilton is supporting Herbert Rawlinson in his latest Universal production, “Peter-Man.”

Henry Hobert has been chosen to enact a prominent role in “Man Hunters,” which William Duncan is filming for Vitagraph.

Dorothy Dawn and Mand Emery have been cast in “Man Hunters,” the Vitagraph production starring William Duncan and Edith Johnson.

William McCull, Walter Cooper and George Stanley are among those cast in “Angel Face,” starring Alice Calhoun under production at Vitagraph.

Kathryn Adams and Eugenia Gilbert are playing in support of Earle Williams in his forthcoming production, “The Man from Downing Street” under the direction of Edward Jose.
Metro Pictures Corp., 900 Cahuenga Ave., will use outdoor stories for Bert Lytell and light comedies or comedy-dramas for Viola Dana. Scripts should be addressed to the Scenario Editor, and if not accepted, will be returned within ten days.

Chester Bennett Production, United Studios, require stories, either synopsis or ideas, suitable for Jane Novak. Must be something very good with new twists. Outdoor stories of the north woods type and snow scenes preferred. Scripts should be sent to the Scenario Editor, and if not accepted, will be returned within two weeks.

Campbell Comedies, Fine Arts Studios, are in the market for two-reel comedies featuring children and animals, submitted in synopsis form. Send scripts to the Scenario Editor and a report from them can be expected within ten days.

Lasky Studio will consider good stories, either published or original, suitable for their several stars, Betty Compson, Gloria Swanson, Dorothy Dalton, Thomas Meighan, Wallace Reid, etc.; and also unusual stories with big theme for all-star special features. Scripts will be read and reported upon in order of receipt, but should be heard from within three weeks.

Winter-Reynolds Productions, Mayer Studio, 3800 Mission Road, are in the market for two-reel comedy-dramas with some western atmosphere. Scripts should be addressed to the Scenario Editor, and will be returned as soon as read, if unavailable.

Coogan Production, United Studio, Hollywood, are in the market for stories, both published and original, suitable for Jackie Coogan, submitted in synopsis form. Scripts should be addressed to A. L. Berstein, care of Coogan Productions, and will be returned in two weeks at the latest, if unavailable.

Texas Guinan Productions, Fine Arts Studio, Hollywood, Calif., require original stories for two-reel western productions, suitable to the character of Texas Guinan and also containing a strong and virile male leading part. The story should, of course, be logical with stunts on and off horseback. All scripts sent to Jesse J. Goldburg, Gen. Mgr., will be carefully read and reported on within forty-eight hours after receipt.

The following studios and production companies are not in the market for stories at present: Talmadge Productions, Frothingham Productions, Louis B. Mayer Productions, Realart Studios, Selig-Rork, and United Studios.

Christie Film Co., 6101 Sunset Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif., is in the market for original stories for all-star casts, submitted in synopsis for two-reel farce comedies, with as much action as the ordinary five-reeler.

Thos. H. Ince Productions, Culver City, Calif., are now considering stories submitted in synopsis form as follows: light comedy for Douglas MacLean, and virile dramatics with big theme and unusual twists for Ince specials with all-star casts. Scripts should be sent to the Scenario Department, and if available will be returned within two weeks.

Charles R. Seelick Productions, 1240 So. Olive St., Los Angeles, Calif., will consider stories for five-reel westerns, either published or original, with both synopsis and continuity, suitable for the male star, "Big Boy" Williams. Address scripts to the above company, and if unsuitable, they will be returned at once.

Goldwyn Studios, Culver City, Calif., will consider stories submitted in detailed synopsis form, covering the following requirements: (1) Simple human stories such as can happen in every home. Deep, far-reaching, touching in their development, with simplicity of plot and depth of emotion. (2) Very strong, virile melodramas with unusual situations in one or more incidents. (3) Very bright, brilliant comedy dramas, telling a real story, and moving briskly to a natural conclusion. All of the above should have at much humor as can possibly be injected. Have no stars, but are featuring Richard Dix, Helene Chadwick, Cullen Landis, and can use five-reel dramas and comedy-dramas, co-featuring these players. Scripts should be sent to Paul Born, Goldwyn Scenario Editor.

Fox Film Company, Hollywood, Calif., will consider synopsis of stories, either original or published, for their various stars as follows: Society drama for Shirley Mason; drama for Jack Gilbert; comedy-dramas and westerns for Tom Mix; Western or out-door stories for Bill Russell and Buck Jones; and heavy dramas for William Farnum and Dustin Farnum. All scripts should be addressed to R. A. Einstein, and if unavailable will be returned within a few days.

R-C Productions, Hollywood, Calif., are in the market for both published and original stories submitted in synopsis form, preferably by trained writers with screen angle. Stories may be of any type suitable for the following stars: Pauline Frederick, Sessue Hayakawa, Doris May; also can use stories for special casts. Writers should avoid preachments and propaganda. Scripts should be sent to the Scenario Department, and if unavailable, will be returned within two weeks.

C. L. Chester Productions, 1435 Gower St., Los Angeles, Calif., will consider original stories (synopsis or ideas) for domestic situation, one-reel comedies, carrying fast force action, and opportunity for working out the stories in gag action. Scripts should be addressed to Raymond Harris, Scenario Editor, and if rejected will be returned in from one to two weeks.

The R-D Film Corp., Balboa Studios, Long Beach, will consider original stories dealing with Royal Northwest Mounted Police or any other outdoor subject submitted in synopsis for all-star casts. Compositions should be addressed to R. S. Roussel, and if rejected scripts will be returned after a week.

TOTE DuCROW

Selznick Productions, West Fort Lee, N. J., will consider stories based on plays, books, magazine stories or originals, preferably presented in synopsis form. For special productions anything strong and dramatic, for several characters of equal importance, must be "different," and abundant in opportunities for the very best in picture production. For the company's several stars, stories should be as follows: Comedy-dramas, society and otherwise, in which the star has an unusual role, for Elaine Hammerstein; comedy-dramas or dramas where action is required, preferably stories of typical middle-class American life, for Eugene O'Brien; strong, virile dramas, society, business or unusual stories for Conway Tearle; strong dramas with great action opportunity, for William Faversham; farce comedies, and swift-moving comedy-dramas, for Owen Moore; comedies or comedy-dramas for Martha Mansfield; dramas in which the leading role is very dramatic and unusual, foreign types in American settings desirable, for Zena Keefe. Address all matter to The Scenario Department of the above named company.

Cosmopolitan Productions, New York City. In the market for published stories only, submitted in synopsis form, for all-star casts. Scripts should be addressed to John Starbuck, Assistant Editor, Scenario Department.
HOGAN TO DIRECT WALKER

James Hogan, who wrote and directed "Where Is My Boy?" featuring Cullen Landis, is expecting to make a series of feature pictures presently starring Johnny Walker.

George O. Clark holds the novel position of watchman for companies on location.

Billy Foster is photographing the first of the Vitagraph series being filmed at the Fine Arts Studios.

Scott Mcgee and Rex Hammel are included in the cast of "Angel Face" starring Alice Calhoun.

Josef Swieckard and Matt Moore are playing prominent roles in "The Storm," under the direction of Reginald Barker.

Raymond McKee completed last week his role opposite May McAvoy in "Through the Glass Window" for Reaert.

J. W. Hull is playing a principal role in Paul Powell's current production, "Thorin of Lost Valley," starring Dorothy Dalton.

Nellie Anderson and Mary H. Young are playing parts in Alice Calhoun's current starring vehicle for Vitagraph entitled "Angel Face."

The acquisition of Thelma Morgan and Michael Dark completes the cast chosen by producer Richard Walton Tully to support Guy Bates Post in "The Masquerader," his initial film vehicle.

Mona Kingsley and Ethel Kay are cast in principal roles in Katherine MacDonald's latest production for Preferred Pictures entitled "Friday to Monday."

Lillian Guenther, child dancer of Los Angeles, has been offered an engagement to tour South America by William McMaster, theatrical manager of Phoenix, Arizona.

Paul Willis, hero of "Thunderclap," the big Fox horse-racing feature, has returned to his Los Angeles home after a very successful tour over the Orpheum vaudeville circuit in a playlet.

Maurice Foster, Fred Bohle, Jack Curtis and Charles Dudley have been selected to play parts in "Man Hunters" starring William Duncan and Edith Johnson under production at Vitagraph.

Marguerite De La Motte is "on location" in Sonora with the Thomas H. Ince Company. Upon completion of this production, Miss De La Motte will make another picture for Mr. Ince, the title of which has not yet been announced.

Walter Wilkinson, Lillian Biron, James (Paul) Parrott, Max Asher, Dorothy Vernon, Clarence Henicke, and Fritz Farn will appear in the series of two-reel subjects featuring Little Napoleon, which Harry Burns will produce presently at the Morris R. Schlank Studios.

William Tupper, Holmes E. Herbert and Donald Hall have been added to the cast of "A Woman's Woman," by Nabro Barley, the picture Charles Gilby is about to direct in the East. Mary Alden plays the leading role, that of a mother.

DIRECTORS ELECT OFFICERS

The Motion Picture Directors Association had a meeting recently to name its officers for the coming year. Those elected are Sidney Olcott, director; Robert Vignola, assistant director; Kenneth Webb, technical director; William Haddock, scenarist; C. J. Williams, inner guard; John Joseph Harvey, outer guard; Oscar A. A. Land and Ashley Miller, trustees for three years. During Mr. Olcott's absence in Europe J. Sarle Dowley will continue to act as director, having finished the last term for the previous presiding officer, Charles Miller.

PAULINE GARON HAS LEAD

Richard Barthelmess has selected Pauline Garon for his leading woman in "Sonny," which follows "The Seventh Day," in which Mr. Barthelmess is being starred by Inspiration Pictures, under the direction of Henry King.

DRYDEN WITH COMMUNITY PLAYERS

Wheeler Dryden is rehearsing for "The Silver Box" by Galsworthy to be staged presently at the Hollywood Community Theatre.
Imagine my production without pictorial titles; and imagine "The Rubaiyat" with a spoken title as follows, "That bird is getting to talk too much of the immortal grunts of Fitzgerald."

One weapon, fortunately, remains for the militant art creator, when all is gone save his dignity and his sense of humor; and that is the rapier blade of ridicule, that can send lumbering to his retreat the most brutal and elephant-hided lord of finance.

Here we have the tableau of the man of millions playing legal pranks upon men such as Charles Wakefield Cadman, Edward S. Curtis and myself and others who were associated in the bloody venture of picturizing the Rubaiyat! It has been gratifying to find the press of the whole country ready to champion the artist's cause.

When the artist forges his plowshare into a sword, so to speak, he does not always put up a mean fight.

What publisher would dare to rewrite a sonnet of John Keats or alter one chord of a Chopin balance?

Creative art of a high order will become possible on the screen only when the rights of established, independent screen producers, such as Rex Ingram and Maurice Tourneur, are no longer interfered with, and their work no longer mutilated or changed or added to by vulpine hands. And art dramas, conceived and executed by masters of screen craft, cannot be turned out like sausages made by factory hands. A flavor of individuality and distinction of style cannot be preserved in machine-made melodramas—a drama that is passed from hand to hand and concocted by patch-workers and tinkerers.

A thousand times no! For it will always be cousin to the sausage, and be like all other—sausages.

The scene of a master's drama may have a subtle pictorial continuity and a power of suggestion quite like a melody that is lost when just one note is changed. And the public is the only test of what is eternally true or false. What right have two or three people to deprive millions of art lovers of enjoying an artist's creation as it emerged from his workshop?

"The Rubaiyat" was my first picture and produced in spite of continual and infernal interference. I have been through several sad lessons, which I have endeavored in the above paragraphs to pass on to some of my fellow sufferers. It is my hope that I am fighting, to a certain extent, their battle that has given me the courage to continue, and that has prompted me to write this article.

May such help actually teach or in-foce a decent regard for the rights of authors and directors and tend to make the existence of screen artisans more secure and soothing to the nerves.

STUDIO

WISH TO ANNOUNCE

We have at our disposal six and one-half acres of valuable studio space which we will sublet by the day, week, month, or year; consisting of enclosed stage 75' by 150', complete property and wardrobe departments and furniture rooms, etc., also enough flats and interior scenery and furniture to build and dress sets of any description from an attic to a kings palace. Complete lighting system installed. Studio and grounds situated on the highest spot in the city, within easy reach of the business section, away from all fog and possible damage from rain floods. In regard to our exterior locations, which includes log cabins, mine shafts, hot houses, large ten-room castle; and our back ranch is very suitable for fox hunts, rustic scenery and stage coach highways and facilities too numerous to mention. Undoubtedly our most remarkable feature is a western town with wonderful photographic possibilities as it has a long range shot of fifteen miles with a natural mountainous background and a panoramic view of the entire country including business section, factory section, railroad and residential section. The value of a large park with a lake, rustic bridges, cozy nooks and other features, directly across the street from studio, cannot be over estimated. Appointments can be arranged by phone or letter. For further information apply at Studio. Reasonable rates.

NATIONAL EXCHANGES, INC.

Hide and Seek

We may only suppose that the somewhat hysterical controversy in which the exhibitors' trade papers have lately been indulging with regard to their own and their rivals' circulation has been brought about by the desire of each one for the gain which it figures should be forthcoming in the way of additional producer-advertising, after it has vanquished all competitors with proof of its own superior scope and the other fellows' intent to misrepresent.

It appears, however, that the elements concerned in the situation are working somewhat unintelligently in circles since the average, long-suffering producer meanwhile doesn't care a particle about any phase of the argument, but in his haste and ignorance he continues to lavish contract for an insert on his current productions in each publication that the ground may be entirely covered from his angle. However, if his were the time to investigate the matter he would discover as we have, that not one exhibitor in fifty ever books a picture from a trade magazine anyway, and that while the psychology of such publicity is good from several considerations, the idea that he must be represented in every periodical of the type is foolishly wasteful. He would further learn upon inquiry that ironically enough, while it has been his own lack of perception, during late months, that has kept twice as many exhibitors' papers in existence as are either necessary or practicable, the fact that the showmen disregard his advertising in them today is also his responsibility.

The small town theatre managers know from bitter experience that the "panker the picture the more attractive and excessive" the publicity spread through these media by many picture makers. Why, therefore, should they be taken in by purchased description of pictures whose drawing power is otherwise questionable? According to the opinion of a dozen such men operating houses in and about Los Angeles, the press sheet is the thing. They can tell from the stills, the cast and the story contained in it whether or not a given film will appeal to their audiences and in their own small ways they are nearly as busy as the photoplay magnate, finding as few moments as himself to devote to vivid magazine spreads.

We intend no particular moral here, having expressed only an accumulation of attitudes picked up at random. It seems to us, however, that the whole game is one of hide and seek with only the exhibitor safely under cover.

A Fighter

An article syndicated in the trade magazines last week stated that Nate Watt, a local film man had filed suit to prevent Universal from using Louis Victor Eytinge's scenario, "Peterman," in which that company is starring Herbert Rawlinson. Watt claimed that Eytinge, an inmate of the Arizona State Prison, had previously turned the story over to him. Below, Mr. Eytinge, our very good friend, explains the entire circumstance.

"When here in December 1919, Nate Watt had asked some of us to let him take a couple of our stories to Los Angeles. Jack Van Riter gave him 'Turn For The Worst' and I handed him an old short story of mine titled 'Jack Gilbert, Peterman.' In January 1920, Watt secured permission to handle this story, the authorization reading 'As my agent and associate.' Failure to reply to any of four letters sent him, two in January, one in March and one in November 1920, disgusted me—the last of these letters having been a demand for return of the story and cancellation of his agency. 'Peterman,' as sold to Universal, was not conceived nor written until July-August of 1921.

"'Jack Gilbert,' as turned over to Watt, was written and published in 1907 and the publishers, at my request, have authorized Universal to use any incidents it desires in connection with 'Peterman,' an entirely different story.

"Nate Watt never paid one cent for any story—never replied to my letters—nor did he show a similar courtesy to Van Riter and now he wants to cut in on a slice of easy money.

"But—Judge Bledsoe fooled him, for he threw the Watt petition out of court, but did give him permission to file an amended complaint. He hasn't done so yet—I hope he does, for then some folks will find out that even a convict can fight and fight damned hard. Pinckney wasn't the only chap to yell 'Millions for Defense, but not one copper cent for tribute'—or—may one say 'Blackmail'? Had I not met so many better folks in the movie world, my experience with Watt would have sufficiently disgusted me."
ENTER KLUMB PRODUCTIONS

The filming of "The Desert of the Damned," which is written by Bert D. Essex for the newly incorporated Roy II. Klumb Productions, will be started on or about February 1st, and will be a seven-reel special in which an all-star cast will appear. Interior scenes will be made at Universal City and the exteriors will be "shot" on the Mojave Desert. It is expected that two months will be required to complete this film.

In the organizing of this new production company, Mr. Klumb worked in affiliation with Edward T. Schoeter, a Chicago manufacturer, who heads a group of business men of that city in financing this project.

The producing activities will not be confined to special features alone. Starting simultaneous with "The Desert of the Damned" company will be a second unit making a two-reel comedy-drama, entitled "Peace in Pieces," in which will be starred Mr. and Mrs. Harry Todd, remembered for their starring work in the Snakeville series of comedies made by Essanay several years ago. This picture will be directed by Murdock MacQuarrie, and will be followed by a series of similar Todd vehicles.

In harmony with the Klumb policy of pursuing somewhat different trails in the picture sphere, this concern is forming a releasing organization of its own, establishing offices in all the key cities of the United States and Canada, through which it will furnish complete programs to exhibitors. Walter Caughlin has been appointed as manager of the sales department.

"FOOLS FIRST" TO START PRESENTLY

Marshall Neilan has purchased the rights to Hugh MacNair Kahler's "Fools First," which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post, and will use this plot as the basis for his next First National picture following the release of "Petrol." By arrangement with Marion Fairfax, who has been responsible for many Neilan scenarios, this author-producer will write the scenario; Frank O'Connor is to collaborate with Mr. Neilan on direction.

ELECT OFFICERS

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Hal E. Roach Film Laboratories, Inc., was held this week at the studios. All films for the company are now handled by the studio laboratories, with Charles Levin in charge. Followlns are the officers elected for the coming year: Walter Lundin, president; Charles Parrott, vice-president and J. L. Murphy, who will attend to the business of the laboratory in connection with the purchasing department of which he has charge.

NEW COMPANY TO MAKE COMEDIES

A new company with R. V. Quick as president and Dick Johnson as vice-president, has been formed and will start filming presently a series of twelve two-reel comedies at the Bernstein Studios, which has been leased for the purpose.

William Scott is cast in Charles Ray's forthcoming comedy drama for First National as yet untitled.

CHAPLIN REISSUES

The first comedies made by Charles Chaplin for First National are to be revived. February 8th, "A Dog's Life"; March 6th, "Sunshine"; April 3rd, "Shoulder Arms," and May 1st, "A Day's Pleasure."

It is rumored that plans are being made to borrow Marshall Neilan to direct Mary Pickford in her next picture. It is understood, however, that Mr. Neilan has a contract with Associated First National for two more pictures.

AT THE UNITED STUDIOS

Wallace Kerrigan has been made production manager of the Mary Pickford company. He formerly served in this capacity for Allan Dwan.

Jack Pickford's production of "The Tailor-Made Man" will be commenced in two weeks. Anthony Paul Kelley has completed the script.

Nazimova has commenced production on "The Songs of Sons." Charles D. Laurier is directing, assisted by Albert Kelley.

Constance Talmadge is scheduled to commence her next production on March 1st. "The French Street," which is being constructed for the Norma Talmadge production of the "Duchess of Langeais," is practically ready to be "shot."

Jackie Cooper is completing his present starring vehicle, "Lost and Found."

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Harold Lloyd's current comedy, temporarily titled "He Who Hesitates," or "Have a Heart," is now fully assembled and titled to the extent of four reels. There are still several shots to be added before the picture is finished.

Harry "Smub" Pollard opened the New Year with his most pretentious comedy, an oriental extravaganza, which is now under production. Marie Mosquini heads the supporting cast, which includes Noah Young, William Gillespie, Gaylord Lloyd and George Howe.

T. J. Grizer, film editor, shipped to New York this week four Pollard comedies as follows: "The Row Wows," "Hot off the Press," "The Anvil Chorus," and "Jump Your Job." "Scatter Your Shots," a Paul Parrot comedy, was also shipped.

AT UNIVERSAL

The Arroyo Seco and surrounding territory is being used in filming sequences for the historical serial, "With Stanley in Africa," featuring George Walsh.

Marie Prevost is working in "Kissed," under the direction of King Baggot. "Kissed" is an adaptation from an Arthur Somers Roche story.

"Both Booths" is the name of the current comedy film being directed by Craig Hutchison.

COSMOPOLITAN REORGANIZATION

William Le Baron has been advanced from Scenario editor to director-general of production for Cosmopolitan Productions and Vernon H. Porter, editor of Cosmopolitan magazine since 1918, has been appointed scenario editor. Howard Irving Young has been named film editor.

There will be a production board composed of Messrs. Le Baron, Porter, Joseph Urban and William Sistrom, and also an editing board. H. P. Carver continues as general manager.

Harry Burns started recently at the Morris R. Schank Studios on the third of a series of comedies, in which Little Napoleon, chimpanzee, is starred. (S A S P A N U C O P O S)
Current Reviews

"DISRAELI"

Mission

"Disraeli" has come to the screen as "Disraeli" at the hands of George Arliss could only come, naturally, charmingly, majestically, the timehonored figure of a dissipated Victorian statesman, who has attained the ultimate in his art, while never drifting beyond the understandings of all who love the beautiful.

Nevertheless, it remains to be further remarked that Mr. Arliss' current effort has been given an entirely satisfying production from all angles.

Particularly indicative of much capability is the direction of Henry Kolker, which exerts Forrest Halsey's technically correct and pleasing continuity with real cleverness. Harry Fishbeek's camerawork is without exception completely laudable. An ideal cast appears in the photoplay's other well-known and loved situations.

Mrs. George Arliss fills her old position, Lady Beaconsfield, with her own quaint grace and wholesome manner; and Louise Huff, that adored little ingenue of several years back, as winsomely youthful as ever, but with more pronounced poise, makes of Clarissa a bit of lovely, living Dresden china.

Reginald Denny is completely at home in the Victorean Viscount Dredford, a more picturesque role than he has often been accused and one that is better played, by the way, while Margaret Dale must be credited with being one of the most feminine and feminine in her own as Mrs. Joel Travers, the self-confident adventurer who seeks the Suez for Russia.

Rex Batcliffe, Frank Losee, Henry Carville, Grace Griswold and Noel Tarchie complete the list of players appearing in "Disraeli." This picture, rich in every photoplay requisite, is a United Artists' release.

"THE LOTUS EATER"

Kinema

A picture team composed of Marshall Nellan and John Barrymore would prove insurance to the box office success of any production as, without doubt, the minds responsible for the screening of "The Lotus Eater," First National's current release, well knew when arrangements were negotiated for the direction of the cinema's heralded artist by its most sensational producer. Not only the public but the entire picture profession were agog to witness the result of this combination, the more because of the fact that the Albert Payson Terhune story chosen as adequate material to engange in the most significant situations, as first written, contains but one situation through which all of its drama and its exceedingly abbreviated comedy are but subtilly suggested rather than frankly disclosed. It was therefore plain to all that much additional matter would be required to extend "The Lotus Eater" into a long reel subject. Hardy, however, we have considered anyone anywhere equal to the liberties which have been taken with this clever literary effort of Mr. Terhune. Commencing with an entirely imaginary sequence based upon nothing in the original, the play switches every few minutes from the dra-
IN LEADING ROLES

Contracts have been signed by Marshall Neilan with Claire Windsor, Richard Dix and Claude Gillingwater, whereby they will portray the leading roles in "Fools First," Mr. Neilan's next First National picture about to start production at the Hollywood Studio.

CAMERAMAN PROMOTED

Gus Peterson, chief cinematographer of Benjamin B. Hampton productions, has been elevated to directorial associate with producer B. B. Hampton.

The untimely death of Elliot Howe, who with Jean Hersolt and Dick Rush formed the Hampton staff of associated directors, left a vacancy and the ability of Mr. Peterson as cameraman caused his promotion.

IN COMEDY CAST

Wallace Howe, William Gillette, Molly Thompson and Mark Jones are among the growing ranks of the supporting cast of the children's comedy which Fred Newmeyer is directing at the Roach Studios, the working title of which is "Our Gang.

BEDFORD OPPOSITE RAY

Barbara Bedford has been engaged to portray the leading feminine role in Charlie Ray's present untitled comedy drama.

MARSH WITH "DUSTY" FARNUM

Marguerite Marsh, sister of Mae Marsh, is playing opposite Dustin Farnum in the current photoplay for Fox.

INGENUITY LEAD

Beatrice Burnham is handling the ingenuity lead in "That Lazy O'Lowrie," Priscilla Dean's present starring vehicle.

Wallace Beery has been signed to portray an important role in Charles Ray's present First National Attraction.

Walter Perry is enacting a leading character role in "Second Hand Rose," starring Gladys Walton, under the direction of Lloyd Ingraham.

Frank Coleman, who recently finished with Larry Semon, is now playing in Campbell Comedies under the direction of William S. Campbell.

Dorothy Hagan Thayer is to appear in "Carrv On the Race," the initial Mission Film Corp. production, under the direction of Clarence Goldie.

Gertrude Olmsted, Hazel Keener, and Faye Parrish are interpreting principal roles in the forthcoming Craig Hutchinson comedy for Universal, entitled "Both Booths.

Karl Strauss, formerly photographer for Cecil B. de Mille, will be associated with David Kesson and Ray June, in photographing "Fools First," Marshall Neilan's forthcoming production for Associated First National.

IN VAUDEVILLE

Another of the film players who has gone into vaudeville is Maude George, whose latest work is a prominent role in Universal's picture, "Foolish Wives." W. A. Hurlbut, author of "Lusts of the Peacock," and other plays, is working on a script for her.

ELLIS TO PLAY LEAD WITH PHILLIPS

Robert Ellis, who recently laid aside his directorial megaphone to take up acting again, has been engaged by Allen Holubar as leading man for Dorothy Phillips in her next starring vehicle for presentation through Associated First National, "The Soul Seeker." Mr. Ellis closed his legitimate stage career in New York following a two-year run of "Ups and Downs." He was engaged by L. J. Selznick to direct Olive Thomas in the picturization of the play, and also took a part. For nearly three years he continued with Selznick, directing Eugene O'Brien and Diane Hammerstein. Several months ago Mr. Ellis came West to see his wife, May Allison, and the day following his arrival he was engaged to play lead in Katherine MacDonald's "The Indel." Since then he has played three leads at Universal, two of them with Priscilla Dean.

MILLER WITH PROTEAN

F. K. Miller, former Goldwyn cinematographer, has been added to the producing staff of Protean Arts, which is starring Cecil Holland in "The Mind of Man," under the direction of Raymond Connan.

HAMPTON ENGAGES LEIGH

Frank Leish is playing an important role in "Golden Dreams," by Zane Grey, which is in its second week of production at the United Studios, under the direction of Jean Hersolt, Gus Peterson and Dick Rush.

Jane Starr is supporting Roy Stewart under the direction of Ben Wilson.

Art Stanton is making personal appearances in the Northwest with his latest production, "Where Rivers Rise."

Frankie Lee, child actor, is cast in Priscilla Dean's next Universal production, entitled "That Less O'Lowrie."

Joe Striker has an important role in "The Broadway Peacock," which Pearl White recently completed at the New York Fox Studio.

Fred Drogmund, boy actor, is playing an important role in Wm. Duncan's latest vehicle under production at Vitagraph.

Eddie Boland, Les Bates and Hal Ward now are appearing in principal roles in "Both Booths," the current comedy film being directed by Craig Hutchison at Universal City.

A. Carl Palm, for seven years laboratory chief for Famous Players, has been engaged to develop and print the film for "The Masquerader," with Guy Bates Post, under production at United Studios.

Margaret Landis has been chosen by Director Fred Niblo for an important role in Anita Stewart's supporting cast in her new picture, "Rose of the Sea," now being filmed at the Louis B. Mayer Studio. Miss Landis is a sister of Cullen Landis.

"Dollars and the Movies" was the principal topic under discussion at a recent session of the Western Motion Picture Advertisers, at which cinema finances were discussed by Laurence A. Lambt, president of the recently organized National Motion Pictures Finance Corporation, a company formed to aid the independent star and producer in making pictures in Los Angeles.

Charles Ray, Associated First National, told of his recent trip to New York, and Richard Willis, his general manager, formerly a publicity man, told of the strides made in photoplay exploitation within the last decade.

The report of the nominating committee offered as candidates for officers for the coming year Arch Reeve, of Lasky Studios, for president; Peter Gridley Smith, Marshall Nellan Studios, Vice-President; HarryHammondBeal,BenjaminB.HamptonProductions, Secretary; Malcolm Stuart Boylan, Universal City, treasurer. Ten other members were nominated for the board of directors, five of which will be elected.

A cable tramway for airplanes is being constructed at the Hal E. Roach Studios that is 150 feet high and 200 feet long, with capacity to carry a weight of over six tons. Two biplanes, that are practical, are now being built at the studios, each large enough to carry six passengers. The planes are being built for use by the various comedy companies and will be completed in about two weeks.

"A Barnyard Cavalier," Christie comedy, was selected to be shown at the Annapolis Naval Academy and at the Marine Barracks, Washington, recently, at a special program given under the auspices of Admiral William S. Sims in connection with the big naval spectacle, "The Battle of Jutland." Bobby Vernon and Viora Daniel are featured in the picture.

Jackie Coogan took a few days off this week and went to San Francisco, where he formally opened the new Granada Theatre. The feature attraction was Jackie's new picture, "My Boy."

After searching for several weeks for an unusual type of "comedy chink," Allen Holubar has returned from San Francisco, where with the aid of Chief of Police Dan O'Brien, he located a Chinese peanut vendor whom he promptly engaged for his forthcoming production of "The Soul Seeker," starring Dorothy Phillips.

Jacqueline Logan, who recently signed a long term contract with Goldwyn, was once a member of Ziegfeld's "Follies." In addition to her experience in the "Follies," Miss Logan was previously a member of a New York revival of the "Floradora" sextet.

This actress has lately appeared as leading woman in "A Perfect Crime," an Allan Dwan production, "White and Unmarried," with Thomas Meighan, and Goldwyn's "A Blind Bargain," with Lon Chaney.

"The Glorious Adventure," the natural color picture produced by Mr. Stuart Blackton, with Lady Diana Manners and an all-star British cast, has been made into a serial story and also a novel by Felix Orman, Literary Director of the Blackton Productions and author of the scenario.

The first installment of the story appears in the January issue of "The Picturegoer," and the novel is to be issued by Cecil Palmer, in a volume illustrated with twenty-four scenes from the film play, about the time that this production is shown at the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden. Before coming to England, Mr. Orman had long been identified with theatre and motion picture activities in America, and had been associated with various magazines, including "The Outlook." He was at one time Ladies' Home Journal and advertising Publishers' Association of America.

The actor who adds to distinguished artistry a record for reliability will carry off the victor's palm on the stage, as in every other walk of life. Since he opened in "The Masquerader," more than six years ago, Guy Bates Post has never missed a performance, and his characterization of the difficult dual leading roles in that stage classic has been uniformly of the highest excellence.

Carl Gantvoort, baritone; Truly Shattuck, soprano; Frank Egan, reader; Edward Martindel, basso; Mrs. H. D. Ryus, piano, and Brahms von den Berg, are among the featured stars of the cinema and opera who furnished the major portion of the first of a series of four monthly twilight recitals given Sunday afternoon in the Glendale theat- er laid of the organ fund of the new Holy Family church of Glendale.

Florence Mills and Francis Erdman, who have been featured child dancers on the Halio chain of theatres in the east, have arrived in Hollywood to commence picture work.

James F. O'Shea, production manager of Allen Holubar Productions at United Studios, and Mrs. O'Shea, known professionally as Ruth Gartland, are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter.

Harold Lloyd, Mr. and Mrs. Hal E. Roach, Mildred Davis and her mother, will spend a week or so in Florida before they return to Los Angeles. All are expected back by the first of February.

John Bowers' first cinema work was that of leading man opposite Mary Pickford in "I'llida from Holland," produced at Lasky in 1916, and directed by Jack O'Brien. He is now prominent in the all-star cast of "Lover's Lane," the Maurice Tourneur production being filmed at Ince.
ANOTHER CAMPBELL COMEDY RELEASED

"School Day Love" will be the next kiddie and animal picture in the Campbell comedy series to be released by Educational. Coy Watson Jr., and Darren Turner are the childhood sweethearts who play hookey and get into many amusing difficulties. A baseball game played by dogs and monkeys is a feature of this picture.

NORDISK FILM HAS SPECIAL SHOWING

"The Books of Satan," a Nordisk production, was given a special showing by Roy McCardell recently in New York city for Rupert Hughes, some literary lights and editors.

"SCHOOL DAYS" FOR CANADA

Charles Stephenson of Stephenson's Attractions, Ltd., of Toronto, has purchased "School Days" for the entire Dominion of Canada.

FOREIGN DEAL

Jaco Glackmann has secured the Paramount output for 1921 and 1922 for Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay, Chile, Peru and Bolivia. First release starts in Argentina in April, when the contracts become effective.

WARNER BROS. TO BUILD HOUSE FOR INDEPENDENTS

Warner Bros. are developing plans for the construction of a theater on Broadway, New York. It will house independent productions, and, of course, whatever features Warner Bros. themselves may turn out.

LATE UNIVERSAL RELEASES

Recent Universal releases are: "The Scraper," featuring Herbert Rawlinson (5 reels).

International News No. 11 and 12.

Century Comedy, "Horse Sense," featuring Harry Sweet (2 reels).

"The Open Wire," featuring Elleen Sedgwick (2-reel newspaper drama).

Following "Across the Outback" Wallace Reid will next make Richard Harding Davis' play, "The Dictator," under direction of James Cruze.

PREVIEW AT AMERICAN LEGION

"Oh Promise Me," Christie comedy starring Neil Burns, which has just been made under the direction of Scott Sidney, was given a preview showing at the Hollywood Post, American Legion, recently.

The comedy was written around an American Legion Post setting by Frank R. Conklin, and the band of the local legion, as well as a number of disabled "vets," are prominent in the picture. Among the ex-service men at the Christie studio who are in the cast are Burns, Henry Murdock, Vic Rodman, George Burton and others.

RETITLED

"I'Atlantide" will be shown in America under the title of "Missing Husbands."

PRESENT GRIFFITH WITH GERMAN PRINTS

The German company responsible for bringing "Two Orphans" into this country, recently handed David W. Griffith the negative and positive print of their production, assuring him they have no intention of re-releasing their version of the play in this country. They further reassure him that they wish no remuneration for this courtesy.

NEW LUBITZCH FILM FOR NEW YORK

"Pharaoh's Wife," the new Ernst Lubitsch production, will open for an indefinite run at the Criterion Theatre, New York City, some time in February. The picture is now being prepared for the showing.

EDWARDS FINISHING

Word from Rome, Italy, brings the information that J. Gordon Edwards has nearly finished his production of the spectacle, "Nero." With the exception of a couple of players taken with him, Edwards used Italian talent.

Gertrude Astor began her picture career with the old Biography Company at New York in "The Absentee," starring Robert Edeson and directed by Christy Cabanne.

Charles Hutchison's new serial for Pathé will be known as "Go-Get-'Em Hutch."

AT THE R.C. STUDIOS

A tale of the African desert will be Pauline Frederick's next screen vehicle, immediately following the completion of the film adaptation of William J. Locke's novel, "The Glory of Clementina," on which she is now engaged. Emilie Chautard, who came here from New York to direct Miss Frederick in "The Glory of Clementina," will also direct the ensuing production, the title of which is "The Woman Brower." The original screen story written for Miss Frederick by Louis Stevens. Jack Dennis, film cutter, is back at work again after several weeks of convalescence following an automobile accident in which he was severely injured.

Doris May is preparing for her forthcoming production, "Gay and Devilish."

AT THE INCE STUDIOS

The company filming "The Brotherhood of Hate" is still at Sonoma, where three weeks will be devoted to filming exterior scenes. Marguerite de la Motte, Lloyd Hughes and Frank Reeman are in the cast.

Paul Scardon is directing Leah Baird's second independent feature entitled, "When the Devil Pays."

John Griffith Wray is to direct "Finding Home," which will probably be the next Ince feature to be placed in production.

AT VITAGRAPH

Bradley Smollen is preparing the continuity of "The Magnificent Amberson," from the story by Booth Tarkington, which will be a future starring vehicle for Jean Paisie, who is at present in New York. Edward Jose will direct.

Larry Senon is cutting his latest comedy temporarily titled "The Show Shop."

William Duncan has been busy procuring water scenes in connection with his current production, "Man Hunters."

INGRAM PLANS "TOILERS OF THE SEA"

It is understood that Rex Ingram is arranging a version of Victor Hugo's "Toilers of the Sea." It is as yet undecided whether the picture will be made in this country or abroad.

Before beginning on the Hugo novel, Ingram will probably make "Black Orchids," which he made for Universal about six years ago. Cleo Madison appeared in the old version and it is probable that Barbara La Marr will appear in the new version.

HAMPTON PICTURE REACHES DENMARK

Benjamin B. Hampton's screen version of William Allen White's "A Certain Rich Man," has just reached Denmark, according to a letter received by Jean Hersholt, former Danish actor and director. Hersholt is now heading the Hampton directorial forces and played a character part in "Wildfire," just completed.

Production of "White Shoulders," Katharine MacDonald's latest Associated First National feature, has begun at the Preferred studios. Charles Clary plays opposite "the American beauty," while Charles Gerard has an important role.

"Unknown Switzerland," which Educational will release in a few days, will close the current European series of Robert C. Bruce Scenes.

Carmen Aréssel is in San Francisco on a short vacation.

AT LASKY'S

William de Mille is still preparing "Bought and Paid For," his forthcoming production of Joseph Broadhurst's play, which was adapted by Chara Beranger. Agnes Ayres and Jack Holt will play the leading roles.

January 30th is the date set, approximately, for the start of Agnes Ayres' new star picture, "The Ordeal," by W. Somerset Maugham, adapted by Bennah Marie Dix. This will be a William D. Taylor production and he is now arranging for his sets, cast and other matters.

George Melford will start January 23rd on his new production, "The Cat That Walked Alone." The company will start for the North at the beginning of the picture to be gone a week on special scenes and will then return to the studio for interior work.

Bebe Daniels has just returned to the studio, after her first vacation in over two years. Gloria Swanson is coming to the end of "Seeley the Rocks," under the direction of Sam Wood.

The hydro-electric power houses of the Southern California Edison Company at Kern River, Calif., formed the "Big Business" background for "The Truthful Liar," a Wanda Hawley Reaart picture, which has just been completed under the direction of Thomas Heffron.

Alfred Green is nearing the end of "The Proxy Daddy," in which Thomas Meighan is starring. Mr. Meighan's next vehicle will also be directed by Green and will be George Ade's original story, "Our Leading Citizen," adapted by Waldeumar Young.

May McAvoy is taking advantage of a present between picture vacation to gather wardrobe necessities for coming productions.

Paul Powell is nearly through with "Tharon of Lost Valley," with Dorothy Dalton. The company has been away on location for a great deal of the time on this picture.

Jack Holt starts presently on a new star picture under the direction of Joseph Henabery. This will be "Val of Paradise," by Vinny E. Roe, adapted by Will M. Ritchey.

FINANCING ORGANIZATION ABOUT TO START

With organization details perfected this week, the financing of independent stars and producers who are planning to make pictures this spring in and around Los Angeles, is about to begin by the recently formed National Motion Picture Finance Corporation.

The personnel of officers, directors and advisory council of the new organization were given out this week by Laurence A. Lambert, president.

Officers selected in addition to Lambert, who is general manager as well as president, are R. J. Schroeder, vice-president and treasurer. He was formerly vice-president of the Farmers and Merchants bank of Independence, Mo.

Kaufman, for many years president of the Decatur Fountain Co.; Alfred G. Roberts, secretary and treasurer Financial Loan and Investment Co., vice-president; R. L. Caruthers, formerly secretary of the Green

STUDIO DEAL CONSUMMATED

The old Griffith Studios, the birthplace of "The Birth of a Nation," "Broken Blossoms," "Uneasy Long Lets," and many other well-known for the number of present film stars who appeared in their first film productions at this studio, has recently been sold to the Triangle Film Corporation of New York, to the Fine Arts Studios, Inc., of California—incorporated for $100,000, which will operate as a production studio.

The officers of the new corporation are Nat Deverich, president; Andrew D. W. Reid, vice-president and John Rikkelman, secretary and treasurer. The new organization has been affiliated with the film industry many years. Mr. Deverich has been associated with the Pickford interests, Marshall Neill Productions and Famous Players-Lasky for the past ten years and also has directed independent pictures. Mr. Reid was D. W. Griffith's illuminating engineer for six years, having to his credit the lighting of "Broken Blossoms," "Intolerance" and "Way Down East." Mr. Rikkelman was connected with the Griffith Laboratories both in California and in the East.

Work has already been started on improvements under the direction of Ralph Deaver, technical manager and art director, who erected and dressed the sets in "The Connecticut Yankee" and "The Count of Monte Cristo."

The studio includes a large and complete wardrobe which has been thoroughly renovated under the direction of Margaret Whistler, who costumed "The Queen of Sheba" and "The Connecticut Yankee." This wardrobe is being operated on a rental basis for the film industry of the city as well as giving special attention to the companies leasing space at the studio.

The office and accounting is under the direction of C. H. Olsen.

The studio has purchased new lighting equipment, which together with the direct current supplied assures photographic results.

The laboratory situated on the studio grounds and included in the purchase has been leased to the Commonwealth Laboratories, under the office management of Rex Hodges with the laboratory in charge of Abe Behrns.

Already operating on the lot are the Campbell Comedies, making kid and animal pictures on an Educational Release, and the Players-Lasky, making Educational pictures. The Ralph Graves Company is also contemplating an immediate start on this lot.

FINEMAN, BURR AND ZIEDMAN JOIN FORCES

Another new company has made its bow, including three old timers in the business, who have joined forces to make pictures. They are Bernard Fineman, who recently sold his rights in the Katherine MacDonald company, Charles Burr and Bennie Ziedman, president of Associated Distributors, and Bennie Ziedman, formerly associated with Mary Pickford and her Fairbanks. The new company, which will be called the Edwin Carewe Pictures Corporation, and all productions will be made on the West Coast.

The "Highway Man," a Northwest Mounted Police story, will serve as the first vehicle for the new organization.

Jeanie MacPherson, who is in New York vacationing, was at the recent opening of "Foolish Wives," Von Stroheim's biggest Universal special.

The Man on the Cover--An Impression

By Ted LeBerthon

What public personality has exerted the widest influence upon our national life in the past five years, has left the deepest imprint of his being in the foregrounds of our consciousness? If this question were propounded in the classroom, the answers would probably be many and varied. Wilson, Hoover, Pershing; Irving Cobb, Booth Tarkington, Rupert Hughes; D. W. Griffith, Thomas Edison, Henry Ford; all these could be suggested, but I believe their adherents would be mistaken, owing to a pre-disposition toward political, literary, theatrical, or inventive figures.

I believe that motion picture players repeatedly featured in roles which emphasized some such salient characteristic as courage, agility, wit, or wholesomeness, influence most profoundly our national ideas of ethics and conduct. Wilson, or Tarkington, or Ford are known, respected and felt through their achievements, but such cinema stars as William S. Hart, Douglas Fairbanks, Charlie Chaplin, and Charles Ray are known and felt far more intimately—through their cinema selves their every gesture, every fleeting mood, every idiosyncrasy, every distinctive characteristic become common knowledge.

After thoughtful consideration, I have come to the conclusion that Charles Ray is not only most representative and typically American, but that his personality is etched deeper in our hearts than that of any other public figure. To me, he stands for that substantial something which Walt Whitman sang of and which Carl Sandburg sings of, and can no more be thought away than a mountain can be thought away.

Charles Ray is not the screen's most romantic figure; to womankind he is more the eternal husband than the eternal lover. In him are not the fulgurous, magnificent sweeps of color that invite swift, ephemeral and therefore tragic romance, but the protective and comforting spirit of a strong, true friend with friendly branches. He is earnestly, exactly sincere; while every Don Juan is intrinsically a liar. Our friend Ray in his pictures needs backgrounds of endless, undulant hills, of warm, luminous skies, of trees, meadowlands and grasses; his spirit is too large and expansive for confinement within drawing room walls and too hard to penemential to exist within the aura of equivocal meanings and dainty distinctions.

Gold is deemed the most precious of metals because of its rarity. Charles Ray appeals to most of us because he is essentially different from most of us. The texture of his ego has sternly resisted any despoiling o fits substance, I do not believe his heart will or can dance to any fiddler's calling. The voice of things wanton and sinister cannot penetrate to his sanctuary, if I have interpreted aright the emanations of his spirit as it guided thought and emotion across the silver screen. There are some men and women who can do no conscious wrong, whether they will or not; no matter what rationeation is indulged in, the soul grows and fords from its citadel.

Charles Ray's popularity will persist long after our Reids and Moores and Valentinos are forgotten, for he is the last and truest lover, whose awkward arms are open to sister, mother, or sweetheart alike. He is beloved by youngsters and old folks. There is that surety and dogged sincerity that will always invite trust, belief and a welcome into the heart of the family set. We mean that, it is sometimes withheld or grudgingly given the gorgeous youth with roving eyes of molten gold, Greecian profile, inimitating presence.

I met him a couple of years ago in the office of Sid Grauman, the cinema magnifico. He was faultlessly attired in clothes of fashionable cut. The conversation I forgot, but I remember that he was quietly positive.

In Los Angeles one sees him at symphonies, operas, plays, football games and automobile races. His automobiles seem to me a trifle gaudy, and I imagine that he probably invites such an ornate touch to indicate his fellowship with the motion picture colony. I understand that he is a serious and persistent reader.

No amount of contacts, no cultivation of sophistication, will ever change Ray, if I guess right. I don't believe he could ever change himself. Were he to dress like John Drew and become a frequenter of lobster palaces, midnight frolics and somber joy-rides, I am sure his soul would retain the austerity of the great plains and the impregnable and inaccessibility of lonely mountains.

His sheer cleanliness and wholesomeness are unmatched by any other figure on the stage or screen. As Time passes, and he grows older, will anyone take his place? I doubt it; his particular niche may remain forever unfilled. When his gullible, whimsical, mother's boy personality fades into middle age, and newer idols are being worshipped and other exemplars of youth and freshness arrest the attention of capricious humanity and some of us are much older, we will sometime vividly recall the presence that is the Charles Ray of today—as sometimes in deepest dreams we encounter those we will never again see in the hours when we are awake.

Contemporary Criticisms

"THREE LIVE GHOSTS"

"No question about what this picture will do, for today it made a tremendous hit. A great many people have read the story. With exploiting to match the cleverly produced picture, an exhibitor would have to be pretty hopeless who couldn't count money with "Three Live Ghosts." . . . The characters couldn't have been better chosen, several of the original members of the company coming to cast the tolerant leading roles. Romance, laughs, and anti-climaxes are piled up right and left in the picture, assuring an avalanche of dollars at the box office."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"Frederic S. Isham's big Broadway stage success, "Three Live Ghosts," shows improvement as an entertainment feature by its transformation into a photoplay by George Fitzmaurice. The adaptation was made by Ouida Bergere, and the clever manner in which she has injected new melodrama and motion picture lore, for the original drama has added much to the picture."—Exhibitors Herald.

"An expert blending of delicious humor, a cast of major actors and a good deal of human appeal, makes "Three Live Ghosts" an entertainment that cannot fail to meet with general approval. But it is its natural and sparkling humor that is most responsible for putting the picture over with the bang it received, for instance, when the reviewer saw it in a crowded house in the Rivoli Theatre, where it played to good success for the week."—Moving Picture World.

"The popular play from the pen of Frederick S. Isham, which graced a Broadway theatre for many months, and was among the most favorably talked of dramas in 1921, will unquestionably score as emphatically as a screen hit of 1922. It sets a precedent which promises improved pictures, if those which follow keep even pace. . . .

"The plot has not been kept intact, additional melodrama having obviously been injected because of the original situation depended entirely upon dialogue. More fitting motion picture lore has been substituted which will not be apparent to those who did not see the original, and those who did will be bound to admit the necessity of the change. Indeed, in adapting "Three Live Ghosts," Ouida Bergere has done a work of which she may well be proud."—Motion Picture News.

"ACROSS THE DEADLINE"

"From a point of scenic value, 'Across the Deadline' is entitled to praise, in that the locale, the great Northwest, is interesting, the photography wonderfully beautiful and the atmosphere very distinct, throughout. Also, the star, Frank Mayo, does some splendid work, is good to look at and is deserving of a story which would give him sufficient range to show to advantage. For the story is neither new, novel or easy to take seriously."—Motion Picture News.

"For pictorial purposes, the middle of the street in a Western town, may serve effectively as the hard line between right and wrong, the church on one side and the saloons on the other. Getting down to facts, however, the metaphor seems a bit far-fetched, when it is to unnaturally emphasize that wickedness cleaves to one side of the curb, and righteousness to the other, and one cannot cross without being defiled or reformed. . . . There are some good climaxes, some attractive outdoor settings, including in particular, the waterfall, and there is a pleasing love story. . . .

"The two leading roles are in the capable hands of Frank Mayo and Molly Malone. As the street, also as the lawless, vengeful men, no better production could be recommended than 'Across the Deadline.' It is a story replete with tense dramatic incidents, some mystery and several strong climaxes. It was filmed for the most part amid beautiful pines and the western atmosphere is further carried out by sets representing a rough mining village.

"The role of John Kidder gives Frank Mayo plenty of opportunity to display his prowess with his fists and Molly Malone is a pleasing and pretty heroine. Russell Simpson has a particularly strong role as the father; Enoch Kidder, Joseph Swickard, William Marion, Frank Thorwald and Lydia Knott appear in the cast."—Exhibitors Herald.

"HAIL THE WOMAN"

"'Hail the Woman' is built upon a theme that reaches in and grips both the mind and the heart and therefore the continuous attention of the average moving picture theatregoer. This theme is superbly interpreted in every department of production. And it is an argument—mind you, not a preachment nor a sermon—against one of the vital problems of the day: that of the double standard of morality. . . .

"Written by C. Gardner Sullivan, the story presents a vital human document. It is interpreted by a cast that performs brilliant work individually and perfect team play collectively, which guarantees tremendous effect."—Moving Picture World.

"That Thomas H. Ince and C. Gardner Sullivan are unbeatable as a combination is proven in 'Hail the Woman,' which will be accepted as one of the really outstanding pictures of the year. Mr. Sullivan has long been recognized as a master writer of the photoplay.

"'Hail the Woman' is something of which he should feel highly proud. The same feeling should be expressed by John Griffith Wray, the director, and Mr. Ince, the supervisor."—Motion Picture News.

NEW VIDOR PICTURE

Florence Vidor has begun work upon "The Real Adventure," from Henry Kitchell Webster's novel.

Frank Hayes, Walter Perkins and H. Gordon Mullen have been chosen to enact roles in R. B. Hamptom's "Golden Dreams," under production at United Studios.

---

Why Studios "Close Down"

It is both notable and significant that most of the studios which have NOT "closed down" during the last year have been regular clients of the Photoplay Sales Department of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation.

Four years ago we expressed the opinion that producers who consistently select their plays because of their intrinsic screenability, rather than because of their "literary" value, were destined to achieve and maintain financial success.

And now, four years later, we hold tenaciously and justifiably to the same opinion.

Nor have the producers who have regularly come to Story Headquarters for their stories had occasion to differ from that opinion. They have been too busy making good pictures for a market that is starving for good pictures to entertain the thought of "closing down."

It is not the policy of the Palmer Sales Department to urge the purchase of one story at a high price (just to make a sale), but rather to endeavor to select material that will make for continuous successful production.

DIRECTORS SUPPORT ACTORS IN HEAVY FOREIGN FILM TARIFF

Welcoming comparison of American motion pictures with foreign-made productions, but desiring to protect thousands of American workers from retribution policies of domineering producers, the Motion Picture Directors' Association through its director president, William D. Taylor, has wired the Senate Finance Committee urging that import duties for imported films be either limited in quantity or taxed on value, with volume and cost of film production in the United States as a basis.

The telegram filed by Mr. Taylor points out that motion pictures are being produced abroad far cheaper than they can be made here, and that producers are now establishing units or making affiliations abroad and are drastically cutting down domestic production. The eleven months ending May 1st, compared with the previous twelve months, he asserts, show an increase of 36 per cent in imports of exposed film negative and a decrease of 26 per cent in exports.

The movement toward international production would deplore exceedingly a situation wherein domestic producers would find it economically advantageous to employ a divided press and decreased production costs and bring them to the United States for cutting, editing, and distribution ostensibly as American productions. It requires the director-president of the M. P. D. A.

The Senate Finance Committee is now preparing a report on the Forney Tariff bill, which imposes a 10 per cent ad valorem duty on foreign-made motion pictures imported into this country.

The present national association of producers and distributors is opposing the thirty per cent tariff, fearing retaliation by foreign nations. They argue that then American distributors will find it necessary to produce abroad to enter the European market on a basis equal to their foreign competitors. This, they allege, would throw American actors, directors, artists, artisans and laborers out of employment.

On the other hand the actors favor a sixty per cent of American valuation, and through the Actors' Equity Association, charge the producers with desiring a low duty in order to take advantage of cheap labor and thus reducing films abroad for use in this country.

The motion picture directors favor limiting import duties (exposed) to a design number of foreign-made films, per production, that percentage to be divided among foreign countries in proportion to their respective volumes of film production. They do not represent the tone of the MInistry of Culture.

A Reorganization

It has been suggested that the Affiliated Picture Interests is about to reorganize in an attempt to acquire a membership really representative of the motion picture industry whose interests it sometime ago set out to champion. In spite of this commendable aim, however, it is an admitted fact that the profession entertains scarcely any regard for the organization as it is now operated, a knowledge which has proven most disturbing to the conceivers of the new movement; and it is the organizers themselves who are now seeking a remedy.

Whether the elimination of the concentrated "big producer" element, which has kept things pretty well blocked thus far in the Affiliated, will do the work or whether an entirely new plan must be drafted to gain the desired end are phases now under discussion.

If the industry's various associations feel that there is value in an undertaking of this kind, and surely its theoretical worth is evident, now is the time for expression. Let us not indulge in the general tendency to neglect our opportunities for speech only to whisper discontentedly when matters have passed out of our hands.

From Our Correspondents

When we reflect over that which is brought forth by some of our editorial efforts we wonder that our heart is strong enough to continue.

The following communication proves that our idea "went over" but where and how is something we might worry about if we had time.

"Dear Editor:

"Quoting from the Literary Digest a quotation from the Camera! 'That our greatest misfortune is our lack of genuine youth,' perhaps if the people really do feel the truth of what you see in the same old faces that appear on the lighted sheet, there will be some hopes of younger and new faces to take the place of the old ones."

"That is why I am dreaming dreams of a career for myself on the lighted sheet, and why I am writing to you to see if I could get you interested in me."

"This quotation from your paper woke me up to the fact that perhaps we younger beauties can make Mary Pickford and others fade away as old who truly have lost their youth. I am 17 and pretty, so a town of 10,000 inhabitants, declare, for I have just won the prize of a $20.00 gold piece with 2,000 majority in a beauty contest."

"Doesn't that fact give me the right to try, but I do not know where to begin will you kindly tell me how,— could you get some of the movie companies interested in me."

"Could I enter the beauty contest that is to take place in Los Angeles soon will you kindly tell me to whom to apply for admission? I have been complimented on my beauty all my life but never thought seriously of it, until I read your quotation, then I thought if I can win a name and a comfortable living from my looks, why not."

"Trusting I have not asked you to do more for me than you can do, I am awaiting a reply."

"BERNICE FLACK."

The next we don't profess to follow intelligently, but we firmly believe that the lady is contradicting us in at least two paragraphs. The rest of the time we were merely misunderstood.

Providence, R. I., Jan. 17, 1922.

PICKFORD AND FAIRBANKS PURCHASE STUDIO

Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks have purchased the Jesse D. Hampton studios. By this transaction they put the stamp of their approval on Southern California as the hub of the picture universe.

"Although we may go to Europe for a portion of each year," said Miss Pickford ree supporting Lige Conley in the newest Jack White comedy under production at United Studios.

"Perhaps Parrott signed a week a long term contract with Hal E. Roach for the continuance of one reel comedies, "shooting" to commences Feb. 15th. Mr. Parrott, whose company is the most recently added unit, has completed thirteen comedies, several of which have already been released.

"Our Gun," the "kiddies" comedy which Fred Newmeyer directed, was completed this week and one reel has been assembled by T. J. Crizer, film editor. The comedy, which was written by Sam Taylor and Charles Parrott, is a two reeler, the leading roles being acted by "Sunshine Sammy," Anna May Ellson, John Hatton and Jackie and William Condon.

"TOL'ABLE DAVID"

Kinema

The month's big dramatic picture is "Tol'able David," the Inspiration Pictures' production which marks Richard Barthele-muss' starring debut for First National. Taken from Joseph Herreshimer's Cumberland-laid novel of the same name, it has been admirably adapted by Edmund Goulding and Director Henry King and artistically set in the approximate locale of the original. This last is truly an invaluable element since it not only dresses the filmplay harmoniously and convinces beyond the shadow of a question with its accuracy, but also lends the picture a rare chronicle of life in the West Virginia valleys. We do not recollect having previously witnessed a technically correct cinema of this district. This one is right in every detail.

King proves himself with this work one of the screen's most accomplished directors. Just as his clever faces have been launched at the world over, "Tol'able David" will occasion universal tears. His gripping melodramatic suspense in this picture is not only rivals but exceeds that effected by Griffith in "Way Down East;" his climax is unusually strenuous without ever becoming either morbid or ridiculous; and his guidance of the trouping cast is superb.

Henry Cronjager's photography blends the whole splendidly.

As for the star, he offers his first "straight" classic in the title role. Playing the wistful, sensitive lad, "not a man yet but tol'able, just tol'able," he is one of the celluloid's most artistically young characters. His situation in and interpretation of the determined, sincere mountain boy is perfect from his sympathetic humorously introduction right through to the heart-breaking battle which kills him. Few performances like David will see Richard Barthelemess at the top of the ladder.

Gladys Hulette is also beautifully situated in Esther Hathorn, David's rustic sweet-heart whose code is based upon the loyalty of the mountain woman. Her work deserves the highest praise since she attains every point allotted her completely and attractively.

Marion Abbott, in David's practical but adoring mother, gives a carefully shaded portrayal that approaches the two or three famous mother roles which we have set apart as screen achievements. Like the entire cast, Miss Abbott was faultlessly chosen.

Edmund Gurney, Warner Richmond and Patterson Dial provide some striking characterization as David's ill-fated father, brother and sister-in-law, while Ernest Torrence is the season's most handsome heavy in Luke Hathorn, a mountain outlaw. Never has a villain been more repulsive than this one or more fearsome supported as he is by a diabolical father and brother, and in the respective hands of Walter Lewis and Ralph Yeasley.

Forrest Robinson, Laurence Eddinger and Hazel Scott are admirably dispatched the remaining roles in the cast.

"Tol'able David's" superlatively high production standard is due to the picture's inherent might of too many unnecessarily descriptive subtitles. However, this is an almost incomparable item under the circumstances, for here will be a foremost celluloid triumph of 1922. The box office will tell the tale.

"PEACOCK ALLEY"

Loew's State

Robert Z. Leonard has given "Peacock Alley," Metro's current presentation starring Miss Murray, a brilliant production with the result that this cinematic play is quite the most lavish and exotic now being shown in the city. Every foot of the picture scintillates with unique costumes, gorgeous settings, super-artistic photography or startling, Prizma colored art titles, while silhouetted against these beautifully executed details is a thoroughly entertaining, if utterly incosistent love story of a Parisian dancer by Ouida Bersce. The plot offers no particularly new twists and sets forth several overdrawn situations but Edmund Goulding has translated it all for the screen very convincingly so that taken by and large "Peacock Alley" is the sort of pastime in which the public revels. It should draw excellently.

Cleo of Paris, the beguiling little heroine of this playphot, is rendered an enchanting bit of animation by the always fascinating and clever Miss Murray. There is a rhythm about this artiste not confined alone to her attractive dancing which, as usual, is an invaluable feature of her performance. Primarily, however, this spirited little Parisienne, vitally alive and deliciously affected, is entirely human which saves her from a merely beautiful effect, the fate of so many, of our most constant performers. Perhaps it is because Elmer Harmon, Cleo's lover and husband, is fundamentally misunderstanding and therefore a little unsympathetic that Monte Blue lacks much of his customary appeal in the character. Nevertheless, we would have imagined a much different result.

Edmund Lowe is as good touch as Garrison a "Broadway graduate," while Anders Randolf, W. J. Ferguson, William Tooker, Howard Lang, William Frederic and M. Durant are suitable types for the remaining roles which they ample fill without exception.

"THREE LIVE GHOSTS"

Grauman's

Frederic Isham's post war play, "Three Live Ghosts," somewhat changed as to material but probably benefiting so, has arrived from the British Paramount studios, where it was produced by George Fitzmaurice from a scenario by Ouida Bergesheimer. Without music, comedy, the necessary amount of reason and an almost entirely clever cast, this picture will not even wish for popularity, but it can not be said to reach the famous Fitzmaurice standard in all respects. Nevertheless the last decision is up to the audience which was unhesitatingly and delighted at the opening performance. The story deals with the exploits of three British soldiers who, after being dead for a hundred years (a son and an Earl), providing many rich situations.

Norman Kerry, who plays Foster, the juvenile, presents possibly the most interesting and colorful portrayal in the cast. There is nothing particularly wrong with the hero, but he just doesn't grip.

Both Cyril Chadwick and Edmund Goulding, however, are gold mines of mirth in Spopy, the "balmy" Earl, and Jimmy Gubbins, his cockney pal, while Clare Greet adds the finishing touch to the drunken, spirit communing Mrs. Gubbins.

Anna Q. Nilsson enacts satisfactorily the feminine lead while the list of players further concludes with Misses Eileen Barry, Dorothy Benson, drink and Windham Guise.

From a production standpoint "Three Live Ghosts" lacks a little of the richness that we have been educated to expect.

"SATURDAY NIGHT"

Grauman's Rialto

Jennie MaPherson's latest concoction for Cecil de Mille's Paramount production, "Saturday Night," answers the question, "Is any happiness to be gained by marrying out of one's sphere?" in the negative and illustrates its point with parallel love stories of a millionaire and a chauffeur an heiress. The story contains several exceedingly human situations but it lacks the essence and charm that gives life to this piece of the ordinary and delicate the opening performance. The story deals with the exploits of three British soldiers who, after being dead for a hundred years (a son and an Earl), providing many rich situations.

Norman Kerry, who plays Foster, the juvenile, presents possibly the most interesting and colorful portrayal in the cast. There is nothing particularly wrong with the hero, but he just doesn't grip.

Both Cyril Chadwick and Edmund Goulding, however, are gold mines of mirth in Spopy, the "balmy" Earl, and Jimmy Gubbins, his cockney pal, while Clare Greet adds the finishing touch to the drunken, spirit communing Mrs. Gubbins.

Anna Q. Nilsson enacts satisfactorily the feminine lead while the list of players further concludes with Misses Eileen Barry, Dorothy Benson, drink and Windham Guise.

From a production standpoint "Three Live Ghosts" lacks a little of the richness that we have been educated to expect.

CLASS OPENING POSTPONED

The Hoover Art Studios makes the following announcement:

Mr. Frank Geritz, whose exhibition of woodcuts and linoleum cuts at the Hoover Art Studios has occasioned great interest, has been engaged to make sketches and woodblock portraits of the members of the San Carlo Grand Opera Company and the Pavlova Ballet. As these commissions will take Mr. Geritz's entire time for some weeks to come, the opening of the woodblock and linoleum cut class at the Hoover Studios, scheduled to start this week, will be postponed until March first.

Beginning February first, limited subscriptions for tuition can still be entered at the Studios.

TOURISTS SEE "MAKING THE MOVIES"

Clarke Irvine is staging "Making the Movies" at the Hollywood Legion stadium every Tuesday afternoon and recently a big crowd enjoyed watching Neal Burns and Josephine Hill do some bits of comedy before a Christie camera under the direction of Scott Sidney.

Film strips of the stars appearing, with autographed photographs are given away as souvenirs.

SOUTH CAROLINA FEARS CENSORS

It is predicted that South Carolina will be harassed with legalized censorship as the result of a bill just introduced in the General Assembly by Representative Edgar A. Brown.

South Carolina has no regularly organized exhibitors' body and there is no exchange center in the state, hence opposition to the bill has been only lukewarm, and it is believed it will become a law.

Cecil B. de Mille is expected back presently from his European vacation.

Jack Blystone is directing Lapino Lane in his first picture for Fox.

Teddy, the dog, seen so often in Mack Sennett comedies, was seriously injured recently while taking part in a scene.

The new athletic novelty "pogo" has already found its way into pictures. Katherine McDonald has made it a part of her current production to represent a society foot.

The movie-schooner that Allen Holubar will use in his production of "The Soul Seeker," starring Dorothy Phillips, has arrived here from San Francisco.

George C. Mac Cormick, electrical engineer associated with the Charles Ray Productions, Inc., has been elected president of the Electrical Illuminating Engineers Society in Los Angeles.

Maurice Costello, the screen's first idol, is in vaudeville. So is Maud George, a prominent figure in Erie von Stroheim's million-dollar cinema saturnalia.

"Boomerang Bill," a Paramount picture, is coming to Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre Monday, Jan. 30th. The picture was created by Cosmopolitan and features Lionel Barrymore.

FAMOUS PLAYERS TENTH ANNIVERSARY

The tenth anniversary of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation will occur in February, and preparations are being made to observe the event in many theatres throughout the country.

CLYDE FILMORE

LEAVES COSMOPOLITAN

Julian Josephson has resigned as title editor of Cosmopolitan Productions and is coming to the Pacific Coast for a vacation.

Vera Lewis is spending the winter in San Francisco.

Doris Deane recently appeared in "Making the Movies" in Hollywood, a show which takes the public into the secrets of film production.

John Fairbanks, who is general manager of his brother Doug's business affairs, recently won a silver cup in a golf tournament at the Flintridge Country Club.

Jacqueline Logan and Lily Leslie are playing in support of Doris May in her forthcoming starring vehicle for R-C Pictures entitled "Gay and Devilish."

Paul Willis recently returned to Los Angeles from an Orpheum tour and is now busy rehearsing a new act. Mr. Willis was the hero with Mary Carr in Fox's feature, "Thunderclap," now showing.

Clarke Irvine insists that here's a senseless sentence, and we can't help agreeing: "I Accuse Foolish Wives for being Just Around the Corner in Peacock Alley picking the Passion Flower from the Secret Place in The Garden of Allah. For Shame!"

PATHE SALESMEN WIN PRIZES

B. H. Cohen, Pathe salesman working out of Minneapolis, and W. W. Kofeldt, Pathe ranch manager in San Francisco, are winners in the Jesse D. Hampton Sales and Collection Contest, which ended on December 24th. Announcement of this effort was made by Pathe this week, following the competition period, which began on October 31st, and closed December 25th at midnight. All contracts recorded up to that time were counted in the result, which accounts for the delay in the naming of the winners. The victors can take either a transcontinental trip at Mr. Hampton's expense, or $3,000 cash, its equivalent.

The Hampton contest was open to Pathe and Associated Exhibitors salesmen, inasmuch as each sell the Hampton product.

PHOTOPLAY EDITION OF "PENROD"

A "Freckles" Barry photoplay edition of Booth Tarkington's "Penrod" book has just come off the press and Grosset & Dunlap publishers, are preparing a national advertising campaign for the publication in which the Marshall Neilan picture will be given prominent display publicity.

SCREEN COMMENT INVITED

Why doesn't Vox Populi step forward with a little comment on motion pictures? It is generally admitted that the magic rectangle is not exercising the fascination it should. Is it the stars or the stories? Too much variety in programs or too high admissions? The screen, more than press or government, is the servant of the people. It is responsive to the public's wish—when that wish is expressed. Your advice will be read at "headquarters" if sent to William D. Taylor, president Motion Picture Directors' Association, or Frank D. Woods, president Screen Writers' Guild.

RAWLINSON RESTING

Herbert Rawlinson, who recently completed "Peterman," from the prison type-writer of Louis Victor Eytinge, "Lifer" in the Arizona State institution at Florence, is taking a four weeks' vacation.

Milton Ross and George Periolat will be sent in rules of consequence in Doris May's current R-C photoplay which William A. Seiter is directing.

NEW DISTRIBUTING EXCHANGES IN NEW YORK

Metropolitan National Exchanges, Inc., a new distributing office, is now open and doing business in New York City. This exchange is affiliated with National Exchanges, Inc.

Walter L. Johnson, President of National Exchanges, Inc., is President of Metropolitan National Exchanges, Inc., while R. C. Croom is in active charge.

Jerry Wilson, formerly with Myriad Pictures Corporation; and Nathan Marcus, formerly with Roulart, are members of the sales force.

Metropolitan National Exchanges, Inc., will distribute all National Exchanges, Inc.
coming productions in the greater New York territory. At present it is handling Kinetos and the series of twenty-modernized versions of Charles Ray successes, the first four of which are "Saved from the Depths," "African Love," "After the Storm," and "The Mystery of the Mis-ion," with such well-known stars as Louise Glaum, Clara Williams, Frank Borzage, Enid
Markey and Joseph Dowling in the supporting casts.

Other productions to be released through Metropolitan National Exchanges, Inc., will be announced in the very near future.

HAMILTON-WHITE NOTES

Jack White's latest Mermaid Comedy, "Midnight," has been sent to New York for release. It will be shown at the Wiltshire and De Luxe theaters.

Lloyd Hamilton is preparing to start his fifth comedy.

NEW PRODUCING ALLIANCE

L. J. Gasnier and B. P. Schulberg have formed a producing alliance known as Gas-nier-Schulberg Productions. The first picture to be made under this banner is "Does Marry Pay?" which goes into production at once, according to announcement.

FILM THEFT BILL INTRODUCED

A National Film Theft bill was introduced in the House of Representatives recently by Congressman Joseph Walsh of Massachusetts on behalf of the National Association. The measure will provide $5,000 fine and a prison term for carriers of stolen film.

YOUNG AND RORK TO FILM "TEXAS STEER"

Sam Rork and James Young have purchased the rights to "A Texas Steer," which they will produce after Mr. Young completes "The Maskeraders."

ENTER POLO COMPANY

The Eddie Polo Corp. of New York has been formed with a capital of $10,000. The incorporators are Eddie Polo and L. Ostrom.
Harry G. Kirsch is the attorney.

"Hearts of the North" has been booked over the Loew circuit.

Famous Players-Lasky has purchased
"Three Musketeers" for production.

Max Linder is finishing his burlesque on "The Three Musketeers" for Goldwyn release.

"The Digest of the Motion Picture Industry"

RAPHL OBENCHAIN TO STAR ON SILVER SHEET

Charles SeelIng will make a series of pictures with Ralph Obenchain to be released through a local distributing concern.

The first cinema play will be titled "The Man in a Million."

Kate Salmon has been engaged as business manager and Neal Smith as cameraman.

Jawitz Pictures will release "Dante's Inferno," produced in Italy, on the state market. The company also states it will Distribute the "Crusade of the Innocents;" a Gabrielle D'Annunzio story which was produced in Italy.

CLARA DRAY

HINES IN FULL LENGTH FEATURE

Charles C. Burr of Affiliated Distributors, Inc., intends making two full-length features with Johnny Hines. One will be made in Los Angeles and one in New York. Distribution will be via the independent martet in the fall. Hines, according to Burr, has several more two-reelers to make for Educational with the final one scheduled for May delivery. Immediately after, the features will be produced and then Hines will for a time revert to two-reelers again.

It is expected that Marshall Neilan will direct Mary Pickford in her next picture, a rehashing of "Fess of the Storm Country."

Production of "The Real Adventure" by Henry Kittel Weber with Florence Vidor starring and King Vidor directing, is well under way at the Vidor Studios.

Helen Stone is playing a prominent child role in "The Glory of Cemenetta," starring Pauline Frederick. Little Miss Stone recently appeared in "Salvage," a late Freder-lick vehicle.

Director Milburn Monroe of the Morante
Producing Company, operating at the old Balboa plant in Long Beach, has returned from California Hot Springs where he took his company to secure exteriors for his fourth picture of the series of eight in which George Chesebro is featured.

PATHE SIGNS LLOYD

After a week or more of conferences, Harold Lloyd, Hal E. Roach and Pathe officials have finally drawn up contracts providing for the release of Lloyd's future productions through Pathe.

The new contract calls for a minimum of four and possibly five pictures a year. One of these may be a half feature length, but the others will be the kind Lloyd has made to date for Associated Exhibitors.

Lloyd has one picture that requires about two weeks more work to complete and one other to produce before meeting his obligations under the old agreement. He will then start work on the new series.

GRiffITH, UNIVERSAL MANAGER IN CUBA

Beverly Griffith has just been appointed general manager of the Universal's Cuban exchanges, and supervising director of the several theatres on the island which Universal has leased for first-run showings of its pictures there. Mr. Charles King has resigned to accept another connection.

CENTURY TO MAKE HORSE COMEDY

Abe Stern, in charge of the Century comy plant in Los Angeles, has signed a "dark horse," which will be starred in a comedy to be directed by Jesse Robbins.

RELEASED SOON

Goldwyn will release within a short time its first Alice Duer Miller photoplay, an original story entitled "The Man with Two Mothers."

LUBITSCH LEAVES

Ernst Lubitsch left for Berlin recently, to resume work for the European Film Alliance. Lubitsch was originally supposed to visit Hollywood.

VAN LOAN TITLING

H. H. Van Loan has been retained by Hugh B. Evans, Jr., to write titles for "Noah's Child," the picture story which Evans produced with Roy Stewart and Marjorie Daw in the principal roles.

NAGEL OPPOSES AYRES

Conrad Nagel has been chosen to inter-pred the leading male role in "The Ordeal," Ages Ayres' new star picture, about to start production at Lasky's under the direction of William D. Taylor.

Bill Montana, Arthur Millet and Kingsley
Benedict are among those cast in Gay and Devilish," with Doris May just starting production at the R-C Studios.

William White and Lew Meehan are playing parts in "No Man's Gold," the current Roegill-Halperin production co-starring Maryon Aye and Bob Reeves.

Muriel Frances Dana, who plays "David, Junior" in "Hail the Woman," Thomas Ince's special production, has been cast to play an important role in Emmet Flynn's lately Fox vehicle, "A Fool There Was."

During his stage career, Roy Atwell, who is furnishing the comedy relief in "The Heart Specialist," starring Mary Miles Mil-ter, was the featured funny man with Anna Hold, Marie Cahill, Emma Trentini and other footlight stars.

AT LASKY'S

William de Mille will probably complete "Bought and Paid For" some time this week.

Constance Binney and May McAvoy both left early this week for hurried vacation trips to New York. They are expected back in six weeks. Miss Binney has just completed "The Sleepwalker," a reel-length picture, while Miss McAvoy's last vehicle was "Through a Glass Window."

George Melford is away with his company making "The Cat That Walked Alone," in which Dorothy Dalton is featured and Milton Sills and Wanda Hawley have important roles. Burlingame, Calif., is being utilized as a background for a number of scenes in England.

February 6th is the starting date for Wallace Reid's new Paramount picture, "The Dictator," in which Lila Lee will have the feminine lead. James Cruze will direct this play.

Jack Holt and Bebe Daniels will begin their co-starring vehicle, "Val of Paradise," on February 6th, with Joseph Henabery at the megaphone.

Preparations are under way for the production of "Blood and Sand" in which Rudolph Valentino will make his stellar debut for Paramount Pictures, the exact date of starting, however, has not yet been announced. May McAvoy, it is stated, will appear in the role of the wife and others will be announced shortly.

COMMUNITY MOTION PICTURES

It has been learned that a large number of churches, schools, philanthropic and patriotic organizations are giving weekly, monthly or semi-weekly motion picture entertainments. Several schools, notably those in Milwaukee, are sponsoring film entertainments every Saturday which the school children attend, paying a nominal admission which covers the rental of the film. The films selected are pure entertainment films, but clean and wholesome, any objectionable scenes being cut before showing.

Churches, Y. M. C. A.'s, Knights of Columbus, etc., are scheduling weekly film entertainments for their members.

OPENING OF FILM SERVICE AND REFERENCE LIBRARY

Harry Levey, president of National Non-Theatrical Motion Pictures, Inc., announces the opening of a new department—a film service and Reference Department.

The entire library of the Burton Holmes Travel Films, embracing 48 different countries, recently acquired by Mr. Levey, will be available for this purpose.

A looseleaf catalog giving description, location and length of each scene in National Non-Theatrical's film library is now being compiled.

FOX SPECIALS READY

Three Fox specials for the new season will be "Nero," "Monte Cristo" and "The Town That God Forgot."

Kitty Bradbury is included in the cast of "No Man's Gold," co-starring Maryon Aye and Bob Reeves, which Albert Rogell is directing.

Robert Fernandez and Cari Miller are among those cast in the new Charles Ray picture about to start production at the Charles Ray Studios.

U. C. I. ESTABLISHES AMERICAN UNIT

The Union Cinematografica Italiane of Rome, more familiarly known as the U. C. I., has established an American organization called Unity Pictures, Inc., composed of American and Italian capital.

Lucien C. Wheeler is actively interested in Unity Pictures.

R-C TO RELEASE BRITISH FILM

The I. F. A. of Berlin, Germany, is producing "Marie Antoinette."

BOB KERR

RECENT UNIVERSAL RELEASES

Late Universal releases are:

"Headin' West," featuring Hoot Gibson (five reels).

"Find Livingstone!" 4th episode of "With Stanley in Africa" featuring George Walsh and Louise Lorraine (two reels).

"Both Booths" (1-reel comedy).

"The Leather Pushers," Round two (2 reels).

International News No. 13 and 14.

"Little Miss Mischieft," featuring Baby Peggy (2 reels).

"Fighting Back" featuring Laura La Plante and Elmo Lincoln (2 reels).

At the conclusion of his tour Elmo Lincoln may make a series of two-reel wild animal films.

CABANNE CUTTING

William Christie Cabanne is cutting and editing "Beyond the Rainbow," his next recent R-C Production, which is scheduled for release in February.

Duchess De Lance, Lady Sackville and Lord and Lady Popham Young of Europe's titledom, recently appeared in a scene for "The Masquerader," Guy Ralts Post Initial cinema play which James Young is directing.

DOUG AS LEGENDARY CHARACTER

Douglas Fairbanks will not film the further adventures of Zorro for his next offering as has been previously announced. Instead he will make a costume feature dealing with the period of the Crusades and the early history of England, and called, temporarily, "The Spirit of Chivalry."

Fairbanks will appear as a purely legendary character against a background of historic scenes familiar to every man, woman and child the world over.

Allan Dwan, who will direct the new feature, has been conducting a research drive in the Los Angeles public library with Lotta Woods and Kenneth Davenport of the scenario department. This research campaign will continue until Fairbanks returns from New York. It is expected that the picture will be ready for spring release.

The story upon which Johnston McCulley is now working as a sequel to "The Mark of Zorro" will be held over for production after "The Virginian."

WESTERN PICTURES NOTES

The Rogell-Halperin Productions is working in Black Wolf Canyon making "No Man's Gold," co-starring 'Bob' Reeves and Maryon Aye, under the direction of Albert Rogell.

The Irving Cummings company, making "The Man from Hell's River," by James Oliver Curwood, will enroute home from Yosemite Park where some scenes were filmed. Interiors will be made at Universal City.

Lester Caneo is cast as a young physician in his forthcoming production, "The Pride of Terror Mountain." Scenes will be taken in Yosemite and in one of the lunker camps of the North. Production commenced this week on "The Four Hearts," with Dick Hatton. Leonard Wheeler is directing, with George Crocker at the camera.

CUT TO NINE REELS

Pathe will release "Matthias Sandor" in nine reels. The picture produced by Louis Nalpas in France was originally made in nineteen reels, and there is a possibility of its being released as a serial after it has played as a feature.

FILMS TO BOOST TRADE

Films showing the activities of American industries are to be produced by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, according to advances received by the National Association.

HAYS SIGNS CONTRACT

A contract between Will H. Hays and the producers and distributors covering Mr. Hays' services as head of a new producer-distributor organization for three years was signed recently.

MINTER WINS APPEAL

The U. S. District Court of San Francisco recently affirmed the decision of the lower court in awarding Mary Miles Minter a judgment of $4,252.56 against the American Film Co.

Edward Martindel, David Winter and George Cowl are portraying important roles in "The Glory of Clementina," Pauline Fredericks latest starring vehicle for R-C.

Alex Manuel, William Knight and Billy Fletcher are portraying principal roles in "Both Booths," the current Craig Hutchinson comedy under production at the "U." (Continued on page 15)

The Man on the Cover--An Impression

By Ted LeBerthon

"The sun set, but set not his hope;
Stars rose, his faith was earlier up."

For something like two years, John Griffith Wray has awaited the great opportunity. Coming to the Thomas H. Ince forces from the ranks of stage directors, he learned the technique of screen direction from the Culver City master craftsman; but he brought to the screen a poet's concept of beauty, a feel for emotional heights and depths, and a sound knowledge of dramaturgy.

After meeting Wray and later reviewing "Hail the Woman," I am convinced that he has not yet encountered the great opportunity, has not yet a story worthy of his high talents and intellectual scope. "Hail the Woman" proves that Wray is the logical successor to the late George L. Tucker, for both transformed melodrama stories into magnificent cinemas. Wray is worthy of directing a screen version of Kostanda's "Cyrano de Bergerac" or Hauptmann's "Sunken Bell" or Philip Moeller's "Moilers." But where is the producer with vision or courage enough to allow him to--perhaps, where is the audience for poetic, profound photodrama? One cannot but frown darkly upon popular taste--and the censors, when it is realized that here at last is a screen director capable of interpreting Theodore Dreiser's "The Girl in the Coffin" or the dramas of Wedekind.

For several months have been buried in the abysses of the night since so piously moving a drama as "Hail the Woman" has flickered across the ardent square, and I am convinced that indubitably the beauty, power, and pathos is intrinsic in the direction. Why, what divine wand touched Florence Vidor? What sublime elixir did she imbibe to reveal depths in her histriomancy never before glimpsed? Do not mistake me. Mrs. Vidor has always possessed character and sheer fineness and a presence that signified mental and spiritual scope, but never before discovered to us the dramatic surge that in "Hail the Woman" seemed like a sea held in leash—that at any moment might assail the skies.

I believe that many embers of histriomancy were stirred and blown to flames by the life-breath of the Wray genius, in the case of several of the players in "Hail the Woman." There can be little doubt but that the success of this photodrama will cause some lusty exhibitor bidding for future screen plays featuring Florence Vidor, and that in a lesser way Madge Bellamy and Lloyd Hughes will win approbation.

John Griffith Wray has the head of the thinker of Grecian antiquity, a high forehead surmounted by a shock of undulant brown hair, somehow lovable in character. His eyes are tranced and searching, but not in a disquieting way; humor lurks in them, and he smiles easily and often, in the manner of a sunny, unmeasured stream.

What strikes one after meeting him is the facile, unprompted flow of ideas which emanate from him. A man with an unusually wide and expressive vocabulary, his meanings are precise, his thoughts unequivocal. Thus articulate, he is never at a loss in spoken description, never laborious or obscure. You know exactly what he's driving at. Furthermore, he has to meet—and makes one feel easy afterward.

He has no illusions respecting the motion picture art, and believes that its greatest future lies in popular paths. But he does believe that the motion picture will be a great factor in mass development, and will be universal in its appeal in exact ratio to the expression of fundamental emotions—steering clear of those subtleties which flower in the regions of the intellect.

Having observed the works of other producing organizations, he maintains that Thomas H. Ince is still the Titan of producers, destined to play the most enduring melodies on the public heart-strings. To use Wray's own words, "Mr. Ince's superiority in the motion picture field is due to his at one-ment with his public; he seldom deceives himself. He knows what Jimmie and Lizzie and Aans want, and knows what things they hold most lovely and dear. But best of all he sticks to the principle of dramaturgy. He will not coquette with the narrative form nor flirt with allegory—neither will he be cast down, haunting realism. He stands solidly by sound, cumulative drama—and romance."

Wray is at present preparing to direct a Bradley King story in which Tyrone Power will have the leading role, again under the supervision of Mr. Ince.

Where will John Griffith Wray be five years from now? One might as well put the question to the sun, the moon or the stars. But I look to his breathing a rarer than Olympian atmosphere—if he is ever allowed to spread his pinions wide. Because the motion picture is essentially a popular form of entertainment, he will have to infuse his poetry into stories which touch the common heart, but unlike many conspicuous directors, it will not be because he cannot soar higher. Where they have ascended, he will have descended; their zeniths will be his nadir. He will be the making of many a cinema star.

Do not think for a moment that Wray is a tall-hatted bookkeeper or engages in any subliminal pursuits—although he was once a schoolmaster. He dresses plainly, eats lunch with anyone (he doesn’t even discriminate in the case of press agents or safe crackers) and never, never, never employs the grand gesture. In fact, I'm sure he doesn't believe in himself in any way approaching the degree in which his associates believe in him.

CHANGE IN STUDIO PERSONNEL

Several changes in his studio personnel were announced recently by Jesse L. Lasby. The Realart Studio has been renamed the Wilshire Studio to distinguish it from the Lasby Studio.

Frank E. Garbutt, until now manager of the Realart Studio, has been appointed special technical adviser to the Paramount production department and will be in charge of all of the company's laboratory work in Los Angeles and New York. Under his supervision a new and improved laboratory will be constructed to replace the present one.

Victor H. Clarke, formerly manager at the Long Island Studio, has been appointed manager of the Wilshire Studio.

John S. Robertson, who is returning shortly from England, will direct "Blood and Sand," Valentine's first Paramount starring vehicle.

BERANGER MAKING DUTCH PICTURE

George Beranger upon completion of "Sinister Street" in London, England, left for Harlem, Holland, where he is now at work upon Van der Veen's play, "Thou Shalt Not." In the cast are several of the foremost continental stage artists, including Jean Mosch, Paul de Groot, and Pierre Balleux. Ideal Films, Ltd., get three more from Beranger when he is through with the first of the Beranger series of features for Hollandia Filmfabriek.

Bert Lytell directed the stage drama in which Mary Alden first appeared.

SPECIAL CORPORATION FORMED

Yale University Press of New Haven will supervise the making of 100 reels of motion pictures, depicting American history. Production has been entrusted to The Chronicles of American Picture Corp., incorporated in New York with offices in New York City.

George Parrmy Day, treasurer of Yale University and president of Yale University Press, is president of the new company. Dr. Max Farrand, professor of American history at Yale, and Dr. Frank Ellsworth Spaulding, Sterling professor of school administration and head of the Department of Education at Yale, have been appointed editors-in-chief.

PATHE PLAYLET, "CONVICT 993," WITH IRENE CASTLE TO BE RELEASED

Pathé announces that the latest Pathe Playlet, "Convict 993," featuring Irene Castle and an all-star cast of players, will head the collection of short subject features and the one serial episodes scheduled for release the week of February 5th. Among those playing prominent roles in the offering are Helene Chadwick, Warner Oland, Paul Evertson, Harry Benham and J. H. Gilnour.

The first stage role of William Conklin was in "Her Majesty," starring Grace George and directed by William A. Brady.

Vernon L. Walker has been engaged to handle the camera for the Napoleon comedies under production at the Morris R. Schlank Studios.

AT THE R.C. STUDIOS

Doris May and company, under the direction of William A. Seiter, are starting upon their fourth production, entitled "Gay and Devilish."

Advance preparations are being made for the filming of "The Woman Breed," Pauline Frederick's next production immediately following the one on which she is now working. The African desert village in which much of the action takes place is now being designed and will be built on the R-C lot.

COMPLETE'S FIRST

Curran-Herbst Productions has just finished its first picture starring "Big Boy" Williams. The story is temporarily titled "Blaze Away," written by Bruce Boeister and directed by W. Hughes Curran. Molly Malone is seen opposite the star.

FOREIGN PRESENTATION FOR

Walter Wanger recently cabled Carl Laemmle from London asking that arrangements be made for the presentation at Covent Garden of "Pooch's Wives." Arrangements are under way for the Paris premiere.

The local premiere of "The Rosary," the Selig-Rock superproduction, is scheduled to take place soon at the Kinepha. Lewis Stone, Eugene Besserer and Ann May are prominent in the all-star cast. Bernard McConville wrote the original story, taking as his theme the stage play by Edward Rose. Jerome Storm directed.

Three episodes of the new animal serial, "Shadows of the Jungle," in which Philo McCollough plays a leading role opposite Grace Darmond, have been filmed at Warner Brothers Studio and sent East.

"TURN TO THE RIGHT"

"Rex Ingram has turned to that successful crook play of a few seasons ago, "Turn to the Right," for his latest screen expression. * * * Maurice Q. O'Hara has made an adaption which carries the fidelity of the spoken version, and Mr. Ingram has embroidered it with deft touches, providing happy balances, well-rounded group characters, sketches, and a subtle vein of humor. * * * —Motion Picture News.

"It is the exquisite combination of human interest and comedy, the blending, in fact, of all the tried-and-true elements essential to the success of drama that gives Rex Ingram's "Turn to the Right" the flattering distinction of being the photographic parallel to the great stage success. * * * "In the fine art of judging screen material, of discerning what deserves featuring and what should be subordinate, Mr. Ingram is an adept. * * * "The sympathy and harmony that mark the performance of the entire cast reflects credit again upon the director. —Moving Picture World.

"Turn to the Right" is Rex Ingram in a far different mood from "The Four Horsemen of the Caliph's Power." He turns from spectacle in the one case, and deep tragedy in the other, to crook melodrama and comedy, with distinction, ease and great success. * * * "In the handling of the material, which made "Turn to the Right" a big stage success, Mr. Ingram has demonstrated very great skill and understanding. * * * The cast is excellent. Its work shows the director's restraint and remarkable grasp of dramatic values."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

“THE SIN FLOOD”

(Goldwyn)

"Reversing the mechanics of dramatic composition, Director Lloyd has built a new idea in this picture. * * * The action moves speedily. Those who have been waiting to see what sort of a picture would follow "The Old Nest" and "Dangerous Curves Ahead" will not be disappointed in this new idea picture. —Exhibitors Trade Review.

"Concerning the theme of a picture, rarely does a hard-boiled reviewer find himself moved to an enthusiasm that demands superlatives for its expression. * * * "Goldwyn has done so fine a thing in presenting this theme, which is powerful to an extreme, although it makes the usual accepted idea of romance subservient to the main issue, that it is impossible to be moderate in its appraisal. —Moving Picture World.

"Goldwyn's picturization of the stage play, "The Deduce 'Synanodont,'"Henning Bergsen's wonderful drama, makes as dramatic and as humorous a piece of celluloid as has been seen in some time. * * * "Not a flaw can be found in the development of the story. The logic is absolutely convincing. Every one of the all-star cast gives a most intelligent interpretation. * * * —Motion Picture News.

"THE LANE THAT HAD NO TURNING"

(Paramount)

"It is a question whether this story would have been screened if Sir Gilbert Parker's name had not adorned it. "The Lane That Had No Turning" carries a fragrant title suggestive of romance and summertime, but it stops there, and what is revealed is a morbid depressive story. * * * "Agnes Ayres makes her first appearance as a star, and while she fails to reach emotional heights succeeds in registering her charming personality."—Motion Picture News. "Agnes Ayres starts upon her career as a full fledged Paramount star in a picturization of Sir Gilbert Parker's novel of the same name. Her first appearance as such is in a worthy introductory vehicle, having an appealing story, is well directed by Victor Fleming, who, with the scenarist, has capitalized upon the many opportunities the story offers, and is interpreted by a strong supporting cast. —Moving Picture World.

"The Lane That Had No Turning," the Paramount picture from the story by Sir Gilbert Parker, has two points of special interest—first, it is the premier starring vehicle of Agnes Ayres, and second, that it presents Theodore Kosloff in his first leading role, one which gives the young Russian pantomimist and screen actor an opportunity for almost unsuspected dramatic powers."—Exhibitors Herald.

Through Jess Smith, Charles Giblyn has signed the following for "A Woman's Woman."—Mary Alden, Balzac E. Herbert, Rod La Rue, Donald Hall, William H. Tinker, Louise Lee, Albert Hackett and Dorothy Mackull. A. B. V. Flower has been engaged as technical director. Don O'Brien is in charge of production.

Why Studios "Close Down"

It is both notable and significant that most of the studios which have NOT "closed down" during the last year have been regular clients of the Photoplay Sales Department of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation.

Four years ago we expressed the opinion that producers who consistently select their plays because of their intrinsic screenability, rather than because of their "literary" value, were destined to achieve and maintain financial success.

And now, four years later, we hold tenaciously and justifiably to the same opinion.

Nor have the producers who have regularly come to Story Headquarters for their stories had occasion to differ from that opinion. They have been too busy making good pictures for a market that is starving for good pictures to entertain the thought of "closing down."

It is not the policy of the Palmer Sales Department to urge the purchase of one story at a high price (just to make a sale), but rather to endeavor to select material that will make for continuous successful production.

"MRS. GRACE B. BROWNEL." Now and again a bit of cordial, sensible appreciation is received with thanks.

Gladstone Studios, Culver City, Calif., will consider handling original synopsis form, covering the following requirements: (1) Simple human stories such as can happen in every home, Deep, far-reaching, touching in their development, with simplicity of plot and depth of emotion. (2) Very strong, virile melodrama with unusual situation, hero and heroine acting in incisent. (3) Very bright, brilliant comedy dramas, telling a real story, and moving briskly to a natural conclusion. All of the above should have as much humor as can possibly be injected. Have no stars, but are featuring Richard Dix, Helene Chadwick, Cullen Landis, and can use five-reel dramas and comedy-dramas, co-featuring these players. Scripts should be sent to Paul Born, Gladstone Scenario Editor.

Fox Film Company, Hollywood, Calif., will consider synopsis of stories, either fiction or non-fiction for various stars as follows: Society drama for Shirley Mason; drama for Jack Gilbert; comedy-dramas and westerns for Tom Mix; Westerns or outdoor stories for Bill Russell and Baby Jones; and heavy dramas for William Furman and Dustin Farnum. All scripts should be addressed to O. E. Epstein, and if accepted, will be returned within a few days.

Chester Bennett, Production, United States, requires stories, either synopsis or ideas, suitable for Jane Novak. Must be something very good with new twists. Outdoor stories of the north woods type and snow scenes preferred. Scripts should be sent to the Scenario Editor, and if not accepted, will be returned within two weeks.

Metro Pictures Corp., 900 Cahuenga Ave., can use outdoor stories for Bert Lytell and light comedies or comedy-dramas for Viola Dana. These should be addressed to the Scenario Editor, and if not accepted, will be returned within thirty days.

I am taking the liberty of writing you to express my appreciation of your editorial, under the heading "A Few Observations," on the so-called film men who take advantage of the success of a big production to peddle off an inferior re-issue and in this connection, I am enclosing herewith copies of the few advertisements issued in connection with an old version of "Ten Nights in a Bar-room." As you are no doubt aware this company has just released a production made from L. Case Russell's screen version of this famous drama and I may add that this production has been a tremendous success here in the East where it has been shown in a few cities notably Providence, R. I.; Lawrence, Mass.; Reading, Pa.; Woonsocket, R. I.; Pawtucket, R. I. This success, of course, prompted the re-issue. In view of your courageous stand for the producer, I was sorry to hear of this small fortune in making new and worth while pictures, it occurred to the writer that this might prove of interest to you. Again thanking you for your editorial and with best wishes for your continued success, I am yours truly,

ARROW FILM CORP.
J. CHARLES DAVID, 2d, Director of Pub. & Adv. Dept.

Mr. Ford Classifies Us

Many of us are familiar with the fact that Henry Ford, noted manufacturer of a fairly famous little motor car, is president of The Dearborn Independent, a Michigan-published paper, given over to the furtherance of Mr. Ford’s interests through the spreading of Mr. Ford’s various but always strenuous propaganda. In this publication is featured a department headlined “Mr. Ford’s Page,” in which the “president’s” favorite sentiments are ordinarily set forth with dignity. In a recent issue he winds up a discourse upon the present general tendency of politicians to retire into private enterprise with the following observation upon the advent of former Postmaster General Will H. Hays into the motion picture industry.

“No doubt the movies need all the respectability that the name of Will Hays can bring to them, and no doubt Will Hays will need all of his respectability to keep what he has in the business he has undertaken. But if he can pull the movies out of the mud, if he can make them American, if he can drive out the men who are probably paying his salary and bring in men of character and cleanliness, he will have performed a big job, as big as the reformation of the postal service. Mr. Hays may have seen a great opportunity. It is there. But the perils are many. Let us hope that Mr. Hays pulls the movies out of the slime instead of letting them pull him in.”

Of course this attack is merely consistent with Ford’s recent stand against the Jewish race which is largely represented in our line of endeavor, as in every other. It is entirely unfair, however, that he should permit his business prejudice to extend over so much territory and although we have no desire to enter any such futile controversy, we do wish, in passing, to state that our quota of the Semitic people includes many artistic as well as commercial geniuses and not a few human beings whose acquaintance is a privilege and an elevation. Moreover, we doubt that there lives the man who can gracefully denounce any race or any class even if he be a philanthropic financier; nor has Mr. Ford, much as we admire certain of his purposes, yet justified a public expression upon anything artistic.

Whatever motives may have actuated Mr. Hays in his entrance into picturedom are naturally unknown to us. The results of his affiliation with the third industry will only prove them to be worthy or otherwise; but we are familiar enough with the former Postmaster General’s reputation to realize that his “respectability,” so unquestionably discussed and questioned here, would never lead him to follow Mr. Ford’s surprising advice to cut his employers’ throats with treason. Neither do we doubt the sincerity behind Hays’ published statement of his belief in the art and honor of the average picture producer.

No one knows better than Mr. Ford that it would be difficult for any class to surround itself with a more repulsive “slime” than that in which our commercial brothers abide in comfort, growing decidedly fat with material reward; while any open minded individual must recognize the unapproachable amount of light which we have given, largely in true unselfishness, to a not overly well treated world.

Mr. Ford, you have accomplished unusual things, but you have not achieved sufficiently to undertake the ordering of the universe or any very extensive portion of it. Both your obvious raps and more subtle innuendos in this paragraph pass unappreciated in an agreeable sense. We consider them a hostile and untimely aggression.

—F. R.

The Picture World Loses a Friend

As this paper goes to press, there comes word of the shocking tragedy, which has today robbed the film industry of one of its best-loved pioneers, an unquestionable artist and a leader in all progressive picture movements, William D. Taylor. That a hideous crime was responsible for his death makes the startling intelligence even sadder and provides an element of bitterness in the hearts of those to whom he was dear, for they have known him to be a character deserving of life’s greatest happiness and death’s most-gracious form and they realize that, as a profession, they have need of his kindly, steadily forceful spirit.

We call to mind the fact that, something over a year ago, William Taylor offered the feature address at the Memorial held for Robert Harron, Olive Thomas, and other picture dead, whose untimely demises had given us such a series of spiritual jogs. Capable, compelling and in the prime of life, his sympathy in that address was a thing of rare beauty. In it, with the utmost of delicacy, he touched the tragic notes in the violent passings of the two youths who had had all life and accomplishment before them, while from his stock of supreme tenderness he pointed his moral revealing with the philosophy of a thoughtful and clear-visioned soul, the light in all things as he saw it.

This afternoon that unusual man lies materially dead, murdered while his back was turned by an unknown hand whose wicked blow was guided by a distorted outlook. Spiritually our friend and leader can only progress and in a sense he will be forever by our sides in the endeavor to which his life was given. This we know to be true although for a while, of course, his presence in a more understandable form will be poignantly missed.

After that, William Desmond Taylor will find his truest place in our hearts as an inexpressibly sweet impression, a gift which will, in days to come, lend us the unprejudiced, uncompromising courage that was his.
Film Capital Production Notes

RAY JOINS UNITED ARTISTS

The alliance of Charles Ray with United Artists has been recently announced, and United Artists now includes Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford, Charles Chaplin, Alla Nazimova, Charles Ray and George Arliss. Perhaps the most interesting feature of his new step is the fact that, in the coming year, Mr. Ray will make only two pictures. He has one more production to complete for First National.

TWO VISUAL SYMPHONIES COMPLETED

Dudley Murphy has completed two of his single reel Visual Symphonies and is preparing to make "The Flying Dutchman," which will be timed to run with Wagner's music. "Dans Macabre," with Adolf Boim in the leading role, is the first of the series.

CHRISTIE MAKING COMEDY IN SNOW

Al Christie is in the deep snows of Truckee, California, making a Northwest Mounted Police comedy, entitled "Cold Feet," with Viora Daniel in the featured role.

CHANGE TITLE

The working title of Carey Wilson's South Sea Island romance, which Goldwyn is to produce, has been changed from "Under the Skin" to "Captain Blackbird." This change was made to avoid confusion with "Brothers Under the Skin," a Peter B. Kyne story, now in production at the Goldwyn Studios.

AT UNIVERSAL

"Peterman" has been completed with Herbert Rawlinson as the star of the story, directed by Tod Browning. Barbara Bedford, George Hernandez, William Courtwright, Gerald Pring, Willis Marks, Ed Tolton, George Webb, Helen Stone and Betty Elision support the star. The new Craig Hutchinson comedy is to be called "The Bottle Baby." Three new stories are ready for production. "Top O' the Mornin'" Gladys Walton's next starring vehicle; Louis Joseph Vance's "The Black Bag," Herbert Rawlinson's next story, and "Out of the Silent North," by Drago, which has been selected as Frank Mayo's next starring picture.

AT UNITED STUDIOS

Norma Talmadge's production of the "Duchess de Langeais," will be completed in about ten days. Dorothy Phillips has gone to San Diego to begin work on the exteriors of her starring production, "The Soul Seeker," which Allen Holubar is producing and directing. "Trouble" is the newly chosen title of the Jacki Coogan production recently completed. Constance Talmadge will start a new picture in about three weeks. Jane Novak has recovered from a temporary illness and is preparing for her next starring picture under Chester Bennett's direction.

NEW UNIT AT JOHNSON STUDIO

R. V. Quick, president of the Dick Johnson & Co. Studio, is in San Francisco for the purpose of arranging negotiations for a new unit to produce five-reel stories featuring Patricia Palmer. Work will begin shortly on one and two-reel comedies under the direction of Dick Johnson, assisted by Cedric C. Fields.

FIRST NATIONAL NOTES

Dick Jones, director-in-chief of the Bennett forces, is making progress in the production of "Suzanne," starring Mable Normand. John M. Stahl's "One Clear Call," and Anita Stewart's "Rose O' the Sea," will both be finished at about the same time as the Lewis Milestone pictures.

Hope Hampton's recently completed photoplay, "The Light in the Dark," is now being edited in New York. Her next production will be "The Isle of Dead Ships."

Roy Del Ruth has just finished filming "On Patrol," the Mack Sennett-Billy Bevan two-reel comedy. Mildren June plays the leading feminine role with Bevan, and Newpie Morgan is the police captain.

AT VITAGRAPH

Director David Smith started production this week on "The Shaughraun," an Irish story from the play by Dion Boucicault and originally produced at the Drury Lane Theatre, London.

Robert Enslinger is directing Earle Williams in "Parkington's Widow," from a Richard Harding Davis story.

Edward Jose is scheduled to start this week upon "The Magnificent Ambersons," casting for which is nearing completion.

Larry Semon has finished his latest comedies and expects to start presently on his next. Semon's new studio is rapidly being rushed to completion.

Willian Duncan has but a few more days of work on "Man Hunters," his latest production.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Harold Lloyd, who returned to Los Angeles recently from New York, resumed work Wednesday morning and has been busy this week taking shots at Santa Monica for his comedy tentatively titled "Who Hesitates."

Harry "Snub" Pollard has commenced production of a court house picture, Marie Mosquini heads the support. Charles Parrott is directing.

Two more comedies are ready for shipment, "Full of Pep," with Harry "Snub" Pollard, and "Our Gang," the kiddie comedy, directed by Fred Newmeyer, both of which were shown this week in preview. "Call the Witness," a travesy on easy divorce methods starring "Snub" Pollard has been released.

The flying field at the Roach Studio is now completed and the first try out took place this week when Harold Lloyd and "Snub" Pollard with Hal Roach as pilot, took a plunge into the blue. Charles Parrott is engaged in writing a flying comedy for "Snub" Pollard, which will be produced in the near future. E. V. Morris, head of the electrical department, installed the apparatus, which will be used by the comedy companies.

The latest Harold Lloyd re-issued release is entitled "That's Him."

Charles Chaplin's comedies, "A Dog's Life," "Sunshyde," "Shoulder Arms" and "A Day's Pleasure," are to be reissued and released monthly in succession, beginning with February.
Current Reviews

"BOOMERANG BILL"

Grauen's

Cosmopolitan Productions has been doing rather weird things to Cosmopolitan magazine stories of late and the regime of complaint is in order. The public doesn't relish any more and that we can't force it to was proven during last year's famine when a lack of meritorious productions decreased cinema attendance to an alarming degree. "Boomerang Bill," Doty Hobart's screen version of a crook character sketch silhouetted by Jack Boyle against unfortunate circumstances, was criticized during our recent review of it as being material beneath Lionel Barrymore's dignity. We readily realized that the chance remark covered the situation as not only the role to which the star is assigned, and the situation given the plot, but also the general type of theme set forth in it do not justify Barrymore's appearance here. The story told in so few paragraphs by Boyle has been elongated into a feature subject by padding, the cutters have made long and unwarranted gaps in the action, and the titles are no more than a substitute by Barrymore, who nevertheless fails to create a real character due to the fact that he has to "stall" through two-thirds of his footage or between the few pieces of real action in his part.

Marguerite Marsh is seen to advantage in Annie, a hold-up man's inspiration and ruin. A cunning Chinese baby plays Billy the champion at two years and a picturesque little Oriental does the child at fifteen. Why Minna Retkar's round-eyed and anything but chinky, was cast "in between" the two mentioned is one of the unfathomable errors to which we are doomed continually.

Margaret Seddon, Frank Shannon, Matthew Betts and Charlie Fong play other roles well in this Paramount picture.

"THE GLORIOUS FOOL"

California

A couple of Mary Roberts Rinehart stories, a Goldwyn scenario writer (J. G. Hawks in this instance), much elaboration upon every little and we have "The Glorious Fool," a more entertaining than "meaty" dramatic comedy with no particular suspense or noticeable climax, although the inevitable final ensemble is much in evidence at the finish. The direction by E. Mason Hopper has seen to an otherwise satisfactory production and the title writer has claimed a lacking situation or so, while the cast passes creditably; therefore things might be much worse. John Mestall's photography is standard. Although there is little or nothing of the idea of the title role, we'll venture a random shot that it is filled and Bradbury Matthau, who is Richard Dix, and Billy Grant, an invalid millionaire, is quite attractive despite his swathing bathrobes. Comedy, however, is not necessarily Dix's forte.

Helene Chadwick is too typical if anything in Jane Brown, Billy's little nurse, but she rounds out the romance, a worthy understaking and a popular one.

George Cooper provides one of the play's high lights in a really minor role, Al, a delinquent father. His sheepish reform is a work of art.

Vera Lewis, Kate Lester, Otto Hoffman and John Lince are excellent hospital types; and Theodore Von Eltz, Frederic Vroom, Lillian Langston and Patricia Palmer complete the cast.

"STARDUST"

Kinema

If Fannie Hurst entertained the idea that Hope Hampton Productions intended to film her widely read novel, "Stardust," when they use its camouflaged ownership rights to the title which it has seen fit to tack on to a mediocre, done-to-death plot of Anthony Paul Kelly's concoction, then we congratulate her upon resorting to law to repair the damage to her reputation which will follow the release of this picture. It is granted that many intensely interesting novels must undergo radical changes in their screen adaptions, but when the revamping includes not only the situations and backrounds, but also the plot and theme, somebody is holding both the reading public and the author an unacceptably insult. Even the now-so-popular pan-handle, "suggested by," fails to save the "remains." All of Miss Hurst's character motives, as well as her action, have been snowed under in the picturization of her story without any particularly meritorious result. In fact, the photoplay has little but its title to attract.

Careless cutting in places has injured what may have been a very fair piece of direction by Hobart Henley. The photograpy is uneven.

Hope Hampton naturally plays Lily Becker, whom she makes into an average screen heroine with few noticeable errors. Thomas Clemens, the leading male role, an entire stranger to Miss Hurst, by the way, is done with apparent thought by James Rennie, while Albert Penny, Lily's husband, has been degenerated into a caricature by Noel Tares.

Thomas Maguire, Mary Foy, Charles Mussett, Vivian Ogden, Edna Rose, George Hamilton, Ashley Buck, Gladys Wilson and Charles Wellesly, fill other bona fide and imaginary positions.

First National distributes "Stardust."

"NANCY FROM NOWHERE"

Clune's

Reclart's current Daniels starring vehicle, "Nancy from Nowhere," has more of pep than of novelty in its makeup and less of the former than has been characteristic of this ingene's efforts. Its melodrama will probably appeal to the more easily satisfied and the plot is lucid if hackneyed in all respects.

Chester Franklin's direction is fairly consistent and Douglas Doty's scenario from the original by Grace Dray and Katherine Pinkerton is done carefully enough.

Bebe Daniels does not always succeed in carrying a picture and she misses to a degree in this one. Playing Nancy, an orphan slavey who runs away to nice Romance only to turn naively back to horror when she is told that her love will only hurt her sweetheart, she is not entirely convincing, largely because she isn't fundamentally the unsophisticated type. Anyway Miss Daniels is a comedienne. The roles and gowns of Lillian Gish do not hang smoothly upon her differently attractive person.

Edward Sutherland plays the juvenile opposite the star.

Vera Lewis and James Gordon put over some invaluable "hokum" melodrama as the repulsive Kelbys.

Myrtle Steadman, Edward Martindel and Alberta Lee are capital in Miss Holliday, her father and housekeeper.

Helen Holly is also included in the list of players.

LAURA ANSON

"The Glorious Fool" will get safety "by"; it is not, at that, an unusual picture from any standpoint.

DRESSER WITH FREDERICK

Louise Dresser, who was recently engaged to appear with Pauline Frederick in the latter's R.C. production, "The Glory of Clemens," directed by Emile Chautard, will be making her first experience under the pitiless glare of studio lights. She declares she is enjoying the work very much. For years Miss Dresser has been a favorite on the vaudeville and musical comedy stage, but this is her debut in films. With her husband and son, Jack Gardner, Miss Dresser has been spending the winter in Southern California.

CLIFTON AND SMITH TO MAKE SEA STORY

Leigh Smith leaves the west coast presently to join Elmer Clifton, who is in the East making arrangements for the filming of a whaling vessel story. It is expected that four months will be required in the making of the photoplay, scenes for which will be shot in the Carribbean Sea and at New Bedford, Mass., where an old whaling vessel will be chartered. Mr. Smith is at present casting.

Little Richard Daniels, who played a part in Vitagraph’s production of “The Little Minister,” has been cast in David Smith’s new picture, “The Shaughraun,” starting production at Vitagraph.

Scotty King, who has just finished two pictures with the Commonwealth Motion Picture Productions is now playing a heavy role with Josephine Hill in “The Dominating Eyes,” a five reel western drama, which is being produced by the same company.

Mrs. Clover Roscoe, eastern newspaper and magazine writer, is assisting Harry Brand with the publicity for Norma and Constance Talmadge at United Studios. Mrs. Roscoe is a sister of Malcolm S. Boylan, publicity director of Universal City.

Kathryn McGuire is impersonating Anice Bartholm in the Universal-Jewel filming of “That Lass O’ Lowrie’s,” which is Priscilla Dean’s present starring vehicle.

Miss McGuire was seen recently in a principal role in “Playing with Fire,” a Universal attraction starring Gladys Walton.

BURSTON SIGNS LEDERER

Otto Lederer, who is completing an important role in “Hungry Hearts” for Goldwyn, and who also appears in Norma Talmadge’s current production, “The Duchesse de Longeais,” has just been engaged by Burston Productions to play the character lead under the direction of W. S. Van Dyke.

SHANNON IN SPOKEN DRAMA

Ethel Shannon has been engaged to play in “The Silent Witness” at the Raymond Theatre, Pasadena. Miss Shannon recently returned from San Francisco, where she played in stock at the Alcazar Theatre.

TILDEN WITH TULLY

Milano Tilden, personal stage manager for Guy Bates for eight years, has arrived at United Studios as general production aide to Richard Walton Tully, who is making the picturization of “The Masquerader,” with Mr. Post as star.

California Truman is very ill at her home with pneumonia.

Francesca Billington will play with Earle Williams in “PARKINSON’S WIDOW,” at Vitagraph, under the direction of Robert Ensinger.

Gordon Pollock has succeeded Bert Glennon as cameraman for “Carry the Race,” with the Mission Film Corporation.

Jack Rethaw was recently appointed assistant general manager of the West Coast Theaters, Inc., chain of theaters.

Les Maniers has been engaged to assist Director Bert Ensinger in the Earle Williams production of “PARKINSON’S WIDOW.”

Vivian Osborne has been engaged by International through Jess Smith for Frank Borzage’s latest production, “The Good Provider.”

William Condon, Jean O’Rourke and George Ward will be seen presently in the prologue of “Kissed,” starring Marie Prevost.

Henry Murdock, Harry Edwards, and Billy Fletcher are playing prominent roles in “Cold Feet,” the current Al Christie comedy.

BARBARA CASTLETON and Charles Richmond are playing in the Millerie special, now in process of construction at the New York Fox Studios.

Henry Hebert, James Farley, Edward Cecil and Bobbie Mark are included in the cast of “The Shaughraun,” which David Smith is filming at Vitagraph.

Kathleen Ardelle has been engaged to play opposite Owen Moore in “A Previous Engagement,” the tentative title of his next picture for Selznick.

Maude Emery and Helen Howard are cast for two important roles in the Vitagraph production, “The Shaughraun,” under the direction of David Smith.

Ward Caulfield, George French, Tom Dempsey, Fred Hueston and Harry Archer, are playing in support of Viora Daniel in the forthcoming Al Christie comedy entitled, “Cold Feet.”

WALTON PERSONAL APPEARANCE TOUR

Gladys Walton is going to visit Portland, Oregon, her home town on a personal appearance tour, upon the conclusion of which she will return to Universal City to begin work on a comedy-drama as yet untitled.
Tights," "The Man Tamer," and "Rich Girl,
Poor Girl," are among her productions.

EARLE GOES EAST

Ferdinand Earle went East recently to straighten out the final destinies of "The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam," his recently completed cinemplay.
Mr. Earle has already begun preparations to film "Faust." In his research he will consider Willes Wilde's "Faust," Stephen Phillips' "Faust," and Marlowe's "Faust," as well as the version of Goethe, that has found its way both to spoken drama and to grand opera.

THREE FIRST NATIONAL COSTUME DRAMAS

Three costume dramas for future First National release are now being made in local studios; Norma Talmadge in "The Duches de Langeac" at United Studios; Mabel Normand in "Suzanne," a romantic comedy play of early California at Bennett's; and Maurice Tourner's "Lorna Doone" at the Ince Studio.

Mona Kingsley is back in New York, after completing an important part in "The Dust Flower," the Basil King story recently completed at the Goldwyn Studio. Miss Kingsley recently appeared on the New York stage in "My Lady Friends" and "The Tailor Made Man."

BURTON HOLMES FILMS FOR SCHOOLS

Harry Levey, president of National Non-Theatrical Motion Pictures, Inc., announces the release this week for school use of the entire United States series of Burton Holmes films. The series numbers twenty-six reels on History, Geography, Civics and Industries of the United States. By means of such films the Child not only "sees America first," but learns something about the industries of this country, the National Forests and Parks and how people in other sections live and work and play.

There are edited and titled reels on the following subjects: "The Cliff Dwellers of America," "Grand Canyon of Arizona," "Felli-ing Big Trees in the Giant Forests of California," "Summer Days near San Diego," "Going Some in San Francisco," "The Fire

GLENN HUNTER’S PICTURE TO BE CALLED “THE CRADLE-BUSTER”

The title of the first of the series of boy pictures starring Glenn Hunter, which was first announced as “Apron-Strings,” has been changed to “The Cradle-Buster.” The second Tuttle-Waller Production for Mr. Hunter will be known as “Stage-Door Johnnie.” Work on this picture will be started soon after Mr. Hunter returns from Boston and Philadelphia where he is now playing with Billie Burke in Booth Tarkington’s “The Intimate Stranger.”

“The Cradle-Buster” and “Stage-Door Johnnie” are both comedy-dramas from the pen of Frank Tuttle, who was formerly associated with the Famous Players scenario department, where he adapted several successes for the screen, notably “The Conquest of Canasa.” Besides acting as author and producer, Mr. Tuttle will direct all of the Glenn Hunter photoplays.

Fred Waller, who has charge of the photography in this series, was also recently identified with the Famous Players. There he built up a reputation for his special camera and true work on “Iceception,” “Peter Ibbetson,” “Footlights,” “The Golem” and other photoplays.

SEELING COMPLETING OBENCHAIN FILM

“The Man in a Million,” the Charles R. Seeling production starring Ralph R. Obenchain, is nearing completion and will be released by February 10th. The release prints are being made by the Rothacker-Alger Laboratories. Distribution will be made by Mr. Seeling from his Los Angeles office.

Mr. Seeling in the last few months, has received numerous offers to make a picture, but only gave his consent when he found it necessary to raise further funds to keep on with the fight in defense of Mrs. Obenchain.

Ruby Rae is interpreting the part of Madalyn Obenchain, and Bill Horne, an important detective role.

STEAM HEATING PLANT FOR UNITED STAGES

M. C. Levee, President of United Studios, is in consultation with engineers, who have been commissioned to draw plans for the installation of a steam-heating plant, that will provide warmth for the six stages at United. These stages provide more than 92,000 square feet of space. One stage is 200 by 60 feet, one is 200 by 75, three are 150 by 60 feet each, and the great stage is 300 by 125 feet.

REJECT CENSOR PLAN

Suggestions that Fort Worth, Texas, should have a paid censor, were disregarded by the Board of City Commissioners when it was voted that the position should not be created.

BUYS “UNDER TWO FLAGS”

Quida’s “Under Two Flags,” has been purchased by Universal for Phisella Dean.

E. G. Dyer, who has been engaged in filming one-reel novelties for Weedy Bird Productions, has arranged for the release through Pacific Film Company of six recently completed pictures. There still remain six more to film on the first contract.

INDEPENDENT ELIMINATES “MIDDLERMAN”

“The independent producers who used to make pictures for state-right distribution, were exterminated by the rainbow’s end,” says Mr. E. B. Hanscom, secretary of the recently founded Independent Producers Distribution Syndicate. Therefore independent producers could never be sure of any method whereby they could dispose of their product profitably; in fact, in most cases the producer did not know what to do with his picture when he had it successfully completed, and therefore he usually turned it over to some distributing organization on the straight percentage basis, and in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, he did not get back more than a mighty small percentage of his production cost, although the distributor perhaps realized a small fortune on his picture. Consequently it is a common belief that picture producers are making a sizeable loss on their pictures. The securing of a checking dollar motion picture theaters that are being built in great numbers throughout the world are paying the greatest part of their earnings for film rental—and those earnings must be immense.

“Where is that money going?”

“The theaters are crying that the film rentals are too high; exchanges are going out of business daily, crushed by the high prices they have to pay for royalties on state-right; and the independent producers are going out of business daily because they are receiving no returns on their negatives.

“Where is the money going?”

Mr. Hanscom, in a statement addressed to all independent producers and all state-right buyers, announced that the distributing syndicate formed to market independent productions, with its headquarters in Los Angeles, has solved this problem by eliminating the middlemen and getting the producers and state-right buyers in direct touch with each other by enabling the exchanges to buy their pictures for a lower price than they were forced to pay heretofore, yet allowing the producer greater returns.

The success of this new “direct from producer to buyer” plan is also pointed as enabling the producer to make his contract direct with the exchanges and collect the money direct; while the Syndicate, acting as distributors for independent producers, is merely doing the actual work and advancing the actual expenses necessary for successful distribution.

This organization is said to be complete enough that the producer has nothing further to do but to picture and collect the money—having always direct control over his negative and all contracts—while the officers of the distributing syndicate are sending their salesmen on the road, getting out posters, slides, lobby photos, press books and prints on each picture; advancing the money, and all these, for a small percentage of the gross receipts of all old fifty-fifty basis.

“The Independent Producers Distributing Syndicate is indeed the rainbow’s end for which we were chasing for many years,” have said Mr. Caldwell of the Commonwealth Productions; Mr. Hiron, formerly of the Bob Horner Productions; Mr. Fish, Mr. De Gray, Mr. Meyers and other independent producers who have familiarized themselves with this new plan.

Mr. Lloyd B. King, sales manager of the Independent Producers Distributing Syndicate, announced that he is going on a three months’ sales tour, leaving February 15th. He will visit all exchanges and sell all pictures accepted by his company on or before the 16th of February.

GUNNING GETS ANOTHER SERIES

Robert E. Welsh of Wild Gunning, Inc., stated recently that organization would distribute a series of four Wray Physical Productions. The first will be “The Madness of Love” and the second is being edited.

Ince’s “The Brotherhood of Hate” company, directed by Lambert Hillyer, returned this week from nearly a month on location at Sonoma, in Northern California. Heavy snow interfered with their work during the final few days. The principals accompanying the party were Lloyd Hughes and Margaret Mitchell in Motion Pictures.

Thomas H. Ince’s next picture featuring Douglas MacLean will be an original, as yet untitled, by Bradley King. It will enter production within the coming two or three weeks.

Horse Williams is busy assembling an all-star cast for “Finding Home,” which will soon be filmed under the direction of John Guillermin.

Del Andrews is cutting Thomas H. Ince’s comedy special, “The Hottentot,” which was recently completed with Douglas MacLean, Madge Bellamy and Raymond Hatton in leading roles. It will be released by Associated First National.

C. B. Clair’s second independent production, “When the Devil Drives,” was completed this week under the direction of Paul Scardon.

DE GRASSE ON THE “YOUNG ART”

Consider the actor in pictures and his side of the story. In the “young art” the director often has been an all-powerful being, bending story and action to meet his personal approval. But in the changing order of things the independent producer has made way.

“In the enlargement of motion picture making it is getting to be less of a one-man job,” says deGrasse. “In the first days of ‘movies’—and that’s what they were then—the director often was the author, art director and general czar. Frequently there was a man who had written the story or screenplay—carrying story and ‘business’ in his head to be doled out as each scene demanded.

“The result of this democratized power was a picture lacking contrasts in its human elements. The natural differences in character and action that would be found in a group of men and women were lost by directorial molding to one-man sameness. I actually saw a picture held up for an hour one day while the director was instructing an inveterate smoker how to hold his cigar! It was thus all through the action—the director sent us through each episode as he thought it should be done. The result was that all character shadings and contrasts were lost. We were unnatural and colorless.

“In more modern methods directors encourage actors to go through scenes first with their own interpretations. We are urged to be at ease and natural. The director closely observes these rehearsals and makes suggestions. We are instructed in the effects wanted and treated as beings with helpful intelligence rather than so many automatons awaiting directorial strings. The actor who has to be coached through each bit of action is rapidly disappearing (from pictures). When the rainbow is now a business of experts and departments the better films are the product of many minds. Intelligent conferences are taking the place of the megaphone.”

Andrew Arbuckle has been cast in Victor Schertzinger’s first two pictures to be made at Santa Barbara, beginning about February 14th.

THERESA DRAY

SCHENCK REMARKS ON SEX PICTURES

Producer Joseph M. Schenck, who is now starring Norma Talmadge in “The Duchess of Langeais,” and who recently finished supervising the filming of Constance Talmadge’s “The Divorcée,” for future First National release, has a few pertinent remarks to make regarding the so-called “sex picture.”

“Very much has been said on the subject of ‘sex’ in pictures,” remarks Mr. Schenck. “But there exists a confusion in the minds of many regarding the definition of sex. A great many think that the word sex is synonymous with lasciviousness. This is not true.

“The sex picture will continue to lead in presentation on the screen. But the salacious picture will not be tolerated.

“There is an appeal of sex in everything. The cleanest and most wholesome love story is based on the attraction between opposite sexes—the love of a man for a maid. The very world itself and everything that goes on upon it has sex as a foundation. But it is not necessary to treat the appeal of sex in a vulgar or offensive way.”

The third Ben Wilson-Neva Gerber production, “Impulse,” is shortly to be released.

Laura Anson, leading lady for Monroe Salisbury, recently arrived in town, having made the trip from San Francisco on the initial trip of the new Fageol Bus Line.

“Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Goldwyn,连同他们的儿子，坐在他们豪华的汽车里，行驶在宽敞的街道上，他们身后是成群的粉丝和媒体。”

Out on Santa Monica Boulevard, at a point where that thoroughfare emerges from clanging populous side streets and bisects the vast expanse of level land between the sea and the foothills, a group of men are making a new kind of motion picture. For several years, each of these men has envisioned an ideal; in some inscrutable manner, they were brought together not so long ago—and founded the Mission Film Corporation upon their common beliefs and aspirations.

In practically every other motion picture enterprise ever inaugurated, the primary and final consideration has been the achievement of a commercial success. The Mission Film Corporation, according to its founders, purposes to likewise achieve a commercial success—but this is not its sole nor by any means its primary motive or raison d’être.

The aims of this new and distinctly unique motion picture concern are most clearly outlined and defined by Clarence Geldert, the president, a man prominently identified for the last half dozen years with the Famous Players-Lasky organization. In his own words, “the Mission Film Corporation will make photoplays that are entertainment plus, and it is in what this plus quality implies that its purpose so radically differs from the general run of producing organizations.

“We intend,” he explains, “to fill two long recognized needs: One by making films plays especially for children—in which we will engage none but child players; the other by making photodramas which touch upon the most vital problems affecting the present and next generations of humankind.

“There are certain fundamental problems which are encountered by all men and women. Life is sometimes grim, inflexible, harsh—and many of us are beaten down, mainly because we lack some helping hand, some guiding philosophy. Unless Mission Films can awaken the rarer qualities in humans, and unless each and every one of our cinemas sends a major portion of its audiences home with something to think about—something that helps make life a little sweeter and easier to live—we shall feel that we have failed in our purpose.

“But such failure is well nigh impossible. My associates and I have tried hard to look deeply into the heart of life, to glimpse those things which touch the lives of humanity in the mass.

“We are not going to preach; we have no sect or cult or dogma to espouse or expound. But we are disgusted with the unnaturalness and triviality of the majority of photoplays—as not being true to the facts of life as most people see life, and as having little character, artistry, social significance or other excuse for their celluloid existence.

“We believe that Mankind is essentially religious and while we will espouse no particular sect, we will refrain from the sort of irreverence or satire that makes religion a farce, the institution of marriage a mock-craft, and common decency a dead issue.

“We further hold that the doings of professional crooks and various underworld characters are of too slender interest to receive much attention by a major portion of humanity, from cradle to grave, has no contact with this unfortunate and pathetic element. We will take our stand which lets our photodramas on the common ground of every day existence, with its struggles, trials, hopes, fears, loves, envies, prejudices. Here is the chief battleground of the world.

“Our photodramas will be based on the romances of the boys and girls who will be the guardians of Tomorrow’s homes. We will observe the highest aesthetic and artistic traditions and the soundest principles of dramaturgy.

“Humor is the kind that has our national flavor, and the pathos intrinsic to our native land and life, will be strong like varicolored beads upon the golden strings of drama, and retouched with the brushes of purpose and meaning.”

Mr. Geldert believes that the type of motion picture life the Mission organization will evolve will be universal in its appeal and may be shown to non-theatrical audiences as well as in cinema theaters—in schools, colleges, clubs, churches and anywhere where people gather. A standard is purposely which will guarantee that Mission Films may be shown to grown-ups and children alike in all localities without there being the slightest violation of accepted ethics or good taste. Also, it is intended to produce pictures of so high a character and significance that they will live for several years—as against the ephemeral career of the average program feature.

The pictures for children will be based on myths, legends and fairy tales of a type that clothe high ideals of conduct, thereby laying a foundation for future concepts and values. The first will be based on one of the tales of Hans Christian Andersen, and production will be commenced soon.

The founders of the Mission Film Corporation besides Mr. Geldert are Ernest Traxler, for two years production manager at Universal City and four years with Famous Players-Lasky—whose position with the Mission is that of general manager, Leon Rice, a singer of international renown, who was also quite a figure in the business end of the entertainment world, and Richard Wayne, erstwhile leading man in many important cinema productions, his engagements being with Goldwyn, Ince, Metro, Fox, and Lasky.

They have about finished production upon their first feature photodrama, "Carry On the Race." An all-star cast includes such excellent players as Margaret Loomis, Winter Hall, Lilian Leighton, Richard Wayne and Katherine Murphy. Clarence Geldert is directing. Mr. Geldert will be remembered as the co-director of Thomas Dixon's "The Fall of a Nation." He assisted D. W. Griffith in the production of "Intolerance" and was especially engaged by Cecil B. DeMille to assist in the direction of "Joan the Woman." The Mission organization has an untraveled road before it; it is consecrated to an ideal, to one of those high and rare dreams which but few ever glimpse—and which fewer follow.
A polite, yet magnetic and oh ever so charming a little duo are within our sunny borders in the persons of one Florence Mills, age seven and one Francis Erdman, age ten.

It let it be known to all before we proceed further that they are ardent followers of Torpsichore; that Florence has pretty, pale, and playful blue eyes, short ringleted curls the color of wild honey, a complexion like unto the blush of a peach, and the freshness of a rose after rain. She altogether inclines towards a certain plumpness, and makes a gaily picturesque little figure with a saucily turned red tam o’ shanter, a square cut red broadcloth coat and an abbreviated skirt of velvet the color of night. Little patent leather pumps and golf hose set off the finely moulded limbs and complete a picture that is at the same time a poem.

As for Francis, sh!—that’s the rub, for he essays a camel’s hair coat and a swagger stick and a swankish gait and tweed knickerbockers—to say nothing of an olive and old rose complexion and a manner of speech that caused me to recall a certain equivocal little page in a novel written by one Théophile Gautier that has delighted merry, naughty folk for many, yes ever so many foolish moons. His reticent nose and straight chestnut locks give him the piquancy of a gamin and an aspect of Huckleberry Finn audacity. And yet—and yet—and yet—

They hail from smart Manhattan, and are in no wise related, and travel about as belittling artists, dancers and pantaloons, in company with a manager, a most charming Miss Emily Moore, and a tutor and two toxters who at the tender age of six weeks consume prodigious quantities of apple sauce and pursue monstrously fierce and mature felines.

Now it is quite a fact that Florence and Francis have but recently acquired themselves most gracefully and poetically in the Frolivities of 1921, that Florence in the dance of Kismet held huge audiences of lovely women and surprisingly interested men in transports of aesthetic delight, and that she and Francis moved many to tumultuous clapping as they swayed tenderly through a gorgeous ball-room lit by an artificial moon.

For Florence and Francis are dramatic dancers, who learned wisely the poetry of movement from one Mona Lamar, herself an adept of the great classes of Alexis Klossoff and Taurosoff the Terpsichorean.

And all through the past they have created dramatic and fantastic and impressionistic prologues for the managers of select cinema temples; they were nutshell itself as they introduced Doug Fairbanks in “The Nut,” at Philadelphia’s marvellous Stanley, shrine of the cinema, and they too felt the sweetness of life as they interpreted the soul of Dukory in a prologue to Pola Negri’s “Passion”; and they were gilded ilies for a Mac Murray movie and were moon-struck mannikins who failed away at the appearance of “Midsummer Madness.” And they symbolized the Heart of Maryland, and were little angels who threw custard pies smash in the faces of winking starlets—precluding with sly jest some Mack Sennett imitates.

They both sing, lightly and littingly, Florence as a flute methodically translating a cay aching, Francis with the resonance of muted strings. And Florence can draw a bow with surprising results across the astonished face of a violin.

They are here to woo the movies, even though the favors of the movie muse part them in the hours when folks are all awake. They are potential stars, full of feeling and fire and wonder which awaits the wand of a director of discretion and dreams. They are as chatty and genial as two parakeets, as artistic as Pierrot and Pierette, and as gallant and fearless as their fox-trotters. As sure as the sun rises and sets, they will be heard from promptly—and magnificently.

WOULD HAVE BERNHARDT AS GUEST OF HONOR

Sara Bernhardt has been invited to Hollywood by a committee of producers and stars to be the guest of honor at a celebration of the tenth anniversary of the motion picture drama. Madame Bernhardt was one of the first stage artists to star in the films.

Charles Gertig is author of “The Mis'er's Children,” “A Mother's Sacrifice” and “Blended Souls.”

"THE MAN FROM LOST RIVER"

"The Man From Lost River" should give intense satisfaction to all admirers of pictures dealing with virile life in the open. It abounds in beautiful forest scenes and lumber camp atmosphere which is the very essence of what the boyhood of today is, a clean, wholesome one, a production, well suited to family patronage and should prove a very desirable box office asset."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"That irreconcilable minority which snarls and sneers at motion pictures, scoffing when they are classified as an art, should be forced to see Frank Lloyd's production of "The Man From Lost River," from the story by Katharine Newlin Burt. It would not silence their raucous voices, for theirs is a hopeless malady, but it would less their facility for finding excuses upon which to base their destructive criticisms. This Goldwyn picture is very skilfully constructed. Denied greatness by the limited scope of its plot, it nevertheless ranks in the vanguard of really worthwhile pictures."—"Moving Picture World.

This is a lumberjack story framed in a background entirely consistent with the characters and plot. It does not present anything unusual in theme, the idea being a sort of triangle with the stink taken out. In fact it is a quiet story and the lack of rushing action so characteristic of its type. It needs, however, those who are expecting smashing scenes and climaxes. Katharine Newlin Burt, the author of 'The Branding Iron,' has written a plausible tale which relies almost entirely on sentimental appeal for its interest. She has drawn an interesting figure in the hero—a man who might be expected to be such a type, but who is afraid of himself in the presence of women."—Motion Picture News.

"Some splendid shots of a lumber camp in action, delightful view of the tall trees, and attractive scenery in general offer the main bits of appeal in Frank Lloyd's production of Katharine Newlin Burt's 'The Man From Lost River,' a story that bears poor comparison with her 'The Branding Iron' and 'Snowblind.'

"At best 'The Man From Lost River' is a wishy-washy entertainment unless its scenic attractiveness and background values will be sufficient to compensate for the other shortcomings. Improbabilities are more or less numerous."—'Wid's.

"THE LAW AND THE WOMAN"

"Any play which the late Clyde Fitch wrote had plot and dramatic climaxes and 'The Woman in the Case,' or as it is called in photoplay form, 'The Law and the Woman,' is no exception. However, more words than a really big picture should contain are required to unfold the plot and caption the climax, much less are the conclusions of the feature may vary. Some will find it an absorbing and well constructed drama. Others may complain that it is a long and tedious talkie. It presents an exceedingly strong dramatic climax in the last reel, one that carries suspense and action, even though it is all rather theatrical and melodramatic."—'Motion Picture News.

"Clyde Fitch's stage play, 'The Woman in the Case,' has been made into a vehicle for Betty Compson, and a good one at that. Pencky Stanlaw's again directs the destiny of Mis Compsom in the Fitch play, this time with less artistic display and more concentration upon dramatic effects. And there are some of the true moments in 'The Law and the Woman,' even though they may tuck a trifle too hard upon the spectator's heart strings.

"Clyde Fitch's old stage play, which made such a great hit a generation ago in the legitimate, has been made into a very interesting picture under the title of 'The Law and the Woman,' which bids fair to win widespread popularity. It is excellent screen material and brings to the front again Betty Compson, who made such a decisive hit as an underworld character in 'The Miracle Man.' As Margaret Rolfe, the performance of Miss Compson leaves nothing to be desired, and the 'other woman in the case,' Cara Foster, is finely played by Cleo Riggsey, who makes a triumphal return to the screen in this feature."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"The story is an adaption of Clyde Fitch's popular play of some years ago, 'The Woman in the Case.' But with the aid of an expert scenario written by Albert S. LeVino, Stanlaw supplies a melodrama that has gripping suspense, and although the outcome is perfectly clear from the very beginning, owing to long familiarity with the plot, the spectators' interest is keyed up and never is allowed to drop."—'Moving Picture World.

"AT THE SIGN OF THE JACK O'LANTERN"

"Lloyd Ingraham, in directing 'At the Sign of the Jack O' Lantern,' has given the screen an entertaining production. Right from the first the story catches the interest by showing the arrival of two travelers at their destination during a furious rain and electrical storm—such a scene which when photographed as graphically as this one immediately grips the imagination."—'Moving Picture World.

"'At the Sign of the Jack O' Lantern' is a pleasing little comedy production based upon a very human theme. Most of the fun is derived from the situations and while the characters are a bit overdrawn, they are nevertheless convincing and quite true to type. The offering makes no bid for drama or plot, but merely presents a possible situation and carries it through in an amusing manner."—'Wid's.

"At the Sign of the Jack O' Lantern' is an interesting and amusing concoction of incident, half mystery and half farce comedy, relating the experience of a bride and groom who fall heirs to a house and lot and six hundred dollars in cash and are forced to become hosts to a house full of the deceased uncle's wife's relatives. The whole thing is ingenious and a welcome change from the cut and dried formula stuff. Possibly some may wonder whether it is to be taken seriously and question the advisability of making a picture that is neither farce comedy nor drama in its construction, but most people are going to call...

The Guardian of Our Comfort

We are fairly well agreed that Hollywood, a garden spot of the world, and one that our profession has spared nothing in time or money to cultivate, is "the country's most ideal dwelling place," as the enthusiastic real estate agents claim for it. Nevertheless we constantly have the knowledge forced upon us that there is a stupendous lack of intelligence and effectiveness in the government of any community or district which will permit its residents to suffer physically from the carelessness of its public service corporations, a condition which Los Angeles has lately endured with amazing grace.

Southern California is blessed with a semi-tropical climate that tolerates only two or three chilly months out of the twelve, and yet the United Studio has found it necessary to install a tremendous blizzard country heating system to protect, during that short space, its producing staffs from the criminal inefficiency of the local gas company, which, with the safety and comfort of hundreds of thousands in its keeping, shiftlessly provides only air-filled gas, valueless as fuel, through mains that do not begin to supply the demand which it, as a service corporation, has contracted to fill.

The capital of this vicinity talks about Los Angeles as the unchallenged film center of all times, due to its incomparable weather conditions, etc., etc., and so forth. Thereupon it sits down in utter disregard of the picture world's needs, shortsightedly imagining that an expression of its good wishes will balance any abuse which may later be leveled at our meek and unoffending heads. Why are we meek and inoffensive? Certainly we have had enough advantage taken of that affliction to cure us indefinitely. A few suggestions to our honorable political representatives might be of slight avail. Thereafter a series of damage suits against Los Angeles' insolent public corporations could be tried. We entertain an idea that there are ways of forcing all issues.

William D. Taylor
By Richard Willis

When Kipling wrote his "If," the English master addressed his words to those who play the game; "If you can meet with Triumph and Disaster And treat those two impostors just the same— If you can make one heap of all your winnings And risk it on one turn of pitch-and-toss, And lose and start again at your beginnings And never breathe a word about your loss:" And then the later lines, "and keep your virtue, Or walk with Kings—nor lose the common touch,

If neither foes nor loving friends can hurt you, If all men count with you, but none too much:"

Sure, Kipling must have visioned William Taylor And penned his poem having him in mind; A man who'd not admit that he could fail and To others' faults was more than little blind.

So long, dear Billy Taylor, just so long and not good-bye, I'm smiling as you'd wish it though my heart has had its cry. Your friends were legion, Billy, though your intimates were few, But to those your memory's sacred and their thoughts are there with you.

Young boys and girls will miss you, for your heart went out to youth, And you gave them good examples of courtesy and truth; When war came, Billy Taylor, you scouted thought of self, Position, money, prospects, you threw upon the shelf; You went a common private, a captain you returned. Though scarce a word of what you did your friends have ever learned;

You kept your troubles to yourself, you made short shift of woe: So long, dear Billy Taylor—though we hate to see you go, We'll feel we're pretty close to you as life's short space we span.

We're richer for your friendship, for dear God! you were a MAN!

The New Art in Pictures

Is it within the scope of one man, no matter how great a dramatic artist, to depict life in all its phases? If so, is it within the power of any actor to so lose his personality, his identity, that he can combine all elements requisite to the drama by interpreting every character included in a play or a cinematic play, presenting unaided an effort not only equal but superior from the standpoint of characterization to any yet accomplished work in that line? In short, does there live a man who can convincingly and consistently play an entire cast in, for instance, a modern photoplay? The Hollywood film colony holds that this unusual achievement is possible at least to one screen actor; for it has recently previewed Protean Arts' initial production, "The Mind of Man," a dramatic novelty presenting Cecil Holland, the master makeup artist and well-known character performer, in each of the picture's various characters. That this remarkable thing has been actually accomplished largely by means of the more mechanical aids of Mr. Holland's exceptional makeup genius and some startling photography is not pointed as so significant a thing as the fact that his versatility has (Continued on Page 12)

NIBLO AND STAHL FINISHING

Two productions are now nearing completion at the Louis B. Mayer studio. One of these, "Rose o' the Sea," is an adaptation of Countess Harcourt's book and stars Anita Stewart. Rudolph Cameron, the star's husband and manager, will be seen as her leading man in this picture with Thomas Holding, Margaret Landis, Hallam Coxe, Kate Lester, John P. Lockery and Charles Belcher comprising the balance of the cast.

The other picture is a John M. Stahl special, entitled "One Clear Call," written by Frances Nimmo Greene. Among those in the cast are Claire Windsor, Henry B. Walthall, Irene Rich, Milton Silas, Joseph Dowling, Doris Pawn, Shannon Day, Donald MacDonald, Annette De Foe, Edith Yorke, Fred Kelsey, Stanley Goethals, Nick Cockey, William Marion and Albert MacQuarrie.

NEW COMPANY IN PROVIDENCE R. I.

The Lowell Film Exhibition Corporation of Providence has been granted a charter by Secretary of State Parker. The concern will make, produce and exhibit pictures and has an authorized capital of $50,000. The incorporators are Alfred C. Chaffee, John A. Bennett and Philip C. Joslin, all of Providence.

GOLDSYN HOLD S CONVENTION

The mid-winter sales convention of Goldwyn Distributing Corporation was held recently in Chicago. Among the home office executives who addressed the convention were Samuel Goldwyn, Alfred Weiss, F. A. Gudzer, A. S. Aronson and Abraham Lehr, Vice President in charge of the Culver City studio.

AT UNITED STUDIOS

Constance Talmadge will start her next production early next month. Jackie Coogan is preparing to commence his fourth starring vehicle, production on which will begin in about three weeks. Jane Novak's next starring production, under Chester Bennett's direction, will be "The Snow Shoe Trail," by Edison Marshall. Marion Fairfax is writing the script and shooting will commence in two weeks.

ADAPTS "SMILIN' THROUGH"

James Ashmore Creelman is responsible for the screen adaptation of the Alan Longdon Martin play, "Smillin' Through," Norma Talmadge's next first National cinematical, which will be ready for release early in March.

AT UNIVERSAL

Neely Edwards, who has been signed to make a series of two-reel comedies, is in the middle of his first one titled "An Inheritance Taxi." Gil Pratt is directing and Laura LaPlante is playing opposite the star. Priscilla Dean is working on the latter part of her most recent starring vehicle, "That Lass o' Lowrie's."

Sylvia Breamer plays the feminine lead with William Russell in his latest Fox starring vehicle which Rowland V. Lee is directing.

SELMZICK FORCES AT UNITED

Four producing units are about to be added to the Los Angeles film colony. M. C. Levey, President of United Studios, will leave for New York presently to arrange with Lewis J. Selznick for the transfers to United Studios of Elaine Hammerstein, Eugene O'Brien, Owen Moore and a special unit which will make balanced-cost pictures.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Hal E. Roach has inaugurated a new building program, construction being under way. Harold Lloyd's company will be provided with a new tile dark stage 110x240 feet, and a smaller stage, added last year. Other additions will be the "prop" warehouse, 80x110, where the props will be stored, while the building 22x80 off fire-proof construction will be erected for the electrical work shop.

Harry "Snub" Pollard finished production this week of a comedy and will make four more before beginning on two-reelers. "Kill the Nerve" is now titled and ready for preview.

Jean Havex is back again in his office at the studios and is collaborating with Hal Roach and Sam Taylor on the closing episodes in the Harold Lloyd comedy under production. Scenes are now being considered for the next comedy, for Mr. Lloyd is planning no interval between pictures.

Hal Roach is making up the personnel of the "Paul" Parrott company which will begin work on one-reel comedies in another week or so. Scripts will be written by the staff with Charles Parrott in charge.

FIRST NATIONAL NOTES

Preferred Pictures, Inc. announces that Katherine MacDonald's latest picture, just completed for First National release, has been titled "The Heart Dealer." Chet Withey directed this latest Macdonald cinema play, which is the fifth completed under the new First National contract. Miss MacDonald's next production will be "Conquer the Woman," which was written by Violet Clark, author of "Domestic Relations."

The ending of John M. Stahl's latest production, "One Clear Call," has begun.

Charles Chaplin has nearly finished the filming of his latest comedy for First National release. James Edna Purviance, Sid Chaplin, Mack Swain and Henry Bergman.

Allen Holubar and Dorothy Phillips are at work on this picture, principal scenes for "The Soul Seeker," their next First National attraction.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES

"Midnight" is the title that has been given to the latest Education-Mermaid Comedy, recently completed under the supervision of Jack White with Lila Conley as the featured actor. Lloyd Hamilton's latest Mermaid Comedy released by Educational is "Rolling Stone," in which Bobby De Vilhiss, child actor, has an important part.

Christie is about to release "Oh Promise Me," a comedy written around an American Legion Post, with many of the scenes enacted in the Legion clubhouse and with Legion members taking many minor parts in the film.

Laurence Licalzi, boy actor, will make his appearance in the Campbell Comedy, "Monkey Shines," recently completed for Educational. Don Pert's most recent starring vehicle who has appeared in several pictures of this series, plays with Laurence. Most of the monkey shiners are performed by Joey, the clever little monkey actor.

"Torchy and Orange Blossoms" is the latest Johnny-Hines comedy for Educational.
“THE LAW AND THE WOMAN”

Grauman’s

Penrhyn Stanlaws’ newest cinematic play for Lasky, starring Betty Compson, is an adaptation of the Clyde Fitch stage drama, "The Woman in the Case," which has been re-titled "The Law and the Woman." It is chiefly notable for the clever feminine portrayals in the cast and some well-developed suspense. Perhaps, at that, Alberta Shirley Le Vino should be called to account for allowing his scenario an unwarranted amount of footage to get the story really under way and for expending too much time upon unnecessary details later, but generally, his arrangement holds the interest and, save for one or two weak instances of the kind pointed out, it should prove quite gripping to the average audience.

Stanlaws’ direction, while not carrying out his early promise of certainty and vivide-ness, makes no blant blunders with its material and the result is sure to please all lovers of the murder mystery not to mention those of the soft-eyed Miss Compson.

Certainly the photography and sets were in competent hands and in fact there is little left to be desired for the entire list of technical effects.

The well remembered heroine of the original, Margaret Rolfe, is naturally the position which enlists the star who does excellently some contrasting characterization as the courageous woman who employs despairing methods to attain the freedom of her condemned but innocent husband. That which is lost to these mystery parts in human-ness is made up for to the public in action and situation twists.

William Carleton was admirably chosen for the well poised, kindly Julian Rolfe, a man of the world who has retained an honor-able heart and a clear head. There is much dignity in the part which Carleton has convincingly constructed.

A most remarkable interpretation is given to the heavy in this production by Charles Ridgely, a screen favorite of some half dozen years ago. She invests Clara Foster, the adventures, with all that is loathsome and vulgar in the lustful looking her characteristic unremittingly unhappily endowed with a degree of intelligence. Miss Ridgely is to be greatly congratulated upon this startling return which she has made to the films. She very nearly "takes" the story.

Casson Ferguson plays Phil Long, the doomed lover of the commiser, with characteristic sincerity and Henry Barrows acquits himself commendably as Judge Thompson.

Helen Dunbar, Clarence Burton, and J. S. Stembridge complete the cast of this Paramount picture.

"WHAT NO MAN KNOWS"

Loew's State

Claire Kimball Young seems forever destined to expend her energies upon some-what commonplace problem preachers presented by "Woman’s Place," but "What No Man Knows" or the story of the "other woman’s" heart, while not particularly comp-elling, is an interesting improvement over several subjects in which we have witnessed her recently, and as such is to be highly commended.

Harry Garson has provided it with one of his dependably consistent and attractive produc- tions, while Sam Landers has tried out some odd photographic effects upon it. Whether or not these last will please is probably a case for individual decision. By concentrating highly upon the principals in the foreground he sends his crowded scene into a flat unrealistic background undoubt- edly intended to detract attention from the story.

Certainly the story and Miss Young play for the most part, but the eeriely hanging atmosphere of the experiment worked exactly the opposite effect upon us.

BERT WOODRUFF

“WHAT NO MAN Knows”

"What No Man Knows" does not boast a big climax, but it is saved from going on and on and on by a snappy little twist which reverses the whole opposing procession. Its conventional ending is at least healthy and happy.

Miss Young is very much Miss Young in Norma Harvey, a newspaper woman and social worker whose misfortune it is to love a married man. That she is just so will ensure success for her picture in some quar- ters where the older stars are tenaciously preferred to the newer generation.

Lowell Sherman gives a careful performance in Craig Dunlap, the chief masculine situation which is well received although he excels in the unsympathetic.

Dorothy Wallace, an exceptionally attrac-tive heavy, accounts for herself admirably as Bertha, Dunlap’s wife, a woman whose wealth fails to erode her shoplifting in-stincts. Miss Wallace is a clever performer.

Ruth Hadforth does Miss Quimby, a regu-lation old maid, more spiritedly and amus-ingly than this type of thing is usually done, and Dulcie Cooper really characterizes the shop girl whom she plays.

Little Jean Carpenter is very appealing as the blind orphan, Maizie, and William Carleton, Edward Kimball, Helen Hunt and Milla Davenport enact other parts ade-quately.

Equity Pictures distributes “What No Man Knows.”

"WHEN ROMANCE RIDES"

California

A somewhat measure photodramatization of Zane Grey’s "Wild Fire" was recently made by E. Richard Schayer and John Russell for production by Benjamin B. Hampton. The result, which incorporated the direct-orial efforts of Elsie Howe, Jean Hersholt and Charles Bush in conjunction with the producer, a more inconspicuous than sensa-tional melodrama of the chase track, is re-leased this week by Hodkinson under the title, "When Romance Rides." All of the "nokums" of the old western serial has been employed by the scenarist, occasionally several near-thrills backgrounds against some realistic mountain locations. These, strung upon an ever so slender thread of romantic interest, form the picture’s entirely. Whether or not it will satisfy the higher class audience of 1922 is to be conjectured. Surely it could have been comfortably pre-sented in two reel instead of a Main Street blood and thunder attraction. But then, quite evidently, such was not the idea.

The photography by Gus Peterson, Frank Sullivan and William Edmunds is about standard.

Cairo Adapis is again featured by Hamp-ton in a customarily stereotyped role. She plays Lucy Bostill, an independent westerner, whose sympathetic appeal is only gained through her triumphant jockeying and her abuse by a half wit.

Carl Gantvoort in the male lead, Lin Swayne, justifies his existence as such by rescuing the damsel in distress, which about lets him out as to action.

Jean Hersholt really does a very good piece of exaggerated work in Joel, the ven-o-mous idiot who is apparently encouraged in his deliriums by the neighborhood at large.

John Beck, Frank Hayes and the fat girl who plays Sally, form an amusing hick-comedy trio, but they are entirely misplaced in the story.

Harry Van Meter, Charles Arling, Tod Sloan, Mary Jane Irving and Walter Per-kins fill the remaining roles competently.

This type of playphot is not increasing the screen’s popularity nor advancing our industry from any conceivable standpoint.

"WOMAN'S PLACE"

Kinaema

A John Emerson-Anita Loos comedy when interpreted by the vivacious Constance Tall-madge is invariably diverting, and "Woman’s Place" is no exception, although it cannot be said to rival in entertainment value, "Mamma’s Affair," and several other of her past year’s vehicles. Being the story of a dapper who enters politics, running against a weak-minded fance for Mayor and winning the boss of the ward for a sweetheart, this picture provides an ample setting for the younger Talma-stage antics, gowns and charms, which is an important consideration with her fans. The subtitles could con-continue in this vein, but the whole Dr. Director Fleming’s management of the whole is excellent.

Connie is just herself, no more, no less, as she is known, a self-confident, bold, honest, and infinitely delightful loafer. That fact is quite sufficient and will sell easily as the profession has learned to its great interest.

NEW SERIES HAS HUGHES AS STAR

Pledging his faith in a substantial revival in business conditions in America during the coming year, Louis Burston, producer of the David Butler pictures, has launched the first of what will be a series of special productions. Work has commenced at Universal City. The first picture stars Gar- eth Hughes, with Bessie Love playing opposite him. The story was written by Henry R. Symonds and John B. Clymer. W. S. Van Dyke is directing.

WINDSOR IN NEILAN'S LATEST

Claire Windsor, who recently finished work in John M. Stahl's "One Clear Call" at the Louis B. Mayer studios, is now playing a prominent role in Marshall Neilan's "Fools First," which Mr. Neilan started last week for future First National release.

CHRISTIE SIGNS NEW STAR

C. H. Christie has signed George Stewart, younger brother to Anita Stewart, to star in a new series of Christie Comedies. Mr. Stewart will begin his work very soon and will arrive at the studio from the East within a week.

DAVID POWELL COMING HOME

The latest word from David Powell is that he is coming home after making pictures in the London Paramount studios for the last year. He will return to Hollywood and America to support Gloria Swanson in her next Lasky starring picture, "The Gilded Cage."

KOSLOFF IN REID'S NEXT

Theodore Kosloff has an important part in "The Dictator," the current Wallace Reid Lasky photoplay which James Cruze is directing.

MILLER WITH MIX

Patsy Ruth Miller is playing opposite Tom Mix in "Free Range Lanning" at Fox.

George Cowl has an important part with Pauline Frederick in "The Glory of Clemen- tina," the R-C film adaptation of William J. Locke's novel.

Alan Hale has been assigned a prominent role in Wallace Reid's latest Lasky cinematic play entitled "The Dictator."

H. E. Maxwell, formerly associated with Realart, was recently engaged by Hames Grainger as exploitation man for the Marshall Neilan company.

Elsie Bishop is with National Poon Classes playing the mother in its first production called "The Happy Family," under production at the Hollywood Studios.

Charles Cirklin, electrician, who worked with Mary Pickford in "Little Lord Faunt- leroy," is employed as chief electrician with "The Masquerader," starring Guy Bates Post.
NEW MIRROR TO SOLVE MAKE-UP PROBLEMS

Gordon Pollock, cameraman for the Mission Film Corporation, now photographing "Carry On the Race," has invented a new mirror which is calculated to solve the make-up problems of the film colony. The glass is apparently like that of any ordinary mirror, but has been tempered by a monoton filter, which causes it to register make-up as a picture in monotone, rather than the different shades of the make-up. It gives the direct screen value of any color, and permits the actor to experiment in colored make-ups without the aid of a second party, or a camera. Patents have been secured, and the new mirror will be on the market in the near future.

POLLARD TO WED LEADING WOMAN

Announcement is made of the engagement of "Snub" Pollard, the Hal Roach comedian, and Marie Mosquini, who has been his leading lady ever since he became a star in the comedy field. A honeymoon tour to Australia is planned.

HINDS RESIDENCE IN TULLY FILM

The Pasadena residence of Samuel Hinds was used recently for a garden party which will be used in Richard Walton Tully's production of "The Masquerader," starring Guy Bates Post.

EDUCATIONAL OFFICIAL HERE

C. H. Christie was accompanied to Los Angeles from the East by Sidney R. Bencenie, who is assistant to President E. W. Hammons of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., distributors of short subjects in the United States and Canada.

MAYO GOES TO CUBA

Having made a stage-appearance tour in New York, Cleveland, Toledo and other cities, Frank Mayo will leave New York for Havana presently and will return to his home in Los Angeles from the Cuban point, after making theatre appearances there.

BEDFORD WITH FOX

Barbara Bedford is enacting the feminine lead with John Gilbert in "The Land of Beginning Again," which started production this week at Fox under the direction of Jerome Storm.

"Queenie," the dog, is appearing in Louis Burston's first picture starring Gareth Hughes.

Edwin Stevens is enacting a principal role in Shirley Mason's current Fox production "Down the Black Hills."

Prairie Productions have received an offer from a group of Alabama exhibitors for a series of personal appearances by Dick Hutton, the Lexington, Kentucky boy, and Carmen Arselie, the Birmingham ingenue. They are now making "Four Hearts," near San Diego.

VICE PRESIDENT OF UNITED STUDIOS ARRIVES

Fred E. Pelton, Vice President of United Studios, Inc., has arrived here from Boston and will at once begin his activities as one of the administrative officers of the studios. He is accompanied by his mother, and they will make Los Angeles their permanent home. Mr. Pelton is Vice President of the Boston brokerage house of Garrison, Harris and Company.

"WAMPAS" TO GIVE "HIGH JINKS"

The newly elected officers of the Western Motion Picture Advertisers, the organization made up of publicity directors of the west coast studios, Los Angeles exchanges and theaters, are to be inaugurated at a "High Jinks" installation Monday evening, February 20, tended the new executives by the outgoing officials.

Alec B. Benz is president; Pete Smith, vice-president; Harry Hammond Beall, secretary; and Malcolm Stuart Doyle, treasurer.

The new board of directors includes Harry Brand, Joe Jackson, Barret Kiesling, Harry Wilson, and Paul Hubert Conlon. The new Officials serve for one year. The "Wampas" are just one year old and the celebration will also take the form of a first birthday party.

Robert B. McIntyre, casting director for Goldwyn in Culver City, is in New York.

Word from Elliott Dexter gives his present address as Berlin.

William Scott, Harvey Clarke and Otto Matison are included in the cast of "Lucky Grittiy" starring William Russell.

Bert Lytell recently appeared in person at Sheba's Hippodrome, Buffalo, N. Y., in connection with the showing of "Lady Fingers."

Elmer Rice, who formerly signed himself supervisor of production for Realart, has been retained to write for Gloria Swanson.

Upon the completion of her current picture, "Kissed," a comedy by Arthur Somers Roche, Marie Prevost will go to New York for a short vacation.

Charles Geiger, writer and newspaper man, is in Hollywood for a few days renewing old acquaintances. Mr. Geiger made the trip from San Francisco on the initial trip of the new Fageol Bus Line.

Joseph M. Scheneck, who controls the starring activities of Norma Talmadge and Constance Talmadge, will go to New York for a conference with First National officials in about two weeks. Mrs. Scheneck (Norma Talmadge) will accompany him.

Marcia Mannon is enjoying a rest in her Laurel Canyon bungalow. Miss Mannon will soon be seen in the leading feminine role of Jane in Foxhingham's comedy-drama, "The Man Who Smiled," to be released through Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

Little Richard Headrick is now quite recovered from his recent serious illness and expects to be in attendance at the Kinema Theatre presently when John M. Stahl's First National attraction, "The Song of Life," is presented for the first time. Little Richard has a prominent role in this most recent Stahl photography.

Richard Walton Tully, playwright producer who is starring "Hat's Post" in "The Masquerader," is responsible for the introduction to fame of many stars. Some of his "hats" include Lawrence Durrell, Leila, Bessie Hering, Peggy O'Neil, Violet Hening, Lewis Stone, and Theodore Roberts.

"WHY MEN FORGET"

Robertson-Cole

"If the Robertson-Cole Company felt that it just had to release another bad picture it might be said that it could have found one or two in this country without going abroad for enemies. Their pictures are uniformly poor and their poor pictures seems lately to have become with the firm, so it evidently wished to point out that it would not play favorites in nationalities. 'Why Men Forget' is an English importation that had nothing to redeem it, nor anything that would justify more than the slightest consideration — — Moving Picture World.

"Why Men Forget' is below the average of the offerings turned out by Robertson-Cole Pictures, and even though they don't say so either on the screen or in their press sheet, the picture indicates that it was produced abroad, undoubtedly in England. The atmosphere and general production values resemble other English films that have come over here and the players, the leads especially, are all distinctly British in appearance. It is an amateurish affair at best.* * * * * — Motion Picture News.

"The labor note in this picture may interest those patrons who belong to factory communities, but owing to a lack of punch and action of any romantic or dramatic nature, even the spectators may not find it a means of entertainment. It is a British-made feature with players unknown to audiences on this side of the water. Hence it has its drawbacks as far as carrying some personal appeal. * * * * — Wid's.

"The story contains but a single character of any dramatic value, the others providing the background. Since there is no novelty of situation, it is easy to guess the outcome. The photography is rather uneven and the acting is uninspired. However, there is a lesson in the story which will be grasped by many. It shows that there is a curse when it destroys ideals. * * * * — Motion Picture News.

"THE RULING PASSION"

(United Artists)

"Any lingering impression that the genius of George Arliss is limited to character roles is completely dispelled after seeing his fine handling of a conventional part in 'The Ruling Passion.' This is a picture with an exceptional appeal— that afforded by splendid acting and directing of a very human story. * * * * — Moving Picture World.

"It isn't at all unlikely that the end of the year will find 'The Ruling Passion' mentioned as one of the best pictures, and if it isn't it will be only because it came so early in the year that it may slip away the memory. Because George Arliss' latest offering not only firmly establishes him as one of the best screen actors of the day, but even goes a step further and places him in the class by himself. 'The Devil' and 'Disraeli' were excellent pictures and offered remarkable performances by Arliss, but 'The Ruling Passion' not only contains another excellent portrayal but is a delightful, human and humorous entertainment that can't fail to please. It's the kind of picture that sends you out of the theatre wholly satisfied and pleased with everything. * * Wid's.

"There is a story which didn't cost a million dollars, but it ought to gross a million which is a lot more important to everybody. It is a fairly humorous, likable and entertaining story has come through this season. There isn't much drama to 'The Ruling Passion' and no he-doles to drool. It is just a simple little story * * * * — Motion Picture News.

"Mr. Arliss as a comedian is a revelation. His pantomime is expressive and subtle; his characterization is sharply defined and always pleasing. * * * * — Motion Picture News.

"FRENCH HEELS"

(Hodkinson)

"Irene Castle, whose grace and lightness of foot raised her to dizzy heights of popularity with the American public from the time she first danced professionally, does not make an auspicious return to the screen after a lapse of two years. 'French Heels,' a much more suitable title for the picture, shows Castle in some of the same romantic situations, in the main, but nevertheless serves as a good vehicle for Irene Castle. Being a dancer, they will expect that her role will be that of a dancer, or perhaps they will at least hope so. In this respect, they are quite certain to be satisfied. She is not only a dancer, but is given the right atmosphere and opportunities to display her art * * * * — Wid's.

"HEADING WEST"

(Universal)

"The story selected for Hoot Gibson's latest has hardly enough material for a full length feature, but it contains enough action and sure fire stuff to please and satisfy the majority of western fans. What the story lacks in plot and situation it makes up in comedy details and fights. Some good riding and a little 'broncho busting' add flavor to the offering * * * * — Wid's.

"The chief characteristic of this picture is its wealth of physical action. After a rather slow start, 'Heading West' picks up momentum at such a speed as to make the picture a veritable whirlwind of action. It contains of unbounded generosity * * * * — Wid's.

"Whether he is a skillful actor or not is beside the point. Nothing will keep a human human, the punch. And he measures it out with a big whoop of enthusiasm. * * * * — Motion Picture News.

"A VIRGINIA COURTHOUSE"

(Realart)

"One who has followed the starring career of May McAvoy cannot help but believe that this charming little actress has a particularly bright future ahead of her. She has been seen in three pictures: 'Sentimental Tommy,' 'Moralis' and the present one, 'A Virginia Courthouse,' which comes near to being as good as 'Moralis.' Certainly it has an appealing, though not highly dramatic story, an excellent supporting cast and beautiful settings. Moving Picture World.

'A Virginia Courthouse' is slight material for the expression of May McAvoy's talent. Which is to be regretted after her memorabile in "Moralis." * * * * *

"Since it is easy to penetrate, the value of suspense is missing. But in its favor are some charming backgrounds and a good suggestion of atmosphere. Furthermore, whatever Miss McAvoy does on the screen is compelling. * * * * * — Motion Picture News.

"Pretty May McAvoy deserves better material than that afforded by Eugene Pacey's old stage play that is far from suited to her personality, and doesn't provide her with any real opportunities to appear to her best advantage. The opening sequence, especially which calls for her to portray a little girl, is out of her reach. That is not to say Miss McAvoy doesn't know how to act like a little girl, but she can't look like one even with curls and short dresses. Director O'Herlihy has given her but one close-up so her beauty is not given much prominence. She can stand close-ups, too * * * * — Wid's.

"THE STRENGTH OF THE PINES"

(Fox)

"The Strength of the Pines" is far more favorable to William Russell than have been some of his recent features. In this, he is cast as the usual red-blooded hero, but with somewhat more of a purposeful and pointed characterization than is customarily his. The frequent mistake of over-emphasizing the romantic in sentimental values of his performances has been almost entirely omitted, and the harder qualities which are far more characteristic in his case have been brought out * * * * *.

"Some of the situations of danger are too forced * * * * — Moving Picture World.

"This picture may prove disappointing to those who see something of value in the title and in the fact that William Russell is the star of the story, it carries an average theme * * * * * The plot is complicated and there is a profusion of captions * * * The director has not bothered much in collecting the exteriors. There are no colorful lonesome shots and the pathos, the loneliness of the central figures is never suggested. However, no hero conquers his enemies and the romance comes into its own * * * * — Motion Picture News.

“The Digest of the Motion Picture Industry”

Mr. Lloyd B. King, Sales Manager of Independent Producers Distributing Syndicate, who is now collecting state-right productions for his organization which he will sell on his three-month's sales tour leaving Los Angeles on the 15th day of February, announced today that state-right buyers from all exchange centers are sending in their endorsements and assurance of their eagerness to co-operate with the distributing syndicate to establish Los Angeles as the film market and establish the “direct from producer to buyers” method in the state-right field.

Independent Producers Distributing Syndicate, as it will be remembered from an article which appeared in our February 4th edition, is an organization with headquarters in the Loew's State Building in Los Angeles, and was formed solely to eliminate the middle man and enable state-right producers to sell their pictures directly to exchanges throughout this organization. The Syndicate sends salesmen on the road to sell the state-rights and prepare elaborate press books and other press matter necessary for successful distribution; also pays for photos, posters, the re-editing of pictures, etc., charging a small percentage of the gross receipts for this outlay of expense and work — and all contracts are always made between producers and buyers direct and no monies are paid direct to the producers, not as here-tofore, when negatives were shipped to New York and the producers went out of business before they ever heard any more of their own picture and very seldom that any of them ever received their production cost back.

Mr. Sam Honig, the Treasurer of the company, stated that there are still some producers who fanatically believe that New York is the logical film market and many of them still think that they must take their pictures to New York to make a successful sale.

It is indeed pitiful that the independent producer will never learn by his fellow men's misfortune, for although there are hundreds of sad examples to depict the result of distributing their product through the New York market, there are still some producers who are willing to take another desperate chance. New York is not and never was the film market, states Mr. Honig, but distributors established themselves there, New York having been the producing center at one time. Since, however, Los Angeles became the world's producing center, in the last few years, it was inevitable that the film market had to be moved to wherever the pictures are made.

The state-right buyer does not know nor care where the salesmen come from, when he calls on him to sell any pictures, whether he comes from Los Angeles or New York. That is immaterial to the exchanges, as they care nothing as to where the prints are shipped from; all they care is to get good pictures for reasonable prices, which they can obtain to a greater degree of satisfaction, buying their pictures direct from the exchanges through an organization like this, than if the profit has to be divided three ways, because the exchange and the producer both had to pay the distributor's take-off, which is now eliminated since the Independent Producers Distributing Syndicate entered the field.

Jack Dempsey has privately settled the two suits for $100,000 brought against him by Frank P. Spellman, it is said. The amount of the settlement is not known. Spellman claimed a share of “Daredevil Jack’s” proceeds, alleging that his efforts made possible the star's appearance in the serial. A jury disagreement tied the affair up last fall.

CLUB WOMEN ENTERTAINED AT INCE STUDIOS

Many local clubwomen attended the reception given by Thomas H. Ince at his studios in Culver City recently. A special program was held for the guests at the conclusion of which tea was served on one of the big studio stages. The hostesses included Mesdames Thomas H. Ince, Theodore Roberts, Frank Keenan, Lloyd Hughes, (Gloria Hope) and Majel Coleman.

UNIQUE SET IN "THE MASQUERADER"

For the first time in the history of the screen, film fans will see a reproduction of the interior of the British House of Commons. Heretofore, this has been seen only in news weeklies, but the forthcoming motion picture of "The Masquerader," in which Guy Bates Post is being starred by Richard Walton Tully, will show it reproduced for a photoplay.

RECENTLY SEEN WITH RAY

Some of the leading women with whom Charles Ray has played in his recent first National pictures are Dorothy Devore, Charlotte Pierce, Mary Anderson, Vera Steadman, Clara Horton, Doris Pawn, Laura La Plante, Jean Calhoun and Marjorie Maurice.

PAULINE FREDERICK IS BRIDE AGAIN

Pauline Frederick and Dr. C. A. Rutherford were married a few days ago at Santa Ana. Miss Frederick is at present working on her latest photoplay for R.C. Pictures entitled "The Glory of Clementina."

Samuelson's, Ltd., is planning to resume production in London after a period of inactivity.

Hiram Abrams of United Artists has left for Palm Beach where he will enjoy a fortnight's vacation.

A notice of dissolution has been filed with the Secretary of New York State by Frank Keenan Productions.

The S. Rankin Drew Post of the American Legion, including a large film membership, will hold its first annual ball March 2nd at the Hotel Pennsylvania in New York.

We learn that New York Assemblyman Louis A. Cuvillier's bill for the abolition of a motion picture commission is being supported by the Citizens' Union of New York City.

House Peters, starring in Reginald Barkер's "The Storm," for Universal, and Frank Lanning and Matt Moore, who play important character roles, have just returned from the Big Bear location.

Owing to the illness of director Henry King, who is suffering from an attack of influenza, the filming of Richard Barthelmess' latest starring production, "Sonny," has been suspended.

A series of six Maternity-Educational reels, which will be produced by Henry Bollman, are being prepared according to announcement.

Mr. Bollman has secured the American rights to an eight-reel foreign scientific picture which has just arrived in this country, and is occupied with its editing and titling.

Why Studios "Close Down"

It is both notable and significant that most of the studios which have NOT "closed down" during the last year have been regular clients of the Photoplay Sales Department of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation.

Four years ago we expressed the opinion that producers who consistently select their plays because of their intrinsic screenability, rather than because of their "literary" value, were destined to achieve and maintain financial success.

And now, four years later, we hold tenaciously and justifiably to the same opinion.

Nor have the producers who have regularly come to Story Headquarters for their stories had occasion to differ from that opinion. They have been too busy making good pictures for a market that is starving for good pictures to entertain the thought of "closing down."

It is not the policy of the Palmer Sales Department to urge the purchase of one story at a high price (just to make a sale), but rather to endeavor to select material that will make for continuous successful production.

Degrees of Justice

Our district attorney's alleged theory to the effect that the motion picture industry reveals itself as lacking the proper anxiety for justice in the Taylor murder case by its reluctance to assist the prosecution with unrestrained conversation upon all phases of the subject, has been this week overthrown by the intelligence that around $5,000 reward is now offered for the apprehension of the criminal who so recently deprived our profession of a "best" influence, by representative film firms and associations.

Not only do the picture people want justice, but for once in their lives they are intending to get it! The fact that they have failed to respond, in some instances, to the questionable methods employed to elicit information from them concerning the private affairs of their various friends and business associates whom the prosecution has chosen to implicate insinuatingly and the city press to persecute, is merely a further indication of that fact. Indeed, it proves that they are extending their loyalty, their sense of fair play over their entire, much-maligned circle. The film colony will spare no money nor effort to uncover the murderer, but knowing as it is to be forced to do, even through its grief over the death of its great-hearted, big brother, that nothing would please certain of this city's elements so much as to be able to fasten the hideous crime within its own environs, it will proceed cautiously, as one does when he moves among enemies.

And indeed, this process is not only necessary for the eventual correct solution of the mystery, but for the protection of all things which we hold dear. The rapacity of America's sleek, scandal promoting press is indescribable and unapproachable, but for once its blinding battery of viciousness may not confuse us into either terror or submission. Thousands of our minds, clean creative minds, have been organized against this latest filthy onslaught to be directed at our work, our lives, our spiritualities. It is man's inalienable right to protect himself individually, and it is with the care of its existence and progress as a profession in view that the Screen Writers' Guild has placed its vast resources between just such dangers to its art, emanating from narrow gauge and malicious consciousnesses, as the Taylor tragedy has brought to light. The Guild is to be congratulated upon its high purpose, that of spreading the truth about pictures and picture makers, as broadcast as the slander, much of it absolutely ungrounded, that has been so flung by venomous sensationalists. The abler group of organized writers in the world has set itself a tremendous task, but of the worthiest nature, establishing itself as a real moral factor.

Justice! Yes, we will have our justice, but served in large portions all the way around! To that end we will not only work and fight, but we will keep a mental balance amid all the hysterics. Billy Taylor never liked hysterics. He would appreciate them over himself least of all. He would be ashamed of the weakness in us which could make us the victims of any treacherous agency, legal or social, to the extent of causing us to drag our confidents into the mire unnecessarily.

Let us leave no stone unturned to bring to his punishment the man who snuffed out the life of our big-spirited leader, but let us pray that our zeal shall not lead us to hurt him further, wherever he is, with a demonstration of unworthiness. Stringent investigations must sometimes be suffered in such cases as this, but trickery has again been practiced upon the screen people. We are more vitally interested in the avenging of William D. Taylor's death than Mr. Woolwine will ever be, but we will not sacrifice the innocent living for the innocent dead, if that is what he has in mind.

F. R.

The Reporter

The following comment is an editorial reply from the Chicago Daily Journal to the yellow-minded newspaper people who have spread such scurrilous reports over the country of the Taylor murder case. It is adequate and gratifying.

"As a partial offset to its thousand benefits, the Chicago world's fair made this part of the country more or less familiar with a form of dancing long known in the orient. This was called the 'wriggle dance,' and several still less complimentary terms, but its commonest name was the 'hoochee coochee.' The object of the dancers was to be as nearly obscene in their wiggles and postures as possible, on the theory that such squirms were 'exciting' to the male observer. When that observer was of mature years and sober mind, the 'excitement' took the form of a large, weary disgust.

"The object of most 'special writers' covering the Taylor case in Hollywood seems to be to dance the hoochee coochee in words. The aspirant for such 'honors' first collects all the scandalous suggestions he can, about everybody who has the remotest connection with the case. He does not put these scandalous rumors in the form of direct statements, which he might be called on to prove. He turns them to what Samuel Butler called 'Insinuations,' a word which carries its own definition; and sets them to wriggle and squirm and hop their way across one clean paper, for column after column.

Purviance Production to Start Immediately

It is officially announced by the Chaplin Studios, Inc., that Miss Edna Purviance will immediately be starred in her own right in feature productions, thereby being graduated from the position of leading woman with the comedy genius, after having occupied that prominent place in the Chaplin organization for a period of more than six years.

The rise of Miss Purviance to stardom does not come as a surprise, for it has long been hinted that she would enter the production field on a large scale and that her initial venture would be with the inauguration of the Edna Purviance Company.

The case of Miss Purviance is the only one in the history of the film industry where a leading player has remained in support of the same star for the entire duration of her screen career. Announcement as to her story, director and supporting company will be forthcoming shortly.

Other production units will go into operation at the Chaplin studios soon after the starting of the Purviance company.

Earle Gains Victory in Omar Film Suit

Amicably concluding two months of litigation that followed the alleged kidnapping of several reels of film, Ferdinand Earle, author and producer of a motion picture edition of the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam, has signed a new contract with Theodore Ahrens, president of the Rubaiyat, Inc. The new agreement calls for abandonment of Earle's suit to Superior Court begging an injunction against exhibition or release of the film in incomplete form. Earle is given complete supervision over final cutting and editing. The picture will be released as a Ferdinand Earle production under a new title, "Omar:"

"Mr. Ahrens is a man of the highest integrity and wisdom, and seems quite content with the turn of events," declared Mr. Earle, following a brief conference in the office of Frank H. Tichenor, president of the Eastern Film Company, which led to a "friendly agreement, satisfactory and fair to all concerned."

"A new contract has been drawn up and signed by which the film is in my possession for completion," continued the producer. "By mutual consent Mr. Tichenor has been appointed to represent the Rubaiyat, Inc., in handling the picture."

Enter Madame" in Its Second Week

"Enter Madame," the comedy in which Miss Nelly Dickson, director of the Hollywood Community Theater, is producing Henrietta Crossman in the title role of "Madame," is playing its second week at the Egan Theatre. With a well-balanced cast "Enter Madame" has proved a most finished and artistic success. The supporting cast includes Ramsey Wallace, Helen Raymond, James Woods Morrison, Belle Mitchell, Ramon Samaniegos, Hazel McGon- nell, Ben Hewlett, Helenia Lieberg, and Frank Tokunaga.

"Enter Madame" is greeted as the finest thing yet accomplished by the Hollywood Community Theatre in its several seasons of unusual productions.

"Cardigan" to Be Warren Release

"Cardigan," the Messmore Kendall production, will be distributed by the American Releasing Company, Fred Warren's new organization, and is mentioned as its first production. Much editing, cutting and titling has been done to the picture, which is based on a story of the American Revolution by Robert Carson. Carpenter has the leading role in the film version.

Genevieve Barton

Germn Producer Coming Here

Jacob Karol, the German producer, intends visiting America in the near future, and will bring with him a print of "The Servant of the King," the second of a series of films starring Maciste.

Karol, who is a director of the European Film Alliance, is identified with the Alberini organization which is composed of German and Italian capital. He signed Maciste for four pictures, the first of which will be "Samson and Delilah." All of them will be based on history.

Locationing at Palm Springs

C. S. Elwell and his company engaged in the filming of "Self Defense" for Metropolitan Productions left for Palm Springs recently where they will remain for two weeks shooting location scenes.

Corinne Griffith has the star role in "Island Wives."

United Studios Centralizing Its Mechanical Units

As a means of further reducing the operating expenses of its producer tenants, the United Studios are consolidating under one roof the various shops and mechanical units of the different producing units. This centralization will include the electrical, plumbing, blacksmith and paint shops; the sculptural, architectural and designing units and the storeroom, toolroom, etc. The producers agree that this move is one that is ordinarily consumed in journeying about the grounds to the various departments, and the consolidation will insure more efficient and better service to the companies, which will substantially reduce the overhead costs to the producer.

At the Ince Studios

Tyrone Power has arrived at the studio to begin work in "Finding Home," an Ince feature, soon to enter production. John Griffith Wray will direct. Marguerite de la Motte and Lloyd Hughes are included in an all-star cast for this production.

"A Man of Action," an original story by Bradley King, is the temporary title of the next comedy special in which Douglas MacLean and an all-star cast will be featured. "The Brotherhood of Hate," being directed by Lambert Hillyer, is nearing completion.

Sol Cohen, Philharmonic violinist, is arranging a special music score for "Skin Deep," an early picture.

"When She Marries" will be the release title of a forthcoming Ince all-star special by Bradley King of the Ince scenario staff.

John Fleming Wilson, writer of sea stories and a member of the writing staff, has returned to the studio following an illness of many weeks, and has resumed work on a sea picture for early production.

At Vitagraph

Under direction of Edward Jose, Alice Calboun this week started work upon her third west coast production. The picture will be made from the play of Raleigh Davis and entitled "Locked Out."

Announcement was made this week that Vitagraph will distribute the French picture, "The Sheik's Wife," in this country.

Larry Semon and company have been spending the week at San Pedro, where location shots for his new comedy were filmed.

Earle Williams, directed by Robert Ensinger, has started upon a new picture from a story by Richard Harding Davis.

President A. E. Smith is expected to return very shortly from New York.

Bradley Smollen has started upon the continuity of William Duncan's next story.

Mission Film Notes

The Mission Film Corporation engaged in making its initial production, "Carry on the Race," has moved its activities to the old Fairbanks Studio on Melrose avenue.

Wheat has commenced on the continuity of the first Sirhan Cuddy fairy story to be produced in San Francisco by the new corporation. The story was suggested by Mrs. Cuddy and is entitled "The Sheep and the Chimney Sweep" and Ernest Traxler, general manager, is assisting Mrs. Cuddy in the preparation of her continuity.
THE SONG OF LIFE

Kinema

"The Song of Life," Louis B. Mayer's latest special presentation through Associated First National, is another example of a great theme gone a little wrong despite a thorough production and a well-acted cast, and a "photodrama" production because of several "misses" in the direction. With the possibility of a big story upon the subject "discontented wives" before him, John M. Stahl has allowed his picture, abounding in effective situations, to evolve into a treatise upon "Woman and the Dirty Dishes Question," making housework her sorrid "song of life." His only pointed moral is that a poor man's wife should wash her dishes and like the idea if ever after he be held in great contempt by her man child; and he decidedly loses sympathy for the married woman who would exercise her natural talents to assist herself out of her allotted rags. The old-fashioned conclusion arrived at is, that being independent, indemnities, even immortality, must follow for the average female.

Nevertheless, if one takes "The Song of Life" as a song of three lives and judges it merely as a character study chosen at random from the book of humanity without attempting a general application of its teachings, this screen story by Florence Irene Rogers finds a very valuable place upon the list of the month's releases.

As was before suggested it is rich in situations, several of which are subtly managed. Bea Meredith's scenario is more than satisfactory, providing some good suspense near the climax. The camera work by Ernest Palmer varies a little, but is generally up to standard. The portrayals of the cast are this photodrama's greatest assets, but it is to be noted that no member of it is allowed the full swing of his individuality. The picture profession has only developed one director thus far who successfully saturates his players with his directorial personality and they are invariably of the less vivid types. Such artists as appear here should be left largely to their own devices, for they are trouper.

Gaston Glass in David Tilden, the sensitive juvenile who leads the cast, has his first real opportunity since his arrival upon the West Coast to carry out his promise in "Humoresque," but this performance succeeds in appeal and conviction anything that he has yet done. The young French actor is now in line for some heavy dramatic roles. There isn't a doubt but that he can carry them without obvious effort.

Grace Darmond is wisely situated in David's restless young wife whom whose instincts all run to "pretty things." Miss Darmond has not often had a human role at her disposal. She disappoints in no respect. One of the strongest positions in the story, Mary Tilden, David's unknown mother, is artistically played by Georgia Woodthorpe. Here is a character actress of wide experience who has made a success of pictures with one unusual stroke, her first effort.

Richard Henderson, "man about town," is suavely typical enough for anyone without ever suffering the bizarreness in the name of Wedgewood Nowell, whose recent heavy work has been notable.

Richard Headrick, Arthur Stuart Hull, Edward Peil, Fred Kelsey and Claude Payton are otherwise established.

"The Song of Life" has, in great measure, the heart interest that is today so highly rated.

MORAN OF THE LADY LETTY

Grauman's Rialto

A George Melford Production. "Moran of the Lady Letty," opens an indefinite run locally, this week and if virility and thrills are now desired by the public this engagement brings in carefully played parts fill out the list of players in this Lasky-Paramount photodrama.

ONE GLORIOUS DAY

Grauman's

Now and then a superlatively foolish story can, with clever technical effects, titles, etc., be made into a highly amusing picture. Such is the case of "One Glorious Day," the Walker Woods and A. B. Baringer original which James Cruze has produced for Paramount from the former's sprightly scenario.

The comedy, dealing with the theft of a man's body by an impish, formless soul who occupies it while the spirit of the other is enjoying an unhampered sojourn on ethereal planes, incorporates many unusual twists, some exceptional "timings" and admirable double exposure by Karl Brown.

Will Rogers gives one of his most attractive performances in Professor Ezra Botts, the unfortunate individual who, weightlessly allows his body and soul to separate, thereby altering the course of his entire life and his position in the community. Both the famous Rogers comedy and pathos are present in well balanced contrast, which is sure to please. We think that the "handsome young star" does well under Lasky management. Lila Lee is her best in the pleasant little heroine Molly Mcintyre, and Alan Hale in Ben Wedely is just such a conception of "Dandy" hely as "grace" all wealthy social circles.

John Fox is a riotous touch as EK, the cause of it all, and the cast is completed by Dorothy Levitt, Alice V..

The success of a picture on this order lies almost entirely with the direction and photography.

"One Glorious Day" is extraordinarily well done.

A DOLL'S HOUSE

California

Naziyoma in the the drama of Ibsen; a combination that embodies all that we have come to recognize as celluloid art! There add the interest resultant of the knowledge that "A Doll's House" is the Russian actress' first independent production, and we have before us an inevitable boxoffice attraction. As for the photoplay itself, in it there is nothing left to desire. Technically, it is a gem; Charles Bryant's direction, and Charles Van Enger's photography being worthy of the star's most exquisite art, which gives us the vibrant, beautiful Nora of that great matrimonial drama.

Never has the famous wife been given a lovelier, more alive interpretation than this one, and we remember well several worthy characterization of her (among which is listed one by Elsie Ferguson, screened a few years back); however, there is no avoiding the wonderful fact that Nazimovna is really the heroine of this entire human story. To attempt an analysis of the whimsical, childish creature who, nevertheless, holds in her heart the extensive learning of all dreams in love and not a little surplus wisdom, is merely to retell the tale of Nazimova's charm, to repeat our former admiration of her great achievement. Anyway, it is more important that in Nora she gives us not only her own unapproachable drama, but Ibsen's vital lesson as well. There can be no question as to Ibsen's heart interest in her latest portrayal. Alan Hale has not been more carefully.
NEW R.C. MANAGING DIRECTOR

Arrangements have been completed by R.C. Pictures Corporation, by which Patrick A. Powers has become financially interested in the corporation and its subsidiaries and will occupy the position of managing director.

It is the intention of the corporation to immediately enlarge its sphere of operations and to arrange for a still larger plan of production and distribution than has already been announced.

CHRISTY SIGNS BEAUTY CONTEST WINNER

Charlotte Stevens, beauty contest winner in Chicago, has arrived at the Christie Studios, where she will soon appear before a moving picture camera in a Bobby Vernon picture.

Miss Stevens was accompanied to Los Angeles by her mother, and they have secured a bungalow in Hollywood and expect to become regular residents.

ARRIVALS FROM THE CONTINENT

Norman Kerry and Mrs. Kerry are back in New York from Europe. Other arrivals include Rubye de Renier and James Kirkwood.

MACKAY IN APOLLO PRODUCTION

Martha Mackay will be seen opposite Jack Pollo in "The Thief," which Arthur Delmore is directing for Apollo Productions.

BEERY WITH PHILLIPS

Wallace Beery is interpreting a principal role in "The Soul Seeker," the current Dorothy Phillips starring vehicle.

LASKY TO HAVE WOMAN DIRECTOR

Lillian Trimbble Bradley, only woman stage director, who is responsible for many George Broadhurst productions, has turned her talents to the films, having joined the forces of Paramount in Los Angeles.

Victor Heerrman will direct Owen Moore's next picture for Selznick.

Sigrid Holmquist left for Europe recently. She has just finished a role in "My Old Kentucky Home," an eastern production.

Ashley Cooper has been engaged for a part in Norman Dwan's next all-star picture for R-C.

Otto Lederer and William Machin are exacting roles of consequence in the latest all-star Burston production which W. S. Van Dyke is directing.

Louie Durham is under contract with Nazi

TO FIGHT FILM FADES

Because inexperienced investors are said to have lost fifty millions during 1921 in film swindles, Director Alfred E. Green, formerly Mary Pickford’s director, and now with Lasky, has started a movement in Hollywood to prevent the sale of fake stock to the American public.

It is the idea of Mr. Green to ally the various film organizations of New York and Los Angeles, including the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, the M. P. Directors’ Association, M. P. Advertisers and Motion Pictures.

The plan is not to exclude new capital and legitimate companies with the intention of actually producing, but rather “to discover and warn of cut-and-dried fake companies,” declares Mr. Green, “give them pitiless publicity, thus warning the public so that no money will be subscribed. Our main object is merely to prevent the defrauding of the public, whose confidence we are striving to keep.”

“Today there are a hundred thousand persons in this country who have invested in wild-cat outfits from whom they never could get their penny’s return on their money,” warns the director, “which is incentive enough to cause the industry to start a move to stamp out the practice.”

CHAUDET CONFERING WITH ILLUMINATOR

Louis W. Chaudet, who is producing to prepare his own pictures, the first to be “The Pillagers” by W. C. Tuttle and Chaudet, is a busy man with well lighted pictures, and is receiving information from E. V. Morris, illuminating engineer of Hal E. Roach Studios and a member of the Electrical Illuminating Engineers Society.

NEW YORK SCREEN WRITERS TO HOLD BANQUET

The New York Photodramatists will hold their annual banquet on February 28th. A number of newspaper people will attend and a discussion on scenario writing is expected.

PEARL WHITE ON CONTINENT

Pearl White sailed for Paris recently. Upon her return, it is expected she will start work on her new serial for Pathe.

Jack Pollo, athlete, who is being featured by Apollo Productions, has entered the gymnastic championship bouts to be held February 24th at the Los Angeles Athletic Club.

Masonic bodies of Northern California gave a ball recently in honor of Betty Compson and Tom Moore at Truckee, California, where these stars and their supporting company have lost fifty millions during 1921 in film swindles, with a month filming scenes for “Over the Border,” based on a story by Sir Gilbert Parker.

George Melford’s Paramount production, “Moran of the Lady Letty,” presented by Jesse L. Lasky and co-starring Rudolph Valentino and Dorothy Dalton, opens the second week at the Apollo, which premiers engagement at Grauman’s Rialto on Sunday, Feb. 19th.

While Victor Herbert was being escorted through United States by Sol Lesser, he found some of his favorite personal compositions in the impromptu music libraries of musicians who were playing on the sets. He was keenly interested in the application of music as a director’s aide in controlling the emotions of the players. Mr. Herbert autographed his compositions for the musicians who were using them.

FILM NOTABLES AT REVIEW LUNCHEON

The annual luncheon of the National Board of Review was held recently at the McAlpin Hotel, New York. Foreign films were discussed and among those invited were John Emerson, S. L. Rothafell, Senator James J. Walker, Lillian and Dorothy Gish, May McAytley, Ethel Clayton, Mae Murray and William Farnum.

FOX HISTORY IN BOOKLET

Vivian M. Moses, New York publicity director for Fox, has compiled a booklet dealing with the history of the company from its beginning to its present day magnitude.

LOVELY IN PERSONAL APPEARANCES

Louise Lovely, featured with Roy Stewart in “Life’s Greatest Question,” will appear personally in conjunction with showings in a limited number of big houses.

CHARLES BUSY WITH CONTINUITY

Mike Charles, manager of the Apollo Productions, is busy preparing three stories to be used as future starring vehicles for Jack Pollo.

Diane Pascale danced the Argentine Tango at the recent opening of the new Masonic Temple in Hollywood.

Jack Mulhall started his stage career at the age of sixteen at Passaic, N. J., in “In the Palace of the King,” directed by James O’Neill.

At the annual meeting of the board of directors of the Glendale Chamber of Commerce, held recently, Harry Girard was made an honorary life member.

Doris Deane, who played opposite Frank Mayo in his last film, has returned from a brief trip to San Francisco accompanied by her mother.

Fred Kohler and Tarn Jefferson have been engaged to play prominent parts in “The Son of the Wolf,” by Jack London, the new Norman Dwan photoplay starring production at the R.C. Studios.

The New York Photodramatists Association will be held presently at the Hotel Cecil, New York. Motion picture editors have been invited to attend this dinner, get-together meeting to discuss the market and its possibilities.

J. E. Bowen, President and Manager of the Cosmopolitan Studios, will at the request of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, give a talk on the moving picture industry on Moving Picture Day, which has recently been set aside by that organization.

Constance Talmadge is making a motor tour of Southern California while Frances Marion is preparing the continuity of her next story, which will be filmed shortly at United Studios. The title of Miss Talmadge’s next vehicle has not been announced.

RUTH RENICK

COLE ON CENSORSHIP

“If censorship is necessary, it should be a Federal regulation and not a State censorship.” This opinion was voiced by Rufus S. Cole at a recent discussion at the National Republican Club with Harry W. Taft, presiding. “Great loss and difficulty,” said Mr. Cole, “are caused by the difference in regulations of different states, and the fact that no two censorship boards think alike.

“Which is satisfactory in the State of New York,” declared Mr. Cole, “does not meet the approval of the censorship board of the State of Pennsylvania; likewise what is approved in Pennsylvania may not be approved in New York. In my belief, the public is the best censor, for the public can be depended upon in the long run to reward with its patronage the clean picture plays.

“If censorship is to be continued, there should be a definite code of regulations so that the producers may know where they stand. If we must have censorship, it would be far better if we were under Federal regulation.”

POST FIGHTS HIMSELF

One of the scenes in the story of “The Masquerader,” the Richard Walton Tully production starring Guy Bates Post, will be a battle between Chico and Loder, both of these roles being played by Post.

AT THE UNITED STUDIOS

Marlon Fairfax has completed the script of Edison Marshall's "Snow Shoe Trail," which is to be Jane Novak's next starring vehicle under the auspices of Chester BENNETT Productions at United Studios. Camera work will commence about February 27th, and the company will proceed at once to a snow location, probably in Canada.

Mrs. James Whipple, wife of the assistant to Director James Young, who is making the final scenes of "Masked Rider," starring Guy Bates Post, makes her bow on the screen with a bit in "The Maskerader," as does her very young daughter, who made her debut as the infant in "Without Benefit of Clergy."

Hunter Strombury is busily engaged in the formation of the organization which will assist him in the production of the two-reel comedies in which Bull Montana is to star.

Allen Holubar has practically completed the cast which will appear in support of Dorothy Phillips in "The Soul Seeker," which Mr. Holubar is producing for presentation by First National. But one role remains uncast, that of principal female support to Miss Phillips. The company is now shooting interiors at United and will return to the schooner, "Apollo," at San Pedro late this week.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Three more "Snub" Pollard comedies were previewed this week and have since been shipped to New York: "Days Of Old," an oriental extravaganza suggested by the Arabian Nights tales: "Light Showers," a real estate comedy, and "Do Your Duty," a palms shop story.

Tom McNamara has arrived at the studios and is lining up his work with the new children's comedy company for which he will write the scripts.

The current Harold Lloyd comedy is nearing completion and four and a half reels are assembled. The picture is expected to run to five reels.

Hal E. Roach has signed Al Santell and Gilbert Pratt, who will alternate as directors for "Paul" Parrott in his one-reel comedies, production of which begins presently. Mr. Roach has now under consideration a leading lady for Mr. Parrott and will make his announcement shortly. Other support will be retained from the stock actors on the lot. Frank Young will be cameraman in the newly organized company.

The children's comedy company will commence production next week of its second picture, Bob McGowan, directing. Added scenes for the first picture, "Our Gang," were shot this week.

Hal E. Roach is interviewing cameramen to secure a second cameraman for the Harry "Snub" Pollard two-reel comedies, for which two films will be shot, one for domestic and the other for foreign trade.

Caldwell Preparing Next

Fred Caldwell, director of the Commonwealth Motion Picture Producers, is busily engaged in preparing the continuity for his next picture, "The Release," written by Mrs. A. B. Maescher, and starring Josephine Hill.

Terriss Starts on First

Tom Terriss has started work on the first of a series of Terriss Productions. Dolores Cassini will appear in this picture, which is under way in Fort Lee, N. J.

The Digest of the Motion Picture Industry

POSSIBLE CENSORSHIP FOR VIRGINIA

A bill creating a board of motion picture censors and vesting the board with broad powers has been introduced in the Senate of Virginia and a kindred measure will be offered in the House of Delegates. The board, like the New York Censor Commission, is to be appointed by the Governor.

VITAGRAPH MAKES ANOTHER PURCHASE

"Gypsy Passion," a French production, has been recently purchased by Albert Smith, president of the Vitagraph Company, from a French producing company. He has obtained the rights in Canada and the United States to this picture, founded on "Miarka, the Child of the Bear," by Jean Richépin. It will be released in March.

Edward Piel

Pathe Has Started Suit

Pathé has started suit in the New York Supreme Court against George Cobb, Helen Hosmer and Joseph Levesen, members of the State Motion Picture Commission, to determine the rights of Pathé News in publishing on the screen certain news features that were eliminated by the censor board. The scenes in question were of bathing girls which the censors refused to approve for the screen, although the photographs were published in daily newspapers. Whether or not the power of this censor board extends beyond eliminating immoral and improper scenes from a film play, whether or not it has the right to snip footage from a film newspaper that does not seem to them to be good material for the public—that is the question.

The fight will be to a finish, and since it is a precedent most persons are hoping some definite ruling will be made, so the world can know just how much power the Governor's board has as State censors.

"Darlin'" has been chosen as the release title for the new Rupert Hughes-Goldwyn picture.

Ralph Obenchain has completed his first motion picture, "The Main in a Million," produced by Charles R. Seeling, and negotiations are under way for a Los Angeles theatre to give the picture a California premier.

At Universal

Roy Atwell, well known for his interpretation of comedy roles, is being starred in a short reel comedy. Craig Hutchinson is directing. Atwell played with Marie Prevost in "Don't Get Personal."

Marie Prevost is on her way to Oakland, "Frisco and the North on a personal appearance tour. She recently completed "Kissed," and will return in time to start work on "The Night of Nights," tentative title of her forthcoming production.

William Wyler, who gave publicity in the company's executive offices in New York, has arrived at the West Coast studios. He is attached to the casting department, of which Fred Datig is the director.

Reginald Barker and his entire company recently returned from Belden, California, in Feather Canyon, where they were on location for two weeks.

Extensive remodelling of the "conning tower" is being hurried before the arrival of Carl Laemmle from the East. The president will occupy the big office on the tower overlooking the studio.

Thomas C. Drabkin, director-general, and his staff have recently moved into remodeled offices on the main floor of the administration building.

Two completed pictures are now in the cutting room soon to be released: "Kissed," Marie Prevost's most recent vehicle, and "The Way Back," starring Frank Mayo.

Priscilla Dean has finished "That Lass O' Lowrie," under the direction of Hobart Henley. Robert Ellis plays the principal role in Miss Dean's support, and other members of the cast include Beatrice Burnham, Kathryn McGuire, little Frankie Lee, Grace DeGarmo, R. O. Peckel, Dorothy Hagan and Evelyn McCoy. Miss Dean is vacationing in San Francisco, but will return presently to begin production on "Under Two Flags," the novel by Ouida in which she will interpret the exotic role of "Cigarette." A director has not yet been assigned.

Salome' Near Completion

Work on the Nazimova production of "Salome'" is nearing completion under Charles Bryant's direction at the United Studios.

Improving development of the scenic elements of the story, Mme. Nazimova has followed the pictorial lines and color of the artist, Audrey Beardsley.

Horner Acquires Luddy Film

Chaplin in Feature Length Comedies

"Pay Day" has been chosen by Charlie Chaplin, as the name of his new comedy, which is in two reels. After he makes one more short picture for First National, Chaplin proposes to devote himself to feature length comedies for United Artists.

Philippines to Have Censorship

According to the Manila Bulletin, the mayor of Manila has been requested by Governor-General Leonard Wood to appoint a commission of three to censor motion pictures there.

At Lasky’s

Scenes in a newspaper office and a Woman’s Club in a small town occupied the attention this week of the company making “Our Leading Citizen,” by George Ade, with Thomas Meighan as star. Alfred Green is directing this production and Lois Wilson has the feminine lead. Theodore Roberts and Mattie Appel appear in a cast.

Word received from Truckee, Cal., is to the effect that Fernby Stanlaws will bring this troupe, headed by Betty Compson and Tom Moore, back to the studio in a very short time.

The southern extremity of the state is the present locale of scenes for “The Dictator” in which Wallace Reid will star. James Cruze took a large company southward this week for South American episodes in this play by Richard Harding Davis. Theodore Kosloff plays a character role, with the villain interpreted by Alan Hale.

Under the direction of Rollin Sturgeon, Jack Holt and Bebe Daniels, co-stars in “Val of Paradise,” are now engaged in exterior scenes somewhere in Arizona and will probably be gone for ten days longer.

The 27th of February has been designated as the starting date for “The Gilded Cage,” in which Gloria Swanson will star. Powell will arrive shortly to play the leading male role and it will be a Sam Wood production.

The latter part of February will in all probability witness the initial production work on “Blood and Sand,” in which Rudolph Valentino will make his stellar debut.

New List of Agricultural Films

The Department of Agriculture at Washington has issued a new list of films. In it are included the following: “Exit Ascotia,” two reels; “Anne’s Aligrette,” one reel; “Fighting Western Pine Beetles,” one reel; “The Ox Wamble, A Fifty Million Dollar Tune,” one reel; “An Undesirable Alien,” one reel; “Bees, How They Live and Work,” one reel; “Dust ‘Em Right or Let ‘Em Bite,” one reel; “Dates, America’s New Fruit Crop,” one reel; “Potatoes, Early and Late,” one reel; “Sweet Potatoes, From Seed to Storage,” one reel; “Mixed Asphalt Pavements,” one reel; and “Building Bituminous Roads,” one reel.

Recent Universal Releases

Late Universal releases are: “The Face of Earth,” featuring Frank Mayo (5 reels);

Seventh episode of “The Trail of the Serpent,” of “With Stanley in Africa,” featuring George Walsh and Louise Lorraine (2 reels);

“His Inheritance Tax” (1 reel comedy).

International News Nos. 19 and 20.

“A One Horse Town,” featuring Harry Sweet (2 reels).

“The Trail of the Wolf,” featuring Laura LaPlante and Percy Pembroke (2 reels).

Slow motion photography as a means of securing comedy effects is one of the features of a new Hallroom Comedy.

“His Back Against the Wall,” “Whims of the Gods,” and “The Dust Flower,” directed by Rowland V. Lee for Goldwyn, will be released presently.

Guild to Celebrate Independence Week

The Independent Screen Artists’ Guild, composed of forty prominent producers and stars in the film world, makes the following appeal to the public of Southern California:

“We appeal to the public to continue their patronage of the new art of the cinema, that it may progress and not retrogress. We appeal that the worthy may survive, that the photoplay of moral theme and artistic merit may reach greater heights. And in return we pledge that our purpose shall be an unceasing effort to please the public and to justify the confidence which has been reposed in us.”

The Guild, standing steadfastly against monopolistic control, has invited the independent theatre owners throughout America to join them in their first national exhibitation to celebrate their independence during the week of February 15th.

The part the stars will play in this nationwide exposition will be a display of their best pictures.

The theatres in Los Angeles which have joined in the demonstration and will present these features are, The Kinema, Loew’s State, Miller’s, Clune’s and the Alhambra.

Mack Sennett has planned a big comedy campaign and has arranged to exhibit twelve comedies in Southern California and Arizona theatres. A few of the comedies are “By Heck,” “The Reckoners,” “Hurd Knocks and Love Taps,” “Call a Cop,” “She Siched by the Seaside,” “Made in the Kitchen,” “A Town Small Fol,” “Home Talent,” “Love Honor and Behave” and “Married Life.” Mabel Normand will be seen in a dozen of the “in the ving role of “Molly-O.”

Ben Turpin plans to celebrate by making some personal appearances at theatres in Southern California and Arizona where his latest films, The Sennett Productions, are being exhibited. Ben will appear on the screen in the local theatres in “Bright Eyes,” his very latest, “She Tore and Doughnuts,” and “Love’s Outcast.”

J. L. Frohnhim’s photoplays, “The Ten Dollar Raise,” and “Pilgrims of the Night,” will be exhibited.

Eight Charles Ray productions will be used, these being “Two Minutes to Go,” “A Midnight Bell,” “Semblance,” “Swimming Hole,” “19 and Phyllis,” “Peaceful Valley” and “5 Minutes From Broadway.” Charlie’s latest, “R. S. V. P.,” will be given at the first western showing at the West End Theatre, Santa Ana, on Washington’s birthday.

First National Specials, “All’s Button,” “All for a Woman, “Cabiria” and “The Sentimental Bloke” will be exhibited in many theatres.

Nearly a score of Schenck productions will be shown. Norma Talmadge’s “Love Redemption” will be the attraction at the King’s. “Connie’s” Talmadge will be represented by “Folly of the Pollies.” “Woman’s Place,” “Weding Bells,” “Lessons in Love,” “Mamma’s Affair” and a half dozen other productions.

Buster Keaton will celebrate by showing his latest comedies, “The Blacksmith,” “The Face-Look,” “The Banyan Tree” and “The Playhouse” in the Los Angeles district.

Earle Company Back in New York

The William P. S. Earle company has returned to New York from its trip to the subtropical Bahamas and Miami. Its members are now installed in the Biograph studios, where interiors are being filmed. Added to the company, in which Ward Crane and Virginia Lee have the principal parts, are Marco Magoneri, George Fawcett and Pauline Dempsey. The picture will be called “Destiny’s Isles.”

Screen Rumors

The Associated Press reports from London that Sarah Bernhardt has accepted an offer of American film interests to act for a series of films.

It is understood that Burton George, the director, is in Vienna arranging some scenes for an American company.

It is rumored that Fred Quimby and Jack Wooly have pooled their resources and are about to buy an interest in one of the large producing and distributing companies. Mr. Wooly was formerly manager of Realart, a position he held until that company was absorbed by Famous Players-Lasky. Mr. Quimby, since his resignation as general manager of Pathé, has had various film interests, among them an interest in the Dempsey-Carpenter pictures.

When Ferdinand Pinney Earle begins casting for the new production, Mr. Earle, one of the first actors he will interview will be Howard Davies, who has played the title role, both here and abroad.

It is said that Harry Garson is arranging a new release for the Clara Kimball Young productions. The report is that he has finished the Equity, made arrangements with Selznick, and is about to sign a new contract for Miss Young.

Hal Wilson and W. E. “Babe” Lawrence are securing starring Gains in a special production which Louis Burston is filming.

Clarence Burton and Edward Sutherland are enacting prominent roles in “The Ordeal,” in which Agnes Ayres will star for Paramount.

"MAN TO MAN"

(Universal)

"Opening on one of the islands of the South Seas, the action of 'Man to Man,' a Universal-Jewel, starring Harry Carey, soon shifts to a Western ranch. Not only is this one of the most entertaining of this star's pictures, but it also gives him opportunities for some of the best acting of his career.

The story is interesting **

"A striking feature of this production is the excellent photography, there are some fine lighting effects, many good shots of large herds of cattle and good views of a cattle stampede which is checked by a brush fire."—Moving Picture World.

"Here's one of the best Westerns of the season. It is almost up to Harry Carey's 'The Fox.' Coupled with a most interesting story are some wonderful exterior shots of the cattle country that are well worth seeing. And at the start the tropical storm among the palm-covered islands of the South Seas is a thrilling bit of technical execution  There is no padding and there is action every minute."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"A simple melodrama based upon the conflict between a persecuted hero who comes into his inheritance and a vicious villain determined to harass him at every opportunity is 'Man to Man,' Harry Carey's latest release  It is a type of picture which could get along very well without any romance. Whenever it does intrude you feel as if it was jammed in for the sake of balance. What is important is the wealth of physical action  The big punch which carries out the force of the title finds Carey and Le Moyne fighting hand-to-hand in the caves and crevices of a rocky cliff. Here the director has brought forth some good shadow photography as well as some effective lighting. It all suggests good suspense."—Motion Picture News.

"KINDRED OF THE DUST"

(First National)

"Mr. Walsh's latest Coast-made production gives certain proof, if any was needed, that he not only knows direction and the necessary touches for audience appeal, but that he understands and appreciates the value of originality of treatment. It is this fact that makes 'Kindred of the Dust' a rare piece of entertainment.

"It shows Miriam Cooper at her sentimentalist best; it contains splendid photography, including a novel 'focus-out' instead of a 'fade-out.'  There is sentiment, humor, rugged exteriors, a fine thrill, tense suspense and a fight realistic enough to startle anyone "—Motion Picture News.

"Through the medium of a story that has unquestionable general appeal, R. A. Walsh has provided First National with a release that will without doubt prove to be an unusually strong 'audience picture.'

"In injecting what might be called little artistic touches with well placed frequency, the introduction of several well staged 'punches' and with the aid of a highly expert cameraman, Walsh has greatly relieved what might be the only objection raised against the picture, that of familiarity of the picture manner, from all angles  It is a fine entertainment, with a distinct sociological angle. It is the kind of picture every-

A New Type of Leading Man

By Ted LeBerthon

The meritorious press-agentry has so often scribbled superlatively of gaudy fellows and giddy ladies and with such pronounced flatulence, that one is prone to stily chuckle at much that one reads concerning this or that cinema player. Many truly splendid and gals of the genus dumb-bell have received colored and perfumed compliments on silver salvers from magazine interviewers—so that those of us who are a bit droll and disillusioned regard film fame as a quite venal affair.

Yet in this most illusory of worlds, with all its grotesque and preposterous values, we scribblers sometimes see clearly—and on rare occasions may write what seems true to us.

Gaston Glass is a handsome young Frenchman, of quiet, determined mien who emanates culture, sapience and virility; he looks as though he might be usually quite outwardly composed and restrained, while sonnets and madrigals were decoting within him. He is related on his father's side to Victor Hugo, and his presence bespeaks the inherent culture of old lines. To sum this up, he seems to be a poetic fellow and—a gentleman.

He reads first rate literature and has a deep reverence for certain rare and singularly beautiful verse. Although he is an actor first, he is also a playwright, having composed many one-act plays for the Grand Guignol at Paris and a four-act comedy, "Who Said Love?" which may be performed this season in New York.

He was born in Paris and toured America for the first time a very few years ago with Mme. Sarah Bernhardt. He was with the divine Sarah a year and a half. He is thoroughly familiar with sound dramatic literature and has given commendable performances in such plays as Rostand's "Chanticleer" and "Cyrano de Bergerac." At the Paris Conservatory of Arts and Music, where he completed his academic education, he was awarded a much coveted prize upon writing a highly amusing and subtle comedy. Although in his early twenties, he distinguished himself in dramatic acting to the extent of attracting the attention, recognition and esteem of the leading Continental critics.

In America, he was attracted by the cinema, with which he had not even flirted in the old world. His first engagement was as leading man with Marguerite Clark in "Let's Elope." Since then he has appeared opposite Shirley Mason and Viola Dana, and won a high place in the cinema sun through his creditable performance in "The World and His Wife" and "Humoresque." This week he may be seen to considerable advantage at the Kinema in "The Song of Life."

He has just started work on a new photodrama under the direction of Edwin Carewe, and is in a happy and sunny mood, as this marks his first professional activity since his automobile was hit by a street car—he was confined to a sick-bed for six weeks, recovering from injuries.

There is considerable fine stuff in this good-looking Frenchman. I asked him to give me some idea as to what he would consider an ideal role in pictures, and he replied that he did not care to be so presumptions, as if he mentioned some ideal role in some ideal play it would be patent that he believed he could satisfactorily enact the role.

I touched upon music. His reply was: "I love so much in music, painting and sculpture but deeply regret that I have no talent for these arts."

He was rather reticent about expressing opinions on the trend of motion pictures, the ideal motion pictures—or his own future.

Once or twice I used the word "art" in speaking of the motion pictures, and he looked at me oddly and rather sadly; and as to his future, he was most delightfully unconcerned.

Gaston Glass is of too high an order of intelligence to have crystallized opinions. He has undoubtedly seen and known much of life, and has seen too many theories and conclusions exploded, to think of joining the interminable procession of "art" uplifters.

His is a sound and solid presence, despite the poetical aura; he seems to me markedly reflective and unhysterical—a spectator on a hill-top watching the whimsical, pathetic parade go by, with its cheap gauds and trumperies.

Unless I am roundly mistaken, he will never become a Rotary Club or Chautauqua

Contemporary Criticisms

TWO KINDS OF WOMEN
(Robertson-Cole)

"The kind of a woman who can," contrasted to the kind who can't, is rather sternly characterized by Pauline Frederick in this picture of California ranch life which shows woman in a comparatively new office, that of ranch owner and manager. * * *

"There is one shot, that for scenic and lighting splendor is one of the most strikingly beautiful ever seen on the screen."—Moving Picture World.

"It may seem strange to picturegoers, to discover Pauline Frederick in a Western. That she is able to give color and personality to the character of a breezy ranch owner goes without question * * *

"There is some good incident established when this Eastern girl arrives on the ranch and determines to manage it in her own way * * * Interpersed with the intimate scenes are a group of marvelously beautiful long shots—ones in particular showing a lake silhouetted against the distant mountains.

"The picture is a colorful Western even though it goes over a beaten track in its development."—Motion Picture News.

Pauline Frederick surely can ride and play the daughter of the West. In addition to offering an interesting and entertaining photoplay, R-C presents Miss Frederick in a new guise and the part fits her as though made for her. It has enough action and thrilling situations for a serial, and, crowded into six reels, it is a real thriller * * *

"There are no objectionable sex situations nor anything not fit for the young mind * * * "—Exhibitors Trade Review.

It is reported that D. W. Griffith has practically completed a deal with William Fox for the foreign rights to "Two Orphans." Until negotiations are closed the picture's producer cannot sell any foreign territory on "Orphans of the Storm" because those rights are controlled by the Fox organization.

Griffith was recently in Chicago in connection with the film's premiere there.

placed nor offered a more consistent, fitting performance than he does opposite the star in Torvald, her indulgent, kind-hearted husband, whose lothsome selfishness comes more from misunderstanding than from any fundamental weakness. Hale is one hundred per cent the characterizer of Torvald.

Wedgewood Novello is also very good in Krogstad, the unhappy money lender, as is Nigel de Brulier as Torvald's friend.

favorite, will never palaver around feeble-minded clubwomen, or become interested in "the higher life." He looks as though he enjoys life with the ardour of a bon vivant, a student, and a connoisseur. The American screen needs more such intelligent actors—and less horn-rimmed ex-convicts and putted ex-haberdashers.

Whether Glasson Glass, with his handsome, classic features and sensitive, poetic personality, will become a popular favorite—is to me problematical. He may be a bit "over the heads" of the gala in the hinterland, who at present writing seem to prefer pomaded fox-trotters, ukulele players and saxophonists.

But you never can tell. Allow Monsieur Glass a few romantic roles, and the gala's styles in leading men may change.

CENSORSHIP DISCUSSION HELD

At the luncheon of the National Republican Club held in New York recently, an interesting discussion on censorship was held, the topic being "State Regulation of Motion Pictures: Public Morals and the Film." Among the speakers were Rupert Hughes, Rufus S. Cole, Charles Urban, Joseph Leventon, Prof. Samuel B. Heckman, Mrs. Clinton B. Smith, Mace Murray and Miss du Pont.

MAKING STEAMSHIP SCENES FOR COMEDY

Director Scott Sidney of the Christie forces is working his company nights to film comedy scenes of a steamer on fire at sea, the scenes being photographed on Christie's rocking steamer, while the exterior day scenes will be filmed on the Catalina steamer.

Neal Burns is featured in the comedy, with Josephine Hill and Alice Mason playing prominent supporting roles.

KNOWLES COMPLETING "BOHEMIAN GIRL"

The latest Harley Knowles cinematic play, "Bohemian Girl," is nearing completion in London. The cast consists of Ellen Terry, Ivor Novello, Gladys Cooper and Aubrey Smith.

Why Studios "Close Down"

It is both notable and significant that most of the studios which have NOT "closed down" during the last year have been regular clients of the Photoplay Sales Department of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation.

Four years ago we expressed the opinion that producers who consistently select their plays because of their intrinsic screenability, rather than because of their "literary" value, were destined to achieve and maintain financial success.

And now, four years later, we hold tenaciously and justifiably to the same opinion.

Nor have the producers who have regularly come to Story Headquarters for their stories had occasion to differ from that opinion. They have been too busy making good pictures for a market that is starving for good pictures to entertain the thought of "closing down."

It is not the policy of the Palmer Sales Department to urge the purchase of one story at a high price (just to make a sale), but rather to endeavor to select material that will make for continuous successful production.
You can make money by writing photoplays, stories, plays, novels, jokes, verse, greeting card sentiments, etc.

It is not easy—but it is being done by many folks, and you can do it.

The Editor Weekly will show you how—tell you what and how to write, and where to sell it.

Jack London once said: "I may not tell one-hundredth part of what The Editor did for me, but I can say that it taught me how to solve the stamp and landlady problems."

Mary Roberts Rhinehart says: "The Editor helped to start me, cheered me when I was down, and led me in the straight path to literary success."

For 27 years The Editor has been the friendly adviser of aspiring writers.

The Editor gives the following in each weekly issue:

—news of new magazines and their manuscript requirements, and news of photoplay, novel, essay, letter, title, short story, poetry, play and all other literary prize competitions

—news of changes in editorial requirements, and other news of the week of interest to authors who have manuscripts to sell

—articles on the technique of fiction, play, and photoplay writing, and on other interesting and helpful aspects of literary work

—autobiographical letters on the conception, genesis, development, writing, and selling of short stories, novels, plays, and photoplays, by well-known authors —scores of brief, practical "experience items," by authors, telling of the writing and selling of their work, prices received, etc.

—definite information regarding literary property rights, copyright, contracts for playing, etc.

The Editor will bring the atmosphere of literary accomplishment into your workroom, and put your feet squarely in the path to literary success.

“ENGLISH WRITER'S COLOSSAL IGNORANCE”

An article in oh so familiar a line appears in the latest Australian “Everyone's Variety” at hand.

The sarcasm of the press toward its partners-in-crime is proverbial—and amusing.

Mr. George F. Todd, Australian Films, Ltd., asks whether we receive a copy of the ‘Hepworth Magazine,’ a publication emanating from one British producer, and for which a charge of fourpence is made—a goodly sum to pay for a house organ dealing with Hepworth films. ‘Maybe the contributed articles,’ says Mr. Todd, ‘enable it to sell freely at fourpence, as they are, in parts, of curious interest, as witness the following under the heading of World Market for British Films’.

Australia, too, is beginning to realize the joy of the kinema. The field has scarcely been touched in this country. More kinemas are needed, and when the new railway has opened up the country and the millions of new settlers are working, they will want something in the way of pictures, even if it is nothing more than the travelling kind that did such excellent work in the war.

Add to this our smaller possessions—New Zealand, Newfoundland and Tasmania—all actual or potential markets for our British films.

If we are driven to apply ad valorem tax in self defense, to keep out foreign films, pressure must be brought to bear on the Commonwealth to apply it also; but our film magnates, makers, renters, buyers and exporters have all got to “think big.”

"Undoubtedly Miss Christabel Lowndes—Yates, the writer of the article is "thinking big" when she deals with the Antipodes."

"Turning to page 24, one finds a page devoted to letters to the editor, under the caption ‘Unsolicited,’ and it is more than amusing to note the attention the editor (Cecil Palmer) gives to this page, when we read that from Over Yonder the editor has received some copies of the Union Photoplayer, an Australian weekly devoted to the kinema, and from which he prints several extracts which show that the Hepworth post-war productions are being introduced to Australian audiences via Union Theatres.”

RECENT PATHE RELEASES

Late Pathe releases are:

"Kiss Me, Henry!" one of the features of Pathe Review No. 144. "At Bay," starring Florence Reed, is the next Pathe playlet.

A Re-Suggestion

There are few departments of the motion picture industry that have not suffered keenly from the two most recent film tragedies, largely as a direct result of the deplorable angles taken by the press upon the situations. Besides being subjected as a class to the indignities crowded upon us by hundreds of highly imaginative, scandal-scattering, sob writers and the inevitable detrimental effect upon public opinion, which always follows in the wake of such attacks, several producing companies have had to endure huge financial losses when exhibitors, through various censor board regulations, have found it necessary to cancel the runs of elaborate productions presenting individuals concerned in the cases, or sometimes merely suspected of being concerned. It is, therefore, easy to perceive that being much in the public eye, we are not only doomed to sustain the unhappy consequences of our professional brother’s indiscretions but of their alleged missteps as well. That is, we are doomed to such a fate if we tolerate it. Let it be hoped that the third industry will display sufficient resourcefulness to combat any such threatening condition.

As an invaluable solution to this problem we refer to the Character Bond, a suggestion made months ago by this publication, which, had it been adopted at that time by the Producers Association, would have eliminated seventy-five per cent of the moral and monetary difficulties which have fairly seethed about us since the first newspaper report upon the Arbuckle affair. Not only would a demand upon the part of the producing company for a character bond from each and every artist in its employ diminish the chances taken by that organization upon irresponsible people and protect itself from any financial loss from the acts of its employees, but it would also render impossible the condemnation of a studio, not to mention an entire industry, for the mistakes of an individual.

When we consult statistics we realize that for every picture person who goes wrong there are half a dozen bank clerks and commercially engaged citizens in the same boat. But when has the banking business been ostracized from decent society because of the errors of its various attaches? No-syndicate of newspapers assumes to question its whole structure on that account. And it is because bank employees are individually under heavy bonds and stringent moral obligations that the many are protected from the effect of the few misguided outlooks among them.

We believe that the average actor or director with nothing to lose and everything to gain would be greatly gratified to supply such a guarantee of his life and intentions, knowing that a step of this kind would secure his own position as well as the confidence of those for whom he might work.

The film industry will have to come to this idea as a part of its business routine or be unnecessarily injured further by the injustice of an hysterical populace.

—F. R.

"Foolish Wives"

Mission

Universal’s much heralded spectacle, “Foolish Wives,” has, after nearly two years of preparation, been released to the extreme gratification of the profession and the increased curiosity of the public.

Erich Von Stroheim, author-director-actor, who conceived and executed this most startling pageant of life in Monte Carlo, has outdone all late attempts toward the lavish in picture production with this offering to such an extent as to render its description nearly impossible in a necessarily curtained review.

However, his Monte Carlo, an exact replica of the original, so we are told by those who know, is a fairyland more enticing, more extravagant than any that has yet come to the celluloid. The gay crowds indulging in typically Monte Carlo sports, the ever changing ocean by day and the thousands of merry lights, motors and gaming tables of the Casino at night lend educational value as well as brilliance to the production. There, however, perhaps unfortunately, its beneficial influence terminates abruptly.

The Von Stroheim story which strings this delightful exhibition together may be written around human representatives of Europe’s great degenerate class and, if such is the case, perhaps its screening is justified this time; but once is enough—for America.

The satiated Continent, which is said to feast at keenest joy upon all that is filthy in entertainment, may reimburse Universal for this picture, a tribute which our country will never pay, due to the fact that, as a whole, it will mightily disapprove the salacious subjects harped upon in the presentation of this not overly weighty theme. The fact that the arch villain, whose five unworthy conquests form the plot’s basis, is finally condemned, killed and thrust down to a significant level, scarcely saves the dignity of the thought behind the lesson, and, indeed, it is doubtful if the moral will be noted anyway, least of all by our cinema reformers. Nor will the artistic interpretations of the cast excite that which is repulsive and disgusting in the story to those without the profession.

From a technical consideration the report upon “Foolish Wives” varies. Its gorgeous sets and effects have been mentioned in superlatives. Its photography is exquisite; its detail has been convincingly looked after.

Film Capital Production Notes

“A LADIES’ MAN,” FIRST MONTANA COMEDY

Hunt Stromberg, who has withdrawn from the active production of the Doris May pictures, to make his own independent productions, announces “A Ladies’ Man,” as his first comedy to launch Bull Montana as a star. Negotiations and a long-term contract with Montana were closed last week, with Douglas Fairbanks representing Montana’s business interests.

Stromberg’s entrance into the ranks of the independent producers is in line with the plans and policies which provide for the acquisition of other feature units to be announced in the near future. Mr. Stromberg still retains his financial interests in the Doris May productions, which he founded and organized last June, and which are to be continued for production and distribution by Robertson-Cole.

“A Ladies’ Man,” was written by Stromberg, and production is now under way at the United Studios.

The personnel of the production staff will be announced shortly.

GERSON CORPORATION MAKING RURAL COMEDIES

The Paul Gerson Pictures Corporation of San Francisco will start production February 20th on twelve two-reel, rural comedies, under the direction of Robert Eddy, who directed the original Toonerville Trolley Comedies. Mr. Eddy has brought the original cast from New York, headed by Dan Mason, who created the part of the skipper, and Wilma Webster, who played Katrinka. The new comedies will be of similar nature.

“PETE MAN” HAS PRISON PREMIERE

A national premiere of a film probably without parallel took place the other day at the Arizona State Prison when the first showing was made of “Pete Man,” recently produced at Universal, and starring Herbert Rawlinson.

The author of the story is Louis Victor Eytinge, a life-termer in the prison who has served more than fourteen years of his sentence. He is disputably the best known convict in America because of his proven talents. The picture was first shown at the prison as a compliment to him.

RENEW CONTRACT

R-C Pictures and Jury’s Imperial Pictures of Great Britain recently renewed a distribution contract which gives the latter the R-C output in England, for two more years.

DAWN IN YOSEMITE

Norman Dawn with his company is in Yosemite National Park, where he expects to remain for two weeks, filming exteriors for his forthcoming R-C production, a Jack London story entitled, “The Son of the Wolf.”

Frank Lloyd is progressing with the cutting of “The Duchess of Langeais,” which Norma Talmadge recently completed at United Studios.

NEW DEVELOPING MACHINE

A developing machine invented by L. J. Simmons is being demonstrated at the American Machine and Foundry Co., in Brooklyn, N. Y. The machine is said to be able to develop and dry film at the rate of 8,000 feet an hour under control of one operator. The company holding the invention is controlled by Pittsburgh capitalists.

NORMAN DAWN

Who is to produce a series of Norman Dawn Productions for Robertson-Cole.

  - Directed by Norman Dawn
  - Wheeler Oakman
  - Judith Roberts
  - Thomas Jefferson
  - Fred Stanton
  - Arthur Jasmine
  - Fred Kohler
  - Ashley Cooper
  - San Allen
  - Eagle Eye

ABRAMSON BUSY WITH COOGAN TITLES

Max Abramson, scenario and title writer, has been engaged by the Jackie Coogan productions to assist in making titles for “Trouble,” Jackie’s latest cinemadrama. Mr. Abramson acted in a like capacity with Jackie’s “My Boy” feature. The “Trouble” film will be ready for exhibition within several weeks and in the meantime, work is being rushed on a new story for Jackie, actual filming of which will commence in two weeks at United Studios.

COMMONWEALTH NOTES

The title of the third picture, produced by Fred Caldwell for the Commonwealth Production Picture Producers, has been changed from “The Dominating Eyes,” to “Caught.” Mr. Caldwell is now casting for the fourth picture of the series of twelve, being released through the Affiliated Picture Enterprises.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Harold Lloyd took the last scenes this week of his current comedy which will probably be released as “Grandma’s Boy.” The comedy, which will be previewed as a five reeler, will have its first public showing presently, followed by two others in addition to serial studio runs of the picture’s final editing. Mr. Lloyd will take a three days’ rest and then commence his first comedy under his new contract with Pathe, for which sets will cover the entire dark stage.

Harry “Snub” Pollard finished this week an office picture, and is now working on two comedies to be completed next week when Mr. Pollard will commence his two reeilers, William Beaudine, directing. Eight Pollard comedies have been shipped East since Jan. 1st.

Tom McNamara, cartoonist of the comic strip, “Us Boys,” has his first script ready for the children’s comedy company, ”shooting,” to commence this week. “Sunshine Sammy,” and three other youngsters, will be in the cast and the animals to be featured include “Cork,” the Pony, “Dinah,” the mule, “Till,” the bull dog and several domestic fowls. Bob McGowan will direct.

“Paul” Parrott begins next week the making of his one-reel comedies, the first to have the working title of “The Joiner.” Gilbert Pratt directs his first picture; Al Santelli, the second; the two to alternate in Parrott’s direction. Hal Roach will shortly announce Mr. Parrott’s leading lady.

AT THE INGE STUDIOS

Completion of Thomas H. Ince’s, “The Brotherhood of Hate,” which Lambert Hill- yer is directing, has been delayed by bad weather. Most of the scenes remaining to be taken are exteriors.

Casting has started for “Someone to Love,” a new C. Gardner story, soon to start production under the direction of John Griffith Wray.

The editing of Leah Baird’s second independent feature, “The Devil Drivers,” was completed this week under the supervision of Arthur F. Beck. A third Leah Baird production will commence soon.

Suicide Tourneur’s feature, “Lorna Doone,” will be completed within the next two weeks. Two months will probably be required in editing the production.

AT UNIVERSAL

Craig Hutcheson is working on “A Movie Mixup,” with Roy Atwell in the starring role. Supporting the star in the short-reel comedy is Louise Sorel, C. M. Beicher, Ethel Ritchie, Charles L King and J. B. Russell.

Edward Laemmle is engaged in shooting the sixth chapter of “The Days of Buffalo Bill.”

“Second Hand Rose,” starring Gladys Walton, was previewed recently at the studio. Jack Donohue, Maurice Hink, Walter Perry and others support Miss Walton, who will be seen as an Irish waif in a Jewish pawnshop.

Stuart Payton and Tod Browning are preparing stories for their forthcoming productions.
"A BLIND BARGAIN"
California

It is probably because of the fact that Lon Chaney's best and most sensational work has been along the lines of the grotesque and unnatural that Goldwyn continues to place him in hair-raising characters and impossible stories. These latter, including "A Blind Bargain," this author have very little legitimate drama to their credit and are greatly lacking from a human angle, but—the barabarous strain, obvious in most children and varying present in all humanity, which still sends us forth in search of uncivilized thrills albeit second-hand ones, receives the most exaggerated melodrama with enthusiasm not to say with gloating. Even the phrase, "suspense and terror," packs them in, and because of this fact, it still has a definite place in our screen entertainment.

"A Blind Bargain," by Barry Pain, is a weird story of a mad surgeon who attempts to prove Darwin's theory of evolution by experimenting with blood transfusion between apes and human beings. The horror of his victim's fate, in itself extremely blood-curdling, is lent an even shriller tone by J. G. Hawks' arrangement of it.

Director Wallace Worsley has kept the tempo of his players consistent throughout the production which is entirely well handled, and Norbert Brodin's camera-work is brilliant in places. Some superior color work is effectively employed in one sequence.

Chaney occupies two distinct positions in this picture, devoting to each of them all the vivacity which has brought him to the fore in the gruesome things. He plays Dr. Lamb, the diabolical scientist who knows only cruelty and ambition with a staccato swing that almost mystifies the audience in an instance or so. Chaney also interprets the hunchback, or Lamb's second disastrous experiment, whose man's mind has not been affected by the transfused blood, which has caused him to assume the proportions and appearance of an ape. His agile use of his powerful forearms is so realistic as to approach the masterly in imitation. That this hideous creature retains the gentle, human spirit that was originally his, makes the role a departure in its line. These characteristics are equally strong, the work of a pronounced artist.

Raymond McKee performs sympathetically as the sincere juvenile, Robert Sandell, who is willing to sacrifice all things for an invalid mother, and thus comes under the doctor's power. McKee is invariably appealing in this type of work.

Pauline Lord adds an invaluable touch to the story with her illusive portrayal of Mrs. Lamb, the doctor's cowed but rebellious wife.

Jacqueline Logan as Angela, Robert's sweetheart, Virginia True Boardman, Aggie Herring and Virginia Madison, complete the cast.

"A Blind Bargain" is absolutely unrelied by comedy or any lighter element. We shall be interested to see how it draws over the country.

Arthur Jasmine is enacting a role of prominence in a facsimile London story of old Alaska, "The Son of the Wolves," which Norman Dawn is directing for R-C pictures.

LILLIAN LEIGHTON exceled three years ago. Her latest vehicle, a done-to-death story of dishwatery consistency, in an Anthony Paul Kelly adaptation of a novel by Andrew Sourat, including not a single diverting situation and certainly no different one. A reel into the picture and everything is clear step by step through to the end. There is no climax worthy of the name and very little sympathy for the weak-kneed characters. Neither the scenario nor Albert Parker's direction provide any sort of suspense. The photography and scenic effects alone are pleasing in all respects. The star in Ginger Dobson of Jamaica, West Indies, is lovely to look upon and is afforded the best opportunity in the picture which is not saying anything to speak of. Miss Talmadge will always attract by the sheer force of her personality and charm, but her talents are not advantageously utilized in the "innocent ingenue" kind of thing. Ginger is more much fascinating to observe, as she have intimated, than she is admirable or even natural.

As for Harrison Ford's leading male situation, the drunken resistance man, Clifford Stanish, it is anything but fortunate and is entirely uninteresting. It is impossible to care what becomes of him.

Monta Blue is a minor heavyweight with an attention-holding swagger and the cast is further filled out by Cooper Cliffe, Ida Water, man Michael Barnes, E. Fernandez and Fraser Couler.

Joseph Schenck presents "Love's Redemption" through Associated First National.

"LOVE'S REDEMPTION"
Kinema

We would like to register a large complaint that one of America's most representative and capable dramatic actresses, Norma Talmadge, should be compelled, through someone's lack of foresight, to star in a series of conventional hokum that is not only a discredit to her ability but a grave injury to her reputation, almost un-

"BACK PAY"

Fannie Hurst should feel gratified that at last, after various attempts, she has succeeded in getting one of her stories filmed, which retains the Hurst spirit right through the process. The one in question is "Back Pay," a Cosmopolitan production which, after its audience has been introduced to "Star Dust," is a noteworthy achievement sure to be thankfully received by the admirers of J. A. author.

The fact that Frances Marion's adaptation of it moves with pronounced deliberation has been advantageously utilized by Frank Borzage's poetic direction which has made almost every line of the scenario count with the human interest touches which brought him fame in "Humoresque." The young director undertook no slight task in the production of this story of a girl whose crepe de chine soul leads her to great sin without rendering her unsympathetic. Right through the most most negative situations his subtle management leads his players without the slightest indulgence or offense to his audience. We are forced to the idea by accept the idea that Borzage is a coming master.

The famous soft focus is almost exclusively used by Chester Lyorns, who obtains some extraordinarily beautiful effects with it in his photography. Never have we witnessed better color combinations, nor more generally attractive rural locations than those he enhances in loveliness. This picture's only unattractive feature is its cutting which continually falls to identify the title

Speakers.

Seeena Owen, at her very best, troupes convincingly and artistically through the role of Harriet Bevins, the girl who wants luxury before love. Her long journey toward destruction and final turn about for her starting place is a story of a reform which lent Interest through its reasonableness.

Matt Moore as Jerry Newcombe is satisfying in all respects although we have come to anticipate with keenest joy his comedy efforts. Here he is the sincere country lad, whose love absolves all prejudice.

J. B. Barney Sherry excelled his best recent role in Charles G. Wheeler of Wall street, a worldly soul, who is not bereft of all decent instincts on that account. (Modern playwrights, please note.)

The remaining positions are filled by Ethel Duray, Charles Craig and Jerry Sinclair.

It is but rarely that the decided moral les-on put over intelligently and with any inclusion of art in the process. That accomplishment is to be greatly appreciated here.

PHOTOPLAYWRIGHTS HOLD MEETING

At the Photoplaywrights' meeting held recently in the Brack Shops, two original photoplays were read: "Peaches of Arizona Kid," by Alex McLaren, and "A Bit of Life" by Frank Winter.

The membership decided upon the Norma Talmadge production, "Love's Redemption," as the picture to be reviewed at the February 27th meeting, on which date a set of books donated by the author on photoplaywriting, will be given as a prize to the member who wins the club's dramatic situation contest.
LEWIS JOINS PALMER CORP.

The Palmer Photoplay Corporation has added another screen writer to its staff of instructors, Eugene B. Lewis.

Mr. Lewis was previously connected with the Thos. H. Ince Studio, and wrote two original stories, which were accepted. One of these was released under the title of "What Every Woman Learns," starring Enid Bennett, and was acclaimed by the League for Better Pictures as one of the six best productions of the year.

Later Mr. Lewis was with the H. B. Warner Company, and his last engagement before coming to the Palmer organization was with the Famous-Players-Lasky organization, where he wrote "The Love Special" for Wallace Reid, and "The Little Clown" for Mary Miles Minter.

OAKMAN WITH R-C PICTURES

Wheeler Oakman has been engaged to interpret the leading male role in "The Son of the Wolf," which Norman Dawn is filming for R-C Pictures.

HOLUBAR SELECTS ASTOR

Allen Holubar has engaged Gertrude Astor as principal feminine support to Dorothy Phillips in the starring production of "The Soul Seeker," for presentation through First National.

Warner Baxter is supporting Alice Calhoun in "Locked Out," her current Vitagraph production.

Eagle Eye is playing a prominent role in Norman Dawn's next R-C photoplay, "The Son of the Wolf."

Helen Raymond will soon be seen at the California in a prominent supporting role, in Katherine Macdonald's "Her Social Value."

Mrs. Anna Townsend will appear in support of Harold Lloyd in his most recent comedy for Pathe entitled "Grandma's Boy."

Irving Cummings' first assistant director, J. Crimiem Zeldler, and his sister, Leatrice Joy, will spend a week in El Paseo visiting relatives.

Sam Allen and Phil Ford will be seen in "According to Hoyle," starring David Butler, soon to be released by Western Pictures Exploitation Company.

Phillip V. Kroha, who has been associated with the Richard Walton Tully organization in various capacities for several years, and who has been here since Mr. Tully began the filming of "The Masquerader," has been made manager of Mr. Tully's western production headquarters at United Studios.

Jack Muhall, Texas Guinan and Ethel Clayton were guests of honor recently at a party given by members of the "Shuffle Along" company at the Sixty-third Street Music Hall, New York.

Another film colony wedding took place here recently when Edward M. Kimball was married to Mrs. Alyse Hunt Whitaker. Mr. Kimball, who is a well known actor himself, is perhaps even better known as the father of Clara Kimball Young, while his bride is a writer of wide reputation.

MORANTE SIGNS RICH

Vivian Rich, recently of the William Fox forces has been signed by the Morante Company of Long Beach to play leading parts opposite George Chesebro in the series of Mounted Police features being made by that organization.

NEW COSMOPOLITAN CONTRACT FOR RUBENS

Alma Rubens, who recently recovered from a severe attack of influenza, has signed a new contract with Cosmopolitan Productions, that will begin work on her first picture as soon as the doctor will permit.

Al Reite is doing special location work for Allen Holubar.

Hamilton Longfellow completed recently the portrayal of an Egyptian in "Salome" with Nazimova.

Edith Kennedy has been engaged by Cosmopolitan Productions to write the script for the next Marion Davies vehicle.

Dick Sutherland will appear in support of Harold Lloyd in Lloyd's latest comedy, Grandma's Boy," about to be released.

Harry Todd and Buddy Ross are included in the cast of "According to Hoyle," a David Butler production about to be released.

MEXICAN PRODUCER VISITING OUR STUDIOS

Jesus Enriquez Topete is making a tour of the motion picture studios of California. Senor Topete has been engaged in making films in Mexico City for several years and is at present producing a series of pictures for the Mexican government.

SEMON RESPONSIBLE FOR NEW TEMPLE PROGRAM

The benefit vaudeville performance given recently in the new Hollywood Masonic Temple was due mostly to the efforts of Larry Semon, Vitagraph comedy star, under whose direction the production was staged. Among the offerings secured by Mr. Semon were the acts of T. Roy Barnes and Mrs. Barnes, footlight stars; Ora Carew, Mr. and Mrs. King Vidor, Tom Mix, Theodore Roberts and others.

INCE GOES TO NEW YORK

Thomas H. Ince, accompanied by Mack Sennett and J. Parker Read, Jr., are in New York for a series of conferences with First National officials and other prominent individuals in the picture industry. This will be Mr. Ince's first absence for more than two weeks from his studios at Culver City in two years.

BOB CHANDLER

Bert Lytell was in New York recently in the course of his around-the-country tour.

Among late arrivals in Jacksonville, Fla., are William Fox and his family. Fox is expected to go to Miami and Palm Beach.

President A. E. Smith of Vitagraph is expected to arrive here shortly. Mr. Smith is accompanied by Mrs. Smith, known in pictures as Jean Paige.

Eugene O'Brien acted as judge of costumes recently at the fifth annual dance review masquerade and movie ball, which took place at Terrace Garden, New York.

"The Sheik" (picture version) is to have a sequel. It is to be produced for Paramount by the same director, George Melford, and is called "Burning Sand," a story by Arthur Wein.

Jack Muñhall has deserted the films temporarily, and is now at his old home in New Jersey, where he is considering offers to reappear on the stage.

Charles Kenyon, who recently finished "Fane," a new photoplay for Goldwyn production, was a newspaper writer before he became a playwright. He first won fame for himself by writing "Kinding," a stage play.

HOMER AND WESTOVER WRITING NOVEL

The usual process of adapting a motion picture from a novel is to be reversed in the case of "The Man From Hell's River," the Earle Williams production just completed at the Vitagraph Studios. Lottie Horner and Clyde Westover are now at work on a book-length novel of this story, having written the original script for Mr. Williams from an idea suggested by Mrs. Earle Williams.

SCREEN KIDDEE ENTERTAINS

Baby Jack Condon gave a party recently at the Kramer Dancing Academy. Only seven Kiddees, who have worked with him in pictures, were invited. The guests were Nancy Caswell, Billy Condon, Bernard Berger, Laddie Earl, Jane Miskimin, Johannie Hatton, Geraldine Condon, Tula Bell, True Boardman, Miriam Beliah, Lawrence Licalzi, Newton Hall, Anna May Bilson, William Belfish, Lilian Guenther, Grace Bennett and Raymond Conners. All were in costume, the host dressed as Cupid.

RIES TO SPECIALIZE IN ULTRA-SPEED PHOTOGRAPHY

Park J. Ries announces that he is now prepared to do Ultra-Speed Photography. Mr. Ries has made successful photographs from one hundred and twenty-eight pictures to three hundred pictures per second.

"Hawthorne of the U. S. A.," filmed at the Lasky studio in 1918, gave Ruth Renick her first cinema role.

Richard Walton Tully's "Bird of Paradise" is being given a successful revival at the Garrick Theater, London, with Willette Kershaw in the principal role.

"Fredericus Rex," in four parts, showing the life of Frederick the Great, was recently completed by the Csepey Film Co. of Berlin, Germany.

Raymond McKee wishes to announce that there is no truth in the assertion that he and Miss Frances White, musical comedy star, are engaged.

Charles Stevenson will be seen opposite Harold Lloyd in the heavy in "Grandma's Boy." Lloyd's recently completed comedy, about to be released.

Violet Schramm is back in Hollywood again, having recently returned from Salt Lake City, where she has been playing leads with the Wilkes Stock Company.

Frances Marion, continuity writer for Norma and Constance Talmadge, has temporarily closed her office at United Studios and has gone to New York for a short vacation.

"A Stage Romance," starring William Farnum and his first production since his return to America from his European vacation, has been completed and will be released in March.
the regular performance. John B. Clymer is credited with the continuity. It was directed by W. S. Van Dyke and photographed by Arthur L. Todd.

Irving M. Lesser and Mike Rosenberg will hold presently a preview of Roy Stewart's new picture, "Ridin' Wild," which was written by H. H. Van Loan.

AT VITAGRAPH

Selection of William Duncan's next story will await the arrival of President A. E. Smith from New York.

It is expected that Larry Semon's new studio will be completed in time for him to film interior scenes for his current comedy.

"Land of Love's Dreams," the initial one-reeler produced by Warren A. Newcombe, has been retitled "The Enchanted City."

ANCHOR BRIEFS

J. A. Kent has been appointed by the Anchor Film Distributors, Inc., to handle all territory east of Chicago, while P. B. Dana, formerly with Arrow, will travel over the district west of Chicago.

Robert Gordon will be featured in Eugene Manlove Rhodes' story, "Steps of Light," which Ivor McFadden will produce for release through Anchor, the first of six Rhodes' stories to be made into films dramas by Mr. McFadden.

The third of the New Era productions of race screen dramas, with Peggy O'Day in the stellar roles, will be started shortly.

Francis Ford is directing Miss O'Day.

Jack Perrin will be the star in a series of five sea series, which Campbell Productions will make for Anchor release.

Two series of two-reel comedies are now in production at the studio, and Bruce Mitchell is directing one series, with Jack Richardson, the comedian, in the leading roles, while Morris R. Schlank is producing comedies featuring Little Napoleon, the chimpanzee.

A second edition of five features starring Billie Rhodes and others, which the National Film Corp. produced some time ago, will be republished soon by Anchor.

CHARLOTTE JACKSON

FILMING SNOW SCENES

Chester Bennett and the company which is supporting Jane Novak in "The Snow Trail," have gone north to take snow scenes. They are expected to return to United Studios in about a week.

Sam J. Mintz has taken over the management of Lewis (Huck) Sargent for a period of 3 years.

Another film dealing with English life has been made by the Maxin-Film Co. of Berlin, Germany. It is named "Kean," and is adapted from the play of Alexandre Dumas.

The Goldwyn production of "Hungry Hearts," the Anita Yezierska story of the Russian immigrant, will be the feature production at Roy Miller's California Theater in a few weeks.

The Mission Film Corporation will probably produce the first Katharina Cuddy fairy story, the "Shepherdess and the Chimney Sweep," at the San Mateo Studios in San Francisco in a few weeks.

The World's Champion," a Paramount production presented by Jesse L. Lasky, with Wallace Reid as the star, and Lois Wilson as the leading woman, opens Monday, February 27th, at the Grauman Million Dollar theater.

PLYMOUTH ADVANCE IN JAPAN

The following is re-printed from the Tokyo "Advertiser" and presents the situation in the Orient as one far sighted film man has seen.

"Firm in the belief that motion pictures stand supreme in attracting and holding the mind of the child far beyond any of the methods now employed in teaching, particularly in the lower grades, Mr. Robert A. Brackett, who came to Japan a few weeks ago to take films for dissemination all over the world, believes that motion pictures are needed as part of the visual curriculum in schools and colleges. Mr. Brackett came to Japan from the United States with Mr. Hiraoka of the Kagetsuen at Tsu-ru, and in co-operation with him expects to film Japanese scenes, industries and art and also to illustrate customs and traditions.

"The showing of comprehensive motion pictures of a country illustrating its people, customs and cities will do much to foster a far more humanized idea of that country, Mr. Brackett believes, and he feels that the showing of such films in schools will go far toward dissipating false ideas held in one country another. 'Motion pictures, some of these days will prove reduce of maps, none too accurate, because motion pictures will reveal the life, customs and country as they are,' Mr. Brackett said, and will eliminate the possibility that pupils grow to manhood and womanhood with an erroneous impression of a country gained when a child.'

SEELING ARRANGING RELEASE

Negotiations are under way with Lubliner and Trint, Balaban and Katz, Chicago theater owners, for a showing over their entire circuits.

After negotiating for the Chicago showing, Seeling plans to go to Indianapolis and 'then on to New York, where national rights to the film exclusive of California will be disposed of.

LATE UNIVERSAL RELEASES

Recent Universal releases are:

"A Movie Mix-up," (1 reel comedy).

International News Nos. 21 and 22.

"Peggy, Behave!" featuring Baby Peggy, (2 reels).

"Tricky," featuring Dorothy Woods and Harold Goodwin, (2 reel mystery drama).

Vera Steadman is to return shortly to the screen with the Christie people, and continue her parts in their comedies.

Felix Whitefeather is on location near Neenah, Calif., with Ed Laemmle's company filming the serial, "The Days of Buffalo Bill."

Sid Grauman is in San Francisco conferring with Adolph Zukor, founder and president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and who arrived recently from New York.

Ray Griffith and George W. Seigman have important parts in "Poona First," Marshall Neilan's recently completed production for Associated First National.

INSTALL NEW OFFICERS

Following the installation this week with other new officers, Arch Reeve, president of the Western Motion Picture Advertisers, has just announced committee appointments to carry on the work of the organization in 1922. Other new officers include Pete Smith, vice-president; Harry Hammond Beall, secretary; Malcom S. Boylan, treasurer. The committee includes:

Publicity—Harry Hammond Beall, chairman; Garrett Graham, Mel Riddle, Arthur Warren, Ray Ritzers;

Service—William E. Keeke, chairman; Bradley Smellen, Larry Weingarten.

Membership—Pat Dowling, chairman; Dick Spier, Bogart Rogers, Harry Hammond Beall, and Malcolm S. Boylan.

Reeve also announced the appointment of Harold Hurley as assistant treasurer and Howard Strickling, assistant secretary, Garrett Graham is to be chairman at the meeting.

The new officers were installed at a high jinks held at the Egan Little theater ballroom, the new officials being officially inducted into office through the shadowgraph, a new use for motion pictures.

CAREWE FILMING SERIES FOR FINEMAN

A further stimulus of film production in Los Angeles came this week with the announcement from B. P. Fineman that he will make twelve specials here during the coming year with all star casts to be produced under the direction of Edwin Carewe. The first, "I Am the Law," will be completed within the next ten days with snow scenes to be made at Truckee. The interiors have been filmed at the Fine Arts studio. Fineman has formed a new producing organization in association with Bonnie Ziedman and Charles R. Burr to make independent features for the state right market. As a sample of the productions which Fineman is to use he selected Alice Lake, Kenneth Harlan, Gaston Glass, Noah Berry, Rosemary Roussel, and William L. Deering for "Am the Law," a story by Raymond L. Schrock, dealing with the Northwest Mounted Police. Carewe, the director, is best known for his First National successes including one Katherine MacDonald feature, four Anita Stewarts, and Isabel starring House Peters and Jane Novak.

HOLLAND LOANED TO LASKY

Cred Holland, star of Protean Arts' dramatic novelties, has been loaned by that organization to the Lasky studio, where he is playing the part of George Melford's production, "The Woman That Walked Alone." Immediately upon completion of his present role, Holland will again be directed by Raymond Harman, who is preparing to produce the second picture of the new Protean Arts series, "The Mind of Man," Protean's first offering, recently played at Grauman's Million Dollar theater.

The title of the next Morante Company picture in which George Cheesboro is featured will be "Blind Circumstances," written by J. Inman-Kane and the adaptation made by Viol Hartman. Herbert W. Caffey, Russell Tizzard and Harry Arras will be prominent in the supporting cast of "Blind Circumstances" the next Milbury Morante Specialty. Produced by George Cheesboro.

SCREEN AUTHOR BECOMES PRODUCER

L. V. Jefferson, screen author, recently completed "The Forest King," which he filmed in the redwood forests of Northern California. The picture, which is in five reels, is being released on the independent market through the Pacific Film Co., of Culver City.

Recently Jefferson adapted for the screen such well-known books as "Desert of Wheat," "Down Home," "The Face of the World," and "Fifty Candles."

MEXICAN PLAYER VISITS GOLDWYN

Louis Ross, motion picture player of Mexico, who is now in Los Angeles making a study of American production methods, visited the Goldwyn studio recently. Mr. PEGGY BLACKWOOD

Ross stated that Mexican productions are now distributed only in that country, but that in time they will also be marketed in South America.

LATE PATHIE RELEASES

Recent Pathie releases are: "Sylvia of the Secret Service," Pathie Playlet with Irene Castle and an all-star cast, including such players as Elliott Dexter, Eric Von Stroheim, Macy Harlan, J. H. Gillmore, T. Wigney Pervical, and Suzanne Willa.

Latest offering of the series of "Adventures of Bill and Bob," entitled "Mysterious Tracks."

"Furden Me."

"On the Jump," re-issued one-reel comedy, starring Harold Lloyd.

A California record for movie stars was made the other day when eight of Charles Ray's 1921-1922 productions were shown simultaneously in the theaters of Los Angeles and environs.

FIRST NATIONAL NOTES

D. Williams, general manager of First National, before leaving Los Angeles for New York, attended a viewing of the new National production.

Katherine MacDonald has started production of "The Woman Conquers." No title has been selected as yet for the photoplay MacDonald recently finished.

Charles Ray has finished the filming of his latest photoplay, the title of which is "One Clear Call." The next Ray photoplay which comes to Los Angeles is "R. S. P. F." a comedy of Fifth avenue and Greenwich village bohemian life, in which Charlie has the role of an impecunious artist.

John M. Stahl will finish the editing of "One Clear Call" in about ten days.

The title of Buxton Keaton's latest comedy is "My Wife's Relations."

PRIVATE VIEWINGS FOR GENERAL MANAGER

INDEPENDENT PRODUCERS NOTES

Gus Schumacher, pioneer producer, now general manager of O'Conner Productions, productions, producing the new series of two-reel Billy Francy Comedies, is one of the first State-right producers who joined the Independent Producers Syndicate to sell their product direct to Exchanges and eliminate the heretofore necessary evil of indirect distribution. Their pictures in three are already through the new medium of direct to exchange distribution.

The best and biggest independent producers are endorsing and praising this new distributing plan and are wondering why this could not have been instituted five or ten years ago, so it would have saved millions of dollars to the state-right producers and their financial backers, instead of establishing a reputation for independent producers that makes the whole film business appear as a reckless risk to conservative investors.

Since, however, this new direct from producers to buyers system was organized, all apparent risk in the producing business is practically eliminated and the film business is looked upon in the future as a legitimate industry where there will be no more hazard than in any other line of endeavor.

Lichten of Light's, and Rothwell, Mr. Wilford Lucas, Mr. Jack Livingston and many other well-known film players and producers are now preparing their pictures to be made through the new organization, controlling therefore their own productions and not trusting anyone else to collect the money for them.

John de Palma, brother of Ralph de Palma, automobile racer of note, has become a member of Nazimova's production forces at United Studios.

"ANY WIFE" (Fox)

"By the use of an 'it was all only a dream' ending, Fox has saved this feature somewhat from the criticism that it is one of the oldest, most obvious, and consequently most interesting of the stories that repeat themselves on the screen. The climax at the close which adds a comedy twist pacifies to some extent but does not justify the use of so much footage to the tiresome theme." —Moving Picture World.

"'Any Wife' will prove disappointing to followers of Pearl White. It is not up to the standard of her former five-reel features. It is weak in story appeal and has little to recommend it either in direction, acting or sets and the camera work is of a very poor quality." —Exhibitors Herald.

"The dream situation is employed in this conventional pattern of the eternal triangle which gives Pearl White emotional opportunities as a discontented wife. That the picture carries a lesson cannot be denied, although the story contains several crude scenes which are saved through the surprising finish. . . .

"The picture carries a certain appeal because of its moral, but its dramatic qualities are mostly negligible." —Motion Picture News.

"JULIUS CAESAR" (George Kline)

"The developments of the past seven years in film production have failed to overshadow the beauty and art of a picture that once stood and will stand for the best that the screen can give. 'Julius Caesar' is such a picture. Space limitations forbid an exhaustive description of the splendor of this classic. It can only be suggested by a few references to the splendor of the production as a whole, in its relation to moments of great history, the seriousness of the acting, stupendousness of the cast and nobility of the material appointments." —Moving Picture World.

"'Julius Caesar' is one of the largest spectacles made in Italy, but due to its construction and handling its interest will remain historic and educational.

"The events follow one another in the order of time and a great deal of footage is used to show whole armies and large crowds. Due to lack of intense drama, stirring situation and love interest 'Julius Caesar' is a biographical picturization rather than a picture drama. History is not always drama.

"The large battle scenes and the marching armies are, however, well rendered." —Wide's.

"This re-edited release does not need to be announced as Italian product. It is typical Italian in its spectacular scenes, in some of its photography, in the types which make up the cast. The life of Caesar, as history has handed it down, offers too much material to be expressed in one photoplay. This is the sole reason why this picture cannot hold the interest at a high pitch through-out. On the other hand, it does offer genuine entertaining incident. . . It makes splendid screen drama. The old Roman senate is lavishly photographed and is an unforgettable scene. . .

"The production is certainly of educational value as well as being entertaining." —Motion Picture News.

"This portrayal of the life of the world's greatest military genius has an appeal for every group of spectators. The incidents are tensely dramatic and the very utmost has been made of every opportunity to provide genuine thrills without, however, sacrificing truth or degenerating to the melodramatic. . .

"Caesar's two love affairs are convincingly realistic; American exhibitors are prone to anticipate too emotionalism and sentimentality which is often made in Italy, but this one never once offends." —Exhibitors Trade Review.

"CHASING THE MOON" (Fox)

"A Tom Mix fantasy with more rhyme than reason is this, but with a dash and a swing less provoking from taking it too seriously. It is as if the star had written of his own career as a screen actor, and finding all plot stale, even as the hero in the picture finds all life stale, breaks forth into a wild experience of things that could never happen." —Moving Picture World.

"Tom Mix, who has been hitting the bull's eye in his previous efforts, especially in his last release, 'Sky High,' has missed the mark in his new offering, 'Chasing the Moon.' This story lacks a plot and the sponsors must have gauzed it correctly for they have attempted to dress it with snappy titles. It is a good deal like a comic opera story, the little thread of plot intruding here and there but making no impression. The star executes several stunts, many of which are of the hair-raising order, but even these take quite a time in assembling. . .

"Mix has burlesqued his ideas before, but usually there has been something tangible about his exploits. However, the title has its value. It indicates that nothing can be gained from following moonbeams. Perhaps the main fault is a lack of a definite outline." —Motion Picture News.

"'Chasing the Moon' is pure comedy and not as convincing as a story but the various Mix stunts are well done and the athletic Fox star doesn't depend upon a 'double' to put over his stuff. . .

"The story was written by Edward Sedgwick and the star, and it is overburdened with facetious subtitles. It isn't a story that makes much impact. It is a good opportunity for a quickie. If you are interested in the various antics of the star, and doesn't come up to the recent Mix offerings."

—Exhibitors Herald.

"For those who like Tom Mix in the atmosphere in which he makes his films are more accustomed to see him surrounded, there will be disappointment over 'Chasing the Moon.' The title is apt for a story covers a wide territory, from America to Russia, and to Spain. Not only does it traverse a lot of ground, but the movie is always so thoroughly out of the ordinary that it comes very easily within the category of the improbable—and that does not make for deep interest.

"The story is the combined work of Mr. Mix and his director, Edward Sedgwick. If these two think 'Chasing the Moon' is a Mix vehicle, there is one reviewer who will go on record as in disagreement with them—and the reviewer is an admirer of Tom Mix."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"BILLY JIM" (R-C Pictures)

"The second of the series of Fred Stone pictures produced by Andrew J. Callaghan with Frank Borzage directing, is 'Billy Jim,' a western of average calibre as far as production is concerned, but it lacks the action and thrills usually expected in this type of picture.

"Borzage has provided a suitable production and in the latter reels has taken the company to a particularly picturesque western hotel resort where some unusually fine shots have been secured. There are several excellent long shots of land and water combination that are especially beautiful and the photography is first rate. There is a lot of good night stuff, too." —Wide's.

"If this feature starring Fred Stone were compressed into three reels the action would be quickened, the incident would be more spontaneous and the result would be a likely offering. Fred Stone fits the title role like the proverbial glove fits the hand. He has occasion to prove his versatility by expert lariat-throwing and snappy horsemanship. But that is about all. The story is almost plotless, although because of its humorous trend one cannot take offense at a lack of crisp action. Frank Borzage has collected some charming exteriors." —Motion Picture News.

"If there is one thing that stands out above all others in this picture from R-C, it is the beautiful exterior shots of the Canadian Rockies. The combination of Frank Borzage, director, and Fred Stone as star, coupled with an interesting story, does not quite get over in this case." —Exhibitors Trade Review.

"THE GOLDEN GALLOWS" (Universal)

"This picture, featuring Miss Du Pont, started off like a house afire, depicting life back stage, with the idea conveyed that slices of this interesting life would be revealed in such intimate fashion that the audience could not get enough entertainment. But the theatrical mark burns out and what is revealed is a conventional and uninspired tale of a girl who becomes the victim of every of these modern tricks."

—Motion Picture News.

SUSPICIOUS SIDELIGHTS ON "HAIL THE WOMAN"

By Ted LeBerthon

After seeing "Hail the Woman," and reading the reviews of that photodrama in the local press, I herewith submit a number of the suspicious "vest pocket" reviews, done after the manner of some of the literary figures of the day, to wit: George Ade, James Branch Cabell, H. C. Witwer, Orison Swett Marden, George Jean Nathan, and Sinclair Lewis.

George Ade

Florence Vidor as the young thing with a Fifth Avenue phizz and a stern New England upbringing, after shedding enough tears to baptize the entire Lower Manhattan population, gets a strange hold-on the affectations of a benighted person who possesses a full set of skin curtains, a narrow interpretation of the Good Book and the heart of a Prohibition enforcement officer. John Griffith Wray, the director of this sob fest, did some great work with the negro prayers at his command, a fact which will probably be soon publicly advertised as being due to a hearty indulgence of Taniac or Nuxated Iron. Hall that the Woman will not be fit to be seen popular with the Woolworth trade and the gilded swine who own first mortgages and college diplomas.

James Branch Cabell

And a stout ill-made youth, scarce apt to flourish a trustworthy sword, being unloved of the comedy Florence, stole out through the dusky night in those hours when the moon is nearly and far hamadayrs may be ensared in forests of surpassing loveliness and upon passing by the tall strange chateau in this enchanted wilderness wherein dwelt an unknown poet, he beheld but not in transport the fair Florence with the most beautiful eyes he had ever envisioned engaged in rapt converse with the silver-haired lad. And he beheld himself that mystic smoke arose from one of the most marvelous cigarettes which she held in her veritable flowers of hands. And he informed her father, and the tale now known as Hall was made possible. For a certain director rightly named Wray exerted a golden sorcery upon the characters in this devious manner of a father with a baby in a gorgeous, mysterious city, and of a wife who became transported to that other world which only exists between dawn and sunrise.

Orison Swett Marden

Hail the Woman proves that you can be what you will to be, though walls of granite intervene. Florence Vidor believed in herself and the principles of honest salesmanship. She proves that Woman's day has come and that all of us can be successful in 1922 if we hold the right thought. Madge Bellamy was a victim of wrong thinking. Had some one presented her with a copy of The Magnetic Life or The Culture of Courage, she would have led a clean, wholesome life, and would today be a good one hundred per cent American. She might have become another Carnegie or Dr. Frank Crane. John Griffith Wray proves by this forceful, optimistic production that right living is the only path to power. The entire cast acquitted themselves as respectable, decent citizens should, in any work of art, mechanics, industry, finance or commerce.

H. C. Witwer

Hail the Woman is a regular picture for regular people. It's a hundred to one shot that the next fine actress will be just like America, and that you will be able to stand up to the next great palings and give you an earful before you're twenty-four hours older. Thin gal Florence Vidor is a darb, the rest of the girls and boys behave like sure-fire troupers, and this fellow John Griffith Wray must have the kick of TNT, horse-linament, and the Republican party underneath his mussed-up hair cut.

Put it down in your note-books that this gem will be heard from further, and that his directorial salary will soon be swollen to the proportions of the national debt.

Hail the Woman is homely, ridiculous and hollow. It nurses all the prejudices of the herd, and will help the vote by Y. M. C. A. secretaries, chambermaids and prurient Methodist clergymen. I'll wager a half interest in the Smart Set that it receives the endorsement of all Rotary Clubs, Foreign Missions, the Ku Klux Klan and the American Legion. To feature a pearl of an actress like Florence Vidor in such tosh and balderdash is an outrage to one's sense of humor and aesthetics alike. But such is the "art" of the motion picture! The direction of John Griffith Wray was all that saved the picture from being released as a slap-stick comedy.

What is the country coming to? Why film such drivel when there is much such available material as the Decameron, Bazar's Droll Stories, and Mlle. de Maupin to select from? The story itself is so bad that it might have been written by the Honorable Warren Gamaliel Harding or the head janitor in the Woolworth Building. Without the transmuting touch of the reliable Wray, the Woman would not be fit to be seen by any but United States Congressmen, bootblacks, and students of scenario writing.

Sinclair Lewis

Hail the Woman is first and last addressed to Main Street audiences. But it's a great story, beautifully acted. Florence Vidor diagrams the direction of Wray superb. Ince deserves congratulations. Would like to see this combination in Zola's La Terre or Flaubert's Madame Bovary. The splendor and attention to beauty and strangeness, Theodore Roberts real and grim in role, Lloyd Hughes realistic and bumptious. Meredith a striking fellow. Madge Bellamy and Rodney Hildebrand good, but not enough of them. Censors probably to blame. It will probably do the producers as much good to hold as it has done the thinkers of the country to cry out against the bosses of the Republican and Democratic parties. The country is too full of Elks, Knights of Pythias, and followers of the New Thought.

"TOO MUCH MARRIED"

(Associated Photoplays)

"Too Much Married" lives pretty well up to the title selected for it, in fact very much so far as the heroine is concerned. She's actually married to a man whom she considers a "friend" and not a husband. The title is misleading. This film will not be disapproved of by the most radical of censors, who believe in the sanctity of marriage. It is a part of our social and economic system, though it is old, treated in a manner quite original and has an unusual twist to it.

-Wid's.

"Too Much Married" will make you laugh, but if you expect anything new in the line of farces you will be disappointed. And, yet, there is that touch of directorial imagination that makes for worthwhile entertainment.

-Moving Picture World.

"THE GOLDEN GALLOWS"

"Of the late releases starring Miss Du Pont, this one is the best one of them all. In the first place, it gives her a chance to do something besides just look pretty. . . . It is a part that would seem to have been made to order for her, and she is excellent in the role. Though the theme is old, it is treated in a manner quite original and has an unusual twist to it."

EVERYBODY WELCOME
Monday evening, Feb. 27, 1922, 7 o'clock sharp. A regular party for regular people. Wild West Rodeo, Vaudeville, dancing and eats, all for you. The spirit of occasion has been entered into by Tom Mix, William Fairbanks, George Larkin and Monte Montague and others as hosts along with Robert P. Fite, who will see that each and every visitor has a wonderful time.

The 200,000 square feet of floor space occupied by Chevrolet Block between 27th and 28th streets, on Figueras street, will be devoted entirely to fun-making for the occasion.

A Wild West atmosphere has been decided upon and all the cowboys and girls who can, will have a good chance to show their stuff before a real audience.

We want just as many movie folks to be present as possible, so come early and stay late.
Let's have a real party.
(Signed) ROB FITE.
You can make money by writing photoplays, stories, plays, novels, jokes, verse, greeting card sentiments, etc.

It is not easy—but it is being done by many folks, and you can do it.

The Editor Weekly will show you how—tell you what and how to write, and where to sell it.

Jack London once said: "I may not tell one-hundredth part of what The Editor did for me, but I can say that it taught me how to solve the stamp and landlady problems."

Mary Roberts Rhinehart says: "The Editor helped to start me, cheered me when I was down, and led me in the straight path to literary success."

For 27 years The Editor has been the friendly adviser of aspiring writers.

The Editor gives the following in each weekly issue:

—news of new magazines and their manuscript requirements, and news of photoplay, novel, essay, letter, title, short story, poetry, play and all other literary prize competitions

—news of changes in editorial requirements, and other news of the week of interest to authors who have manuscripts to sell

—articles on the technique of fiction, play, and photoplay writing, and on other interesting and helpful aspects of literary work

—autobiographical letters on the conception, genesis, development, writing, and selling of short stories, novels, plays, and photoplays, by well-known authors —scores of brief, practical "experience items," by authors, telling of the writing and selling of their work, prices received, etc.

—definite information regarding literary property rights, copyright, contracts for placing plays, etc.

Giving Truth to The Public

Four valuable editorial selections from the Exhibitors' Herald, The Photodramatist, the Moving Picture World and The Exhibitors' Trade Review, respectively, follow. They set forth the various publications' solutions to the current newspaper slander of Hollywood and the picture profession. It is interesting to note that the justification plans are all cut out on the same pattern. Indeed, it is a promising sign that such is the case for co-operation is the only thing in a circumstance of this kind. Some of us have learned the truth of this fact at our own great expense.

F. R.

"The idea advanced in this department recently, that the industry enter into a comprehensive campaign to place its story about pictures and the picture business before the public, has met with a definite and widespread response. Various communications have reached us which agree with the proposition and also reiterate the obvious necessity that something along this line be immediately undertaken.

"The unfavorable—and grossly unjust—publicity that has been deluged recently upon Hollywood adds a new reason for the industry to look to the task of creating a right public opinion with respect to motion pictures and the people engaged in making and distributing them. But the Hollywood matter is only an incident. Entirely without reference to what has and has not been said about the production center it remains a matter of paramount interest and importance that the business of motion pictures be set right before the public.

"The key to the situation is plainly one of commercial propaganda. The object to be attained is the creation of a favorable attitude in the minds of the public toward the art and business of motion pictures. And the means for the attainment of this object is an advertising campaign which will reach persons of all ages and all strata of society—bringing home to everyone the true story of the business, its people and what they are seeking to do."

"Motion pictures, motion picture people, and the motion picture art stand at the bar of public opinion. The list of their alleged crimes is formidable and includes everything from the corruption of innocence to the perversion of the public taste in Art—with a capital "A." Long-haired reformers, short-sighted authors, and political opportunists are prosecuting the case with venomous vigor—and with a total disregard of the principles of fair play. Yellow journals and pink periodicals report the progress of the case in their usual manner, instructing their paid prevaricators to play up the alleged wickedness of the accused in the most sensational fashion. Throughout the length and breadth of the land, a monstrous fiction is growing up—a belief that the defendants are not only guilty, but are proud of their sins. And because the defense has been entrusted to divided counsels, because the motion picture people have tried to laugh the case out of court, public opinion is developing signs of irritation, and, what is worse, hostility. Consequently, the so-called reformers who yammer for censorship and Blue Sundays are encouraged to persist in their campaign of denunciation, prohibition, and corruption.

"Well, the time has come to cease trying to laugh the case out of court. Getting down to facts, it isn't really a laughing matter that Centreville and Podunk regard Hollywood as a nest of iniquity peopled by an ungodly bunch of Bacchanalians who weep because there are only ten commandments to be broken. It was funny so long as it was only believed by a few long-haired gentlemen and a few short-haired ladies. But today, thanks to the zeal of the reformers, the pandering of the press and periodicals, and our own foolish indifferance, the motion picture is assailed from every quarter, and the people who make them are universally condemned as Hedonists whose excesses would have shocked the inhabitants of Sodom and Gomorrah.

"There is a big job ahead of the industry and the longer we wait the harder it will be to successfully accomplish it. The world must be convinced that the people of the motion pictures are ordinary human beings, neither better nor worse than the people who follow any other occupation. The public must be taught to distinguish between the true motion picture workers and the parasites who, with the connivance of the press, claim a connection with the 'movies' simply for the advertising they may thus receive. Hollywood, the real home of the industry, must be painted in its true colors, as a quiet, homelike city of hard-working people, absolutely devoid of that wild "night-life" which the tourist has been taught to expect and never can discover. Unless Podunk and Centreville can be convinced that the people who write, direct, and otherwise assist in the production of the motion picture are decent, law-abiding people with decent aims and ideals, the motion picture will find its way growing increasingly difficult, and the motion picture art will be stultified."

"It is a matter of proverb that even so inoffensive, so peaceful and so non-combatant a thing as a worm will turn to defend itself if it is sufficiently provoked."

“RUPERT OF HENTZAU” FUTURE SELZNICK PRODUCTION

Myron Selznick recently purchased the motion picture rights to “Rupert of Hentzau,” Anthony Hope’s popular novel. While Mr. Selznick was abroad he signed a contract with Evelyn Laye, an English actress, who, it is expected, will make her debut in America in the role of Queen Flavia.

RUTH ROLAND AT UNITED STUDIOS

Ruth Roland is to make two serials at United Studios. Contracts for studio space and organization facilities were signed in the Pathe offices in New York by President M. C. Levee of United and Paul Brunet, President of Pathe. Mr. Levee will return to the studios from the East this week, Gilmor Willett, production manager of Pathe, has taken possession of a suite of offices at United, and will remain in Los Angeles during the filming of the two serials. Production on the first of these will be under way during the next thirty days. The first story is an original, and was especially written for Miss Roland by John W. Grey, who is also preparing the continuity. Its temporary title is “The Riddle of the Range.” Mr. Grey will also write the second story.

AT THE INCE STUDIOS

John Griffith Wray is directing final scenes from “When She Marries,” a Thomas B. Ince special by Bradley King. Filming of “A Man of Action” began this week, under the direction of James W. Horne. Max Dupont is photographing. “Man of Action” was written by Bradley King and is a comedy-drama. It will be released by First National.

Horace Williams, casting director, is assembling an all-star cast for “Someone to Love,” the new C. Gardner Sullivan story which will soon enter production with Madge Bellamy in the leading feminine role. An elephant will figure prominently in the drama. John Griffith Wray will direct “The Brotherhood of Hate” will be completed within the coming week. Lambert Hillyer is directing, with an all-star cast featured.

FIRST NATIONAL NOTES

Ben Turpin and Phyllis Haver have started a new two-reel comedy at the Mack Sennett studios. Billy Bevan and Mildred June are well underway with their latest film.

Katherine MacDonald and company are at Truckee in Northern California filming snow scenes for “The Woman Conquers.” Buster Keaton’s “My Wife’s Relations” was finished recently and previewed.

“SCOTTISH CHIEFS” FOR BOSWORTH

William H. Clifford, scenario writer, has delivered his completed version of “Scottish Chiefs,” a future Hobart Bosworth vehicle. Production will be at the Pacific Studio, San Mateo.

FURTHER TO PRODUCE IN SAN MATEO

W. Lawson Butt, who has formed his own producing company which will be known as the W. Lawson Butt Productions, will start presently on his first production, a film version of "The Flying Dutchman," at the Pacific Studios in San Mateo. Lloyd Carleton will direct.

SECOND DRAMATIC COMEDY FOR GLENN HUNTER

The preparatory work on the second of the series of feature productions starring Glenn Hunter, has been started at the Tuttle-Walker offices.

Like “The Cradle-Buster,” Mr. Hunter’s first screen vehicle, the new picture is a dramatic comedy dealing with a typical American boy. The story and direction will again be in the hands of Frank Tuttle, and Fred Walker, Jr., will have charge of the photography and technical direction.

Active work on the feature, which is entitled “Stage-Door Johnnie,” will begin about March 20th, when Mr. Hunter will return to New York for the present tour with “The Intimate Strangers.”

WILSON IN NEXT NATIONAL EXCHANGES FEATURE

“Why Not Marry?” a feature comedy romance of tangled hearts, directed by John Lopez, and starring Margery Wilson, is announced as the next release of National Exchanges, Inc., to be presented by Walter L. Johnson, the president.

Margery Wilson is a former D. W. Griffith player and appeared in "Intolerance." Miss Wilson has also played opposite such stars as William S. Hart and Charles Ray, and has been starred in several features.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Harry “Smub” Pollard’s, “Do Me a Favor” and “Should Husbands Marry,” are titled and ready for preview.

“Sunshine Sammy” and four other boys ranging in ages from five to ten years, will be the chief actors in the second children’s comedy, which Bob McGowan is directing.

ANCHOR BRIEFS

The second comedy of a series of twelve two-reelers featuring “Little Napoleon,” the chimpanzee, has been completed by Director Harry Burns for the Morris R. Schlank Productions. It is entitled “Any Old Raga.”

The Brentwood Studios have been leased by Paramount Productions, making a series of two-reel Crescent comedies featuring Jack Richardson, for release through Anchor Film Distributors, Inc., the first of which has just been completed and titled “A Colorado Knight.” Bruce Mitchell is directing.

Peggy O’Day, the New Era Productions star, will leave soon for Tia Juana, where the race track scenes of her third Anchor feature will be filmed. Francis Ford will direct, with O. G. Hill behind the camera.

Permanent headquarters of the Anchor Film Distributors, Inc., Morris R. Schlank, president, are located in the Wilshire Bldg.

EDUCATIONAL FILMS NOTES

“Mythology” is the latest Christie Comedy released by Educational. It features Bobby Vernon, and is produced by Josephine Hill.

“The Silver Harvest,” the next one of Educational’s World Wanderers series, deals with the harvest of millions of tiny sardines which are the daily crop in the sardine fishing fields off the coasts of France and Portugal.

The new Robert C. Bruce “Wilderness Tales,” had its premiere recently at the Capitol Theatre in New York, and will soon be seen throughout the country.
“PENROD”

Booth Tarkington’s “Penrod” stories seem to present a major subject for adaptation; but Opinion Fairfax, serves Marshall Neillan for his latest independent production. The picture’s title and author-name alone will attract large houses all over the country and the fact that Wesley Barry appears in the leading role is of material added interest, for the freedled lad has a remarkable following. Nevertheless, we find him here unhappily cast in the typical American-boy role which he enacts with about the screen technique and general attitude of Wallace Reid. All of the linen of jolly but unfortunate little Penrod is lost in a new sophistication that surprises us in Wesley. The youthful favorite also indulges in unnecessary exaggeration so that he entirely loses the Tarkington spirit, which Johnny Jones retained so consistently in the two-reelers made by Goldwyn from scripts by that author. Moreover, the late training of Neillan’s portage has rendered him principally suitable to the eccentric or slapstick.

At that, Barry is not so hard to swallow in his position as in Clara Horton in Penrod’s difficult lady love at twelve years. He shops the children with whom she plays by several inches and overdoes her kittenish mannerisms until one’s credulity resigns in despair. To interpret the child, one must either be such or a superb artist.

Baby Peggy Jean, loaned by the Century Comedies, does an exceedingly amusing piece of work in the dancing school’s tiniest patron while Sunshine Sammy and Florence Morrison, Winston Radom, Gordon Griffith, Newton Hall and Kenneth Green all play clever kid characters.

Tully Marshall, Claire McDowell, Cecil Holland, Marjorie Daw, John Harron and Lena Lakeette troubl faultlessly through the adult principals and the list of players is further filled out by Mrs. Grace Green, Virginia True Boardman, George Drongold, Charles Arling, Mayme Kelso, Harry Griffith and little Jackie Condon.

The overly large cast is perhaps not so unwieldy under the direction of Frank O’Connor and Mr. Neillan as it would be imagined, and the continuity is as smooth as any combination of stories could readily be. The lack of a climax worthy the name is an unsatisfactory feature and the picture’s indefinite onward run seems uncalled for. Particularly good is the strenuous comedy of the juvenile element which Neillan-like reverts repeatedly to slapstick. The titles are effective and the photography by David Kesson is exceptionally clever.

“Penrod” is, of course, distributed by First National.

GEORGE BERRELL

David Smith manages the direction satisfactorily even through the situations that reek with melodrama. The photography is good.

It is a little startling to see the great Walhall in this kind of thing, but he cannot be said to be wasted upon it inasmuch as he would play anything incomparably. His customary grace and the pantomime that set

“THE FLOWER OF THE NORTH”

California

“The Flower of the North,” a typically virile tale of the rugged section about which he writes, is James Oliver Curwood’s vi-graph-produced story, just released. The cinematic play is chiefly notable for its presentation of Henry B. Walhall and Pauline Staiger in principal positions. Aside from the cast, it is a regulation, fast action “north woodier,” which has been adapted to the screen by Bradley Smollen.

“A VIRGINIA COURTSHIP”

Clune’s

Edfrid Bingham’s playof Eugene Presbrey’s, “A Virginia Courtship,” produced recently by Realart as a Ray Mac-

Avoy starring vehicle, runs true to the promise given by its title and certainly deserves recommendation as being, in all respects, packed with a human interest even to the most unsophisticated. It has paralleled love stories based upon the simple, springtime romance of the old south rather than the thrills which have lately been in great demand. The sweeter element in this type of picture should be encouraged, but possibly it should be presented with variations. The material here is quite charming, but a bit trite from several considerations, mainly its age.

Frank O’Connor has given the picture a good technical production.

The petite star is charming indeed, as the bare-legged child Prudence who grows up with almost unwarranted celebrity. Her in-mature roles are always convincing in every detail; still we cannot but desire some really big material for her.

Casson Ferguson plays a “straight” Real-art juvenile with more vigor than it is usually accomplished while Richard Tucker is satisfactorily hateful in Dwight Neville. Alec Francis and Kathlyn Williams carry the other romance beautifully with Jane Keckley, I. M. Wells, Guy Oliver and Verne Winter completing the cast.

MCKEE TO STAR IN SEA STORY

Raymond McKee, who appeared at the California recently in “A Blind Bargain,” has been signed by Elmer Clifton Productions to star in its initial cinema, “Down to the Sea in Ships,” which lately went into production at New Bedford, Mass.

FARNUM IN FILM ADAPTATION OF “SAMSON”

William Farnum is back on the job again. With Herbert Brenon directing he started on a new picture recently at the Fox New York studios. The picture will be called “Sackles of Gold.” It is an adaptation of Henri Bertstein’s play, “Samson,” which William Gillette did on the stage. Myra Bonillas, a new face on the screen, will be Mr. Farnum’s leading woman.

BARA IN BRABIN SERIES

It is stated that Theda Bara is about to be starred in a series of productions to be directed by her husband, Charles J. Brabin, for an independent company.

NEW COOGAN PICTURE COMPLETED

Jackie Coogan’s third independent feature production will be started within two weeks. Title work has just been finished on “Trouble,” Jackie’s latest feature, and this will be ready for exhibition purposes within 30 days. It is an original story in which Jackie is supported by Wallace Beery, Gloria Hope and others.

With the release of “Trouble,” Jackie will have been seen in four big plays, “The Kid,” “Tuck’s Bad Boy,” “My Boy,” and his latest production.
STROMBERG ANNOUNCES STAFF

A personal production staff is announced by Hunt Stromberg, producer of the comedy specials to star Bull Montana.

The directorial berth is to be occupied by Mal St. Clair, formerly associated with the Sennett Studios as director of Sennett comedies, and more recently director for Buster Keaton and the Carter De Havens.

Rex Taylor, writer of originals and continuities, has been engaged for the scenario staff, with Pliny Goodfriend assigned to first camera and Steve Evans to second. Frank Kryger is to officiate as assistant director.

Production on the first Bull Montana comedy, "A Ladie's Man," is scheduled to start next week.

The second of the Montana series, under the title of "Fresh from College," written by Stromberg, is to enter production immediately upon completion of "A Ladie's Man," which will be three reels in length.

Sennett Signs Meins

Mack Sennett has added another director to his staff in the signing of Gus Meins, who until two years ago was a newspaper and magazine cartoonist and illustrator.

Meins directed and co-directed with Famous Players, Lasky, Fox, Sunshine Comedies and Chester Productions, before coming to the Sennett lot. In conjunction with George O'Hara, who has also been recently engaged by Mr. Sennett as a director, he will shortly begin on a new series of two-reel comedy specials.

WITH HARLEQUIN PLAYERS

John Macfarlane has been engaged to play "Iago" to R. D. McLean's "Othello" with the Harlequin Players, week of Monday, March 6th.

Mr. Macfarlane played this part with John Kelder at the Mason Opera House in October, 1919.

RAY TO ASSIST JONES

Al Ray, formerly allied with his cousin Charles Ray, in the capacity of assistant director was recently engaged by F. Richard (Dick) Jones, production manager for Mack Sennett, to assist him with the forthcoming Mabel Normand comedy drama feature, "Suzanna."

IN ALL STAR CAST

Alice Lake and Rosemary Theby are members of the all-star cast producing "I Am the Law," the first of a series of Edwin Carewe specials, which B. P. Filmstrip is making in association with Bennie Ziedman and Charles C. Burr.

LUXFORD WITH BUTT PRODUCTIONS

Nola Luxford has finished playing opposite Robert Gordon and has been cast to play the leading feminine role opposite Lawson Butt in "The Flying Dutchman."

Martha Mattox, who is playing in "A Game Chicken" at Clune's Broadway, is at present portraying the leading character role with Earle Williams at Vitagraph, under the direction of Bert Ehminger.

WESLEY RUGGLES TO STAR BROTHER CHARLES

Director Wesley Ruggles is making plans to present his brother Charles in a series of comedies to be known as the Wesley Ruggles Productions.

GRADWELL WITH GUNNING

Ricord Gradwell recently affiliated with the distribution corporation of Wid Gunning, Inc., as managing director. Mr. Gradwell was previously vice-president and general manager of the Oliver Typewriter Company and later took charge of the World Film. He will continue in his position as president of the Producers' Security Corporation, a service organization he created after completing his work at World Film.

There will be no changes in the personnel of the Gunning organization, as Mr. Gradwell will assume the executive direction of the distributing corporation, relieving Mr. Gunning and making it possible for him to devote his time to publicity.

EDUCATIONAL DISTRIBUTING HEAD HERE

E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Film Exchanges, is in the city, accompanied by Mrs. Hammons and making his headquarters at the Ambassador Hotel and the Christie Studios.

Mr. Hammons arrived here recently after a convention of exchanges managers in Chicago, and will among other affairs make arrangements for the product of Educational week, April 16th to the 23d, through a booking drive for Christie Comedies, Mermaid Comedies, Torchy and Campbell Comedies, and other products which its exchanges distribute throughout the United States and Canada.

YOUNG WITH METRO

Arrangements were completed recently whereby Clara Kimball Young will make her next series of photoplays for Metro.

Miss Young will make five productions under this contract, and it is expected that they will be forthcoming within about eighteen months from the release of the first. She still has one more to make for Equity release.

TWO NEW CHRISTIES WILL START WORK

Two new acquisitions to the list of Christie Comedy players will be working within a few weeks. They are George Stewart, brother of Anita Stewart, who has been engaged under a long term contract by Christie, and Charlotte Stevens, winner of a beauty contest in Chicago.

Stewart will appear with Dorothy Devore in her next picture and Charlotte Stevens will make her debut as Bobby Vernon's leading lady.

SANTSCHI AT UNIVERSAL

The roll of stars at the Universal Studios has been augmented by the advent of Tom Santschi, who will make a series of two-reel out-door dramas of the Canadian Northwest.

Charles Reed Jones has charge of the Hamilton-White publicity at United Studios.

Albert Edward, Albert Roccardi and Harold Foschay are included in the supporting cast of "Why Not Marry," the forthcoming release of National Exchanges, Inc.
STEWART GOES EAST

Having completed two pictures at the Louis B. Mayer studios since her return to Los Angeles from New York last fall, Anita Stewart and her husband, Rudolph Cameron, departed for the East. The two new Mayer-First National attractions in which Miss Stewart stars, are "The Woman He Married," and "Rose o' the Sea." Both were directed by Fred Niblo, and in the latter Mr. Cameron will be seen as his wife's leading man.

VIDOR ILL

King Vidor, director of "The Turn in the Road," "The Jackknife Man," and other photoplays, is a victim of influenza, and work upon "The Real Adventure," which he is now making from Henry Kittel Webster's story of that title, has been suspended, awaiting his recovery.

TO DRAMATIZE "FOOLISH WIVES"

An attempt will be made to dramatize "Foolish Wives," the picture upon which the Universal company claims to have expended more than a million dollars. Eugene Walter, playwright, has been chosen for the work.

"HEART OF THE NORTH" PRINT STOLEN

The office of the All-Star Feature Distributors, Inc., of San Francisco, was burglarized recently and a print of "The Heart of the North" stolen.

Messrs. Joe Brandt and George H. Davis of New York City, have requested everyone to be on the lookout for this print and to notify them by wire in the event that it should be offered for sale.

"MY TRIP ABROAD" MAKES ITS DEBUT

Charlie Chaplin's initial literary effort, "My Trip Abroad," which is a resume of the ten weeks' tour Mr. Chaplin enjoyed recently, is expected to make its debut in book form this week.

SCIENCE ONE REELERS

Howard Wheeler of New York, general manager of Science Service, has entered into a contract with Tarkington Baker, president of Visigraphic Pictures, calling for the production, weekly, of a series of short reels dealing in general science. Some of the prominent men and women of science will have personal supervision of the making of the pictures.

PICKFORD-FAIRBANKS STUDIO CO. INCORPORATES

The Pickford-Fairbanks Studio Co. filed articles of incorporation at Sacramento recently. The company has a capital stock of $250,000, and has the following directors: John Fairbanks, Robert Fairbanks, Charlotte Pickford Smith, Jack Pickford and John G. Mott.

ROSE ROSANOVA

IRISH COMEDY ST. PATRICK'S WEEK RELEASE

Goldwyn's early release of the latest Rupert Hinech-s comedy, "Come on, or," a tale of Irish characters and Irish humor, both in Ireland and in New York, is being prepared for initial showings St. Patrick's Day week.

Alfred E. Green directed the photoplay with the author as consultant and advisor. Colleen Moore, who appeared in Mr. Hughes' previous picture, "The Wall Flower," recently released, has the leading role, while Ralph Gaves, who will be remembered in Griffith's "Dream Street," plays opposite her.

MAYER HOLDS CONFERENCE

J. Robert Rubin, general counsel for Louis B. Mayer and treasurer of his companies, has arrived from New York for conference with Mr. Mayer. Oscar Grossberg, a Boston man financially interested in the latter's studio and production, is also here on a business and pleasure trip. Although no definite information regarding Mr. Mayer's plans for the coming year has been given out as yet, it is known that an announcement will follow the termination of this executive meeting.

Poe's Photoplays of Albany, N. Y., has increased its capital from $1,000,000 to $1,500,000.

Dale Henshaw, of the National Exchanges, is here from New York buying pictures. He is stopping at the Savoy.

NOVELLO COMING TO STATES

Ivor Novello of the Alliance Film Corporation of England, is coming to New York presently. His latest picture is "The Bohemian Girl," in which he played the lead opposite Gladys Cooper.

GOLDWYN BUYS NORRIS STORIES

Kathleen Norris has sold the screen rights to "Sis" to Goldwyn and production of the picture will follow immediately after the completed publication of the novel. Goldwyn has likewise purchased the rights to "The Happiest Night of Her Life." Miss Norris is an Eminent Author, and as such, Goldwyn gets first call on all her motion picture material.

HAS NEW YORK SHOWING

"My Old Kentucky Home," a Pyramid Company photoplay, had its first showing recently at the Lexington Theatre in New York.

"My Old Kentucky Home" is from the pen of Anthony Paul Kelly and was directed by Ray C. Smallwood. The American Releasing Company will distribute the film.

OHIO BANS "FOOLISH WIVES"

The Ohio Censor Board has refused to permit the Von Stroheim picture, "Foolish Wives," to be shown in the state with or without cuts.

FORREST VEHICLE AT N. RIALTO

Ann Forrest appeared recently at the Rialto, New York, in "Love's Homenager;" a John S. Robertson production made for Famous Players-Lasky abroad. David Powell shares honors with Miss Forrest.

Josephine Lovett, who is Mrs. Robertson in private life, prepared the scenario from the novel, "Perpetual," by Dion Clayton Callison. In the cast are John Millner, Geoffrey Kerr, Lillian Walker, Lionel Dara- gon, Sara Sample, Amy Willard and others.

NEW ARLISS SCRIPT

Forrest Halsey, who adapted "The Ruling Passion," is at work on another script for George Arliss.

NEW PLAYERS EXCHANGE

Benny Goldstein, formerly with Classic, has launched Picture Players Exchange with offices in the Mason Opera House Bldg. associated with Mr. Goldstein are H. B. Doeden and D. Bleck.

LOEB STORY FOR JACKIE COOGAN

Sophie Irene Loeb will assist in producing an original story written by herself for Jackie Coogan.

PRAGUE FILM ACTIVITIES

The January number of the "International Filmschau" reviews the industry in Czecho-Slovakia. The number of producing companies has increased, and eleven new releasing companies formed. The outlook for the coming year is reported very optimistic.

GRIFFITH PERSONALLY SIGNS CONTRACTS FOR LOS ANGELES PREMIERE OF "ORPHANS OF THE STORM" WITH DAVID OF MISSION

An announcement significant to the motion picture industry comes from Harry David, managing director of the Mission Theater in Los Angeles. It is significant to the fact that he personally closed contracts with D. W. Griffith for the Los Angeles premiere of the latter's latest studio picture, "Orphans of the Storm," for showing at the Mission theater in the near future.

Griffith personally attended to every detail of the elaborate showmanship, including the sale of special additional passes, which were sold at $1.50 each, well in advance of the date of the premiere. The feature picture was released to the Paramount chain.

WESTERN'S ARE IN DEMAND, SAYS DISTRIBUTOR

A telegram received by "Cactus Features," which co-star Maryon Aye and Bob Reeves, reports that Western pictures are in demand today more than ever before. The wire reads: "Irving M. Lesser of Western Pictures Exploration Company, who is now in New York City arranging distribution matters for the "Cactus" products, Mr. Lesser states in his telegram that he has sold the entire eastern territory. The "Cactus Features" have given the screen seven complete subjects in less than five months and are contracted to produce eighteen products for the Lesser-Rosenberg organization.

CLIFTON PRODUCTION STAFF

Elmer Clifton Productions of New Bedford, Mass., announces its production staff, with Elmer Clifton, now director; A. J. Ferrero, chief cameraman, and Leigh R. Smith, assistant director.

"The Lost" is the title chosen for the story, the title of which is "Down to the Sea in Ships." Production has already started.

INTRODUCES NEW CENSORSHIP BILL

A bill has been introduced in Boston, Mass., by Marian C. Nichols, a censorship advocate, which would subject picture theaters to the same requirements that govern publication of political advertisements in newspapers. Miss Nichols object is to prevent propaganda by way of the screen.

Noel Smith, director of Hall Room Boys' Comedies, is in New York with "Game Birds," the latest of the series.

Charles Ray is preparing his first picture for United Artists' release.

It is reported that George Walsh will lead Estelle Taylor to the altar as soon as he gets his divorce from Seena Owen. Miss Taylor was recently cast in the vampire role of "A Fool There Was," which Emmett Flynn is directing for Fox.

Prizma, Inc., has three new subjects for release, "Away Dull Care," "Seeing the Unknown" and "Nippon."

The Senate of Kentucky has passed the censorship bill which now goes to the House. Its passage there seems favorable.

Red Oak, Iowa, has its first picture show in many years last week. Thomas H. Inc's "Hail the Woman" was the opening attraction.

"The Digest of the Motion Picture Industry"

PRESIDENT OF E. F. A.

Samuel Rachmann of Berlin, Germany, has succeeded Carl Brat inas president of the European Film Alliance. Brat was formerly one of the important figures in the U. F. A. before Adolph Zukor formed the E. F. A.

IS AWARDED FRENCH CROSS

James M. Loughborough, manager of the Albany Pathe exchange, was recently awarded the Cross of the Chevalier by Marshal Foch. Loughborough served with the 365th Infantry of the 77th Division in France and accompanied Marshal Foch on his recent tour of the United States as public representative.

Lee Moran recently finished "The Rubber Neck."

MICHAEL DARK

Jackie Coogan is taking violin lessons from a local master as a necessary preparation for his next starring picture, production on which is about to commence at United Studios. Jackie will portray the role of a very youthful violinist in this production, the title of which has not yet been announced.

A. C. Raleigh, manager of the Columbia Theater in Portland, Oregon, and editor of the Jenson and Von Herberg magazine, Screenland, and Carl G. Brownlee, dramatic and film editor of the Oregon Journal, were recent visitors at the Louis B. Mayer Studios.

Maud Ballington Booth, head of the Volunteers of America, was the honored guest recently at the Hal E. Roach Studios.

John W. Considine, former partner of the late "Big Tim" Sullivan in the Sullivan-Considine circuit of theaters, is in Los Angeles visiting his son, John W. Considine, who is secretary to Joseph M. Schenck.

Leaster Cuneo, who recently completed the picture, "Silver Spurs," is planning to make a horseback tour of Southern California this summer.

KARLOFF BUSY

Boris Karloff recently completed a "heavy" role in "The Man from Downing Street," with Earl Williams, and is now in Truckee supporting Katherine MacDonald in "The Woman Conqueror." Mr. Karloff will be seen very shortly at the Kinkena in "The Invisible." A Katherine Macdonald First National attraction.

Casson Ferguson is making arrangements for a European trip.

Ward Wing and Lilian Marshall were married on Washington's Birthday.

The transfer of the Lewis J. Selznick production units in the East to United Studios will be effected within a month.

Lester Cuneo is credited with being the tallest star in motion pictures. He stands six feet two in his stocking feet.

David Butler's favorite sport is handball. He holds a prize cup for winning doubles at the Los Angeles Athletic Club.

Duncan's Rint-tin-tin, prize-winning police dog, will be seen with Guy Hates Post in "The Masquerader."

"Fool's Paradise," Cecil B. de Mille's latest Paramount production, comes to Grauman's Rialto week of March 5th.

"I Am the Law," the first of the series of twelve special productions which Edwin Carewe is directing, is nearing completion.

Among important members of the cast of "The Ordeal" are Edna Murphy, Adele Farrington, Claire Drey, Ann Schaefer and Shannon Day.

Director Eric Von Stroheim, accompanied by his wife, has returned from New York where he went in order to witness the premiere of "Foolish Wives."

Among those in important roles in Agnes Ayres latest Paramount starring vehicle, "The Ordeal," are Edward Sotherland, Lloyd Whitlock, Eugene Corey and Clarence Burton.

The Metropolitan Production Company engaged in the making of "The Good Samaritan" has returned from location at Victoria after ten days of exterior work on the ranches near the desert town. The picture, when completed, will be released by Franklin E. Becker through East Coast Productions.

The Ubach film, "A Man in a Million," will be given its national premiere in Chicago on March 12th. It will probably have its Los Angeles premier concurrently with that at the Windy City.

AN INTERESTING TRIBUTE

A NEW SYSTEM
I have a plan that will revolutionize the motion picture industry in the putting up of a new stage or reconstructing an old stage.
A beneficial novelty for all purposes, but especially for comedy productions. Has never been exhibited to the public before.

"I CAN EXPLAIN"
(Metro)

"If they could find another story for Gareth Hughes as appropriate as the adaptation of Little Eva, which was called 'Little Eva Ascends,' he would probably be able to hold the stellar position to which he has recently been elevated, but with such material as 'I Can Explain,' it isn't likely that he will be able to gain much of a following. He needs especially good stories and not the helter skelter variety of what not that is contained in this Wid's.

"The difficulty of appropriately casting Gareth Hughes has impeded the success of 'I Can Explain,' to some extent. Obviously, his limitations as an actor figures for the former, mind, but unless his performance is the nucleus of interest, the object of a keen psychological study, it is very hard to have a big success, 'Sentimental Tommy,' it is apt not to pull flat, but weakens the entire production. This is what happens in 'I Can Explain.'

"The story is farcical in style and has some burlesque touches in playing up South American politics in a way that is not particularly new or clever. The most pleasant feature of the production is the wealth of beautiful settings, suggestive of that country."

—Moving Picture World.

"This picture is apt to be a tough one for the spectator to define. It carries all the earmarks of broad burlesque, not only because of its lively action which releases a sample of slapstick, but because the players act in a spirit of mock-roles. Which is to say that they exaggerate. If the purpose is to have fun with the old-time comic opera revolution then George D. Baker, the director, has succeeded admirably. If he has attempted to be serious—then one must he inclined to say that he has 'overreached.'

"The subject-matter is not entirely fitting to Gareth Hughes' personality. There is not much of a certain value, but at least it will suffice as a fairly interesting release. Hughes needs quieter pieces—such as 'Little Eva Ascends.'"

—Motion Picture News.

"TILLIE"
(Realart)

"A picture that is primarily story and will please or disappoint as the story meets or fails to meet with approval. Extended stage popularity of the title character, 'Tillie the Mongoose Maid,' by Mary Miles Minter has an opportunity to appear in character. It will surprise many of her following to see her discarding her Pollyanna role to find expression in a story which doesn't permit her to radiate her charm.

"The picture is done extremely well as far as production is concerned—except atmosphere is always present—not only in the costumes of the natives but in the intimate scenes of the homes and fields."

—Motion Picture News.

"GLASS HOUSES"
(Metro)

"And again the Metro-Viola Dana combination comes forth with an enjoyable entertainment that is sure to satisfy everyone. It is a crotchet cendent and laugh provoking business that puts the picture on a line with the few really amusing farcical pictures of the day."—Wid's.

"This farce-comedy places Viola Dana in a character sketch which enables her to flash a talent heretofore undiscovered. While it is improbable and carries a few flaws if one takes it seriously, still it manages to evoke a deal of charm, romance and happy high jinks. Money has been spent upon this feature, for there are at least fifteen lavish sets to say nothing of a small army of extras providing atmosphere and an array of costumes which might have come from some fashionable Fifth Avenue shop.

"Glass Houses' is a band full of peppy jazz—an ideal vehicle for the star."

—Motion Picture News.

"Viola Dana has something like to her taste, and it is likely quite to the public's taste, in 'Glass Houses.' She has an interesting chance to do a character accentuated with her own clever brand of humor, in addition to a straight role with her equally well-known charm as an ingenue.

"The story, continuity and direction are examples of adroit workmanship. . . . But why has it been titled 'glass Houses'?"

—Moving Picture World.

"EXTRA! EXTRA!"
(Fox)

"Extra! Extra!" as the title suggests, is a newspaper story. The action is based upon a clue that the city editor of the big newspaper gets and the young reporter is sent out to get the details of a deal which involves a corner in cotton. 'Get the story,' says the editor; 'and don't come back if you don't.'

"Detective, gay and amusing, lead the reporter into adventure and romance, but these make a picture of only average entertainment value."

—Wid's.

"First-rate newspaper story with the likeable Johnny Walker and Edna Murphy in the leading roles. On a par with this team's recent offerings and should please.

"There is a fairly interesting story here, well acted and some excellent settings and photography."

—Exhibitors Herald.

"A STAGE ROMANCE"
(Fox)

"William Farnum, after quite an absence from the screen, returns in a costume play built around certain incidents in the life of the famous actor, Edmund Kean. It is an unusual part for Farnum, but gives him opportunity to display his talent in portraying strenuous emotion, and he scores without a doubt.

"His work throughout is the strength of the picture."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"There will doubtless be a great many among William Farnum's following who will consider 'A Stage Romance' his most artistic achievement. Certainly the Fox star has never had greater romantic opportunities than this picturization of Dumas' play based upon the life of the celebrated English tragedian, Edmund Kean.

"Farnum has presented a novelty here in 'A Stage Romance,' something entirely different from anything heretofore attempted. At this time the screen is under fire, and the character of Kean will do much to kindle a feeling of generosity."

—Motion Picture News.

"The use of exceptionally plastic and picturesque material—the life of the great stage idol, Edmund Kean, as originally dramatized by Alexandre Dumas is the first reason for commending Fox for the production of this splendid picture. An inclusive chapter from Kean's life, showing his meteoric transition from a humble boy to the first actor of the day, with an intimate sate on his friendships and love affairs, it should and does have that keen interest always attached to unveiling the personal life of a public favorite.

"William Farnum could scarcely have made a more favorable return to the screen, after a year's absence, than he does in 'A Stage Romance.'"

—Moving Picture World.

"ALF'S BUTTON"
(First National)

"This First National release made in England contains a first-rate comedy idea although to be judged solely as entertainment it is entirely too long for feature length. The story hack of 'Alf's Button' is a facetious thing—one bearing a strange resemblance to 'Aladdin and his Wonderful Lamp.' In fact it is a distant relative to that fantastic tale.

"However, after three reels have traveled through the machine, one becomes a trifle tired. It is all the same."

—Motion Picture News.

"Perhaps 'Alf's Button' did make the Prince of Wales laugh, but the Prince of Wales is English. So is 'Alf's Button.' Therefore, it is logical that mutual understanding and appreciation provided a successful combination. But a few American audiences can be expected to find the picture amusing when there are such fun makers as Lloyd, Chaplin, Keaton and a few others capable of drawing continuous laughs is hard to say. They are bound to make comparisons with the English comedy which will be likely to make a poor showing."

—Wid's.

"THE BROADWAY PEACOCK"
(Fox)

"Pearl White does good work in this story of renunciation. It is away from that in which we have been accustomed to see her, but she fits into the character of Myrtle Minton gracefully and easily. The role affords her an opportunity to wear several smart gowns, any one of which will interest women patrons."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"Pearl White's performance in 'The Broadway Peacock' unfortunately has a certain hazy stage. It tends to cheapen any effort at serious drama."

—White's

Contemporary Criticisms
make-up and costumes show a lack of refined taste and if she were more conservative in the love scenes, the effect would be improved.

—Moving Picture World.

"This is a companion piece to 'Any Wife' in the sense that it gives Pearl White further opportunities to display an emotional talent.... 'The Broadway Peacock' is a stage story carrying very little physical action but relying upon shadings, subtleties and much romance and atmosphere for its interesting qualities. The title, incidentally, is a winner for this type of feature."

—Motion Picture News.

"TRACKED TO EARTH"
(Universal)

"The story carries a colorful title suggestive of much action, but this necessary element never figures prominently, it being subordinated to the love interest.... "The backgrounds reveal some picturesque shots of a desert country, with the sand and sage-brush visible in every direction. "The picture is mostly exteriors, and the director has caught some highly picturesque shots. But there is little action or incident. Frank Mayo fulfills the demands of the role and his support is competent enough. You can call it fairly interesting."

—Motion Picture News.

"Any amount of beautiful shots, rolling hills of sand and splendid photography provide fine pictorial effects and excellent visual appeal in Frank Mayo's latest Universal production, 'Tracked to Earth,' but these factors aren't quite sufficient to fulfill the requirements of entertainment. Sand, sand and more sand. That is about what you will find in the picture."—Wid's

"Spectators who are not over-particular regarding the plausibility of a picture-story will probably get considerable entertainment out of 'Tracked to Earth,' Universal's latest feature starring Frank Mayo. "An attractive feature of the production is a number of well-photographed sand scenes."—Moving Picture World.

MARYON AYE RECOVERING FROM INJURIES

Maryon Aye, co-star with "Bob" Reeves, slipped on a rock while taking a scene for "Cactus Feature" last week, severely spraining her ankle. Miss Aye was confined to her bed for several days and it will not be possible for her to take any "stunt" scenes for a week or more. Meanwhile director Albert Rogell is spending his time filming the latest "Cactus Feature."

DAVIDSON IN NEW HURST STORY

Dore Davidson, who appeared opposite Vera Gordon in "Humoresque," will be seen in a leading role in Fannie Hurst's latest film production, "The Good Provider," recently completed by Cosmopolitan Productions.

MARY ASTOR OPPOSITE O'BRIEN

Mary Astor has been engaged to support Eugene O'Brien as his leading woman in his next picture. The tentative title of "John Smith," has been chosen for Mr. O'Brien's next Selznick feature. Victor Heerman is the director.

TAYLOR IN VAMPIRE ROLE

BERNHEIMER TO ASSIST THALBERG

Julius Bernheimer has succeeded Lillian Greenberger as assistant to Irving G. Thalberg, general manager at Universal.

Frederic Peters is playing a part in the current Chester Conklin comedy at Fox under the direction of Edward Kennedy.

Mary Wynn, J. L. Frothingham protege, has returned to Los Angeles after a short vacation at Truckee.

Irene Hundt, daughter of C. de. Vidal Hundt who is Carl Laemmle's representative in Europe, is now living in Hollywood and has been working at Universal.

Otto Matiesen, of the Harlequin Players, has been engaged to play a prominent role in William Russell's latest production for Fox entitled "Lucky Garritty."

Ann Hastings, leading woman, has arrived in Los Angeles from the East and will remain here indefinitely. Miss Hastings recently completed a year's engagement with Pathe in New York.

Little Muriel Frances Dana, who portrays the child in the Thos. H. Ince special, "Hall the Woman!" has been engaged by Fox to enact an important role in "A Fool There Was," the current Emmett Flynn special for Fox.

"Her Husband's Trademark," Gloria Swanson's latest Paramount vehicle, will be the feature at Grauman's Million Dollar Theater week of March 6th. Stuart Holmes plays the husband, Richard Wayne portraits the friend, and the other roles are in the hands of Lucien Littlefield, Clarence Burton, and Charles Ogle.

I feel I am indeed fortunate in the circumstances which surround my entrance into the motion picture industry. As a type in this branch of the profession, I might feel more timid of my venture if it were not that I felt those who are cooperating with me put much more faith in my work than I do. It would be futile for me to try to give my impression of a business into which I had just come. My first associations have been with James Young, the veteran director, who will make my first picture, and it was with great gratification that I found that here, indeed, was a master of the picture art, who not only knew the rules of the game but could explain the why and wherefore. On the other hand Wilfred Buckland, in the old days an associate of the stage, was able to present so wonderfully the technical side of the art of screen settings that, between the two, I have been proved very wrong.

To me the great thing has always been upon the stage to present an interesting story directly and forcibly for the amusement of the public. In presenting a story upon the screen I feel that this also holds true. It was therefore my decision to base my first picture upon a stage success, "The Masquerader." Guy Bates Post appeared in "The Masquerader" for over six years with success. In almost every theatre in America he has broken the capacity record. It seems fitting, therefore, that this artist should appear in this play as my initial offering. That I have been able to do this and introduce Mr. Post to the screen fans of America is a great pleasure. I cannot but feel that with the combination of helpers which I have assembled, and this attraction as an offering, the same success will attend the venture upon the screen that has been met with in the legitimate theatres of America.

It is my intention to present the plays which I have written, produced, and presented upon the stage, and I wish to present one after another upon the screen. The fact that commentators in the past have rated my offerings as high in pictorial value leads me to believe that those who have developed themselves to the requirements of the silent drama. Among other plays I contemplate producing in the future, "Paradise," "Paradise," "The Tentmaker," "The Flame," "Keep Her Smiling," and several other original dramas which are now in scenario form.

This has always been my slogan—"Clean plays, 100% entertainment." Those who know closely this ideal has been followed in the past will perhaps appreciate what I hope to try to do in the future.

BOWMAN STORIES FOR WARNER

Earl Wayland Bowman, author of "The Ramblin' Kid" and other published stories, has been employed by Metropolitan Productions, Inc., to furnish a series of stories, featuring James B. Warner. The first story is to be released in high prices, which appeared in The American Magazine a short time ago.

MAJOR CAMPBELL TO LEAVE LASKY

Upon the conclusion of his present contract with the Famous Players-Lasky Company on March 22nd, Maurice Campbell will free lance. Several screen projects, which pending, have been completed for the making of his own productions.

Major Campbell has filmed twelve productions for the Famous Players-Lasky Company.

"The Digest of the Motion Picture Industry"

By Richard Walton Tully

"The screen has at last proved the truth of the adage, 'Great inventions are the result of a nation-wide dissemination of vile scandal about the lives of players and others in the moving pictures, a number of people well known to all of us who happen to know a little about the public for fair play. Elsewhere in this issue appears the appeal in full, together with the signatures of the gentlemen who better, consider seriously the issuing of a plain statement which will place the blame on the stage when it properly belongs. The blame rests with the sensation-mad newspapers and their Los Angeles correspondents, who have deliberately fabricated the most impudent, the most conscienceless and the most damnable scandals, out of whole cloth and with an utter disregard of the reputations of innocent men and women, who have produced and are producing that on whose face would seem to be the product of drug-crazed brains. Los Angeles correspondents have been aided by Thomas Lee Woolwine, District Attorney of Los Angeles, who has become a correspondent himself, writing, no later than last Sunday, of the case under his own signature. He is an officer of the court and yet he joins in the mad scramble for this unholy publicity. "Los Angeles can only save itself from material disgrace by starting now to call a halt on this orgy of falsehood, mendacity and rotten fiction from the country as facts. Los Angeles knows these correspondents. Let them be taken in hand and called upon for the sources of their contemptible output."

"The attacks to which the industry is being subjected at the hands of the so-called reformers, and the lurid sensationalism with which some newspapers have attempted to indict the whole picture business, are common knowledge to every exhibitor. More than that, they undoubtedly present a very real problem to the exhibitor in dealing with the matter of the press. In practice, the industry has been maligned and vilified and misrepresented. But the public, in part at least, may not understand the true facts.

"Getting the facts to the public is a highly important thing, especially at this time. That is just what the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan are doing. They have worked out a constructive plan for newspaper cooperation—and, what is more, they have got the cooperation."

HAMILTON STARTS COMEDY

Hamilton-White comedies has started work this week on a new Lloyd Hamilton Mermaid comedy for Educational release. Irene Dalton, the 'girl' of several recent Hamilton comedies, will again play the leading role opposite the star.

When Frank Mayo arrives in Los Angeles from his sojourn in New York he will star in "Out of the North," a story written for him by Drago, according to report. While in New York he made a phonograph record for the Brunswick company. It included the monologue Mayo has been practicing in vaudeville for the past two months.

Bunny and Carolyn Davie are recovering from operations upon their tonsils and adnoids.

NAME ADDRESS
We Receive a Reprimand

Just to prove that life at best is not all boosts and smiles in this enterprising age, we are reprinting below a pleasant little communication which wandered in this week. Taking it all in all, Hope Hampton Productions, Inc., is not to be censured for protecting, even eulogizing, its turn-out to the fullest, not only for the reason that such a course is the natural one, but also because all available support could not suffice to bolster its unvaryingly mediocre product into an artistic class.

Nevertheless, we pause a moment to point the fact for the indignant Mr. Clark’s benefit, that in our review of “Stardust,” we but casually referred to an impending suit against his organization by Fannie Hurst, the authoress of its latest release, a much mutilated adaptation of her story, as it had come to us through some half dozen trade journals and not through “inspiration,” as the worthy gentleman suspects.

Indeed we anticipated no such onslaught as has resulted from his wrathful typewriter when we honestly observed further that the popular fictionist was certainly justified in considering herself injured by the distribution of such hackneyed material under her name, even to the extent of seeking legal reparation, providing, of course, that the understanding was that Hope Hampton Productions was to film the widely-read story with any degree of accuracy. Now that we have been challenged, however, we feel considerably elated at the opportunity to display the type of reasoning which guides some of our producing outfits.

Mr. Clark refers to the picture in dispute as far “superior” to the original, but he fails to explain the lack of judgment displayed in expending $35,000 for the title of an unsatisfactory story, which had to undergo a general improvement treatment by the Hope Hampton staff writers before it deserved picturization. Awfully wasteful we call it, but scarcely so illuminating as the statement that unless a reviewer sees a film before it is cut, he is in no position to judge the process. What a continuity poor “Stardust” must have been!

However, undoubtedly our attacker is right! Since his picture has been booked it is senseless to hand it detrimental reviews. This assuming that critics always have it in mind to ruin a picture’s sale when their judgments are adverse upon it. Our communicant must be of the opinion that inferior pictures just aren’t shown, even in the franchise holding house of its own distributing circuits. We only wish in our weary weekly round, without such stuff and amusings as we, mul-maligned “Stardust,” that we could share his encouraging outlook. Anyway he deserves a large amount of credit. He is some optimist!

—F. R.

“The Camera,
“Los Angeles, Calif.

“Gentlemen:

“In a recent issue of your valued magazine you stated in error that Fanny Hurst was suing the Hope Hampton Productions for using her title, “Stardust.” Miss Hurst has never sued us for anything or on any grounds, but we are suing her for $250,000 damages, because of her uncenemonious denunciation of our picture, after we had paid $35,000 for the picture rights, which gave us permission to make any changes, additions, substitutions, etc., that we desired.

“Even if our picture had not been superior to her book, which it was, it was poor sportsmanship on her part, to say the least, and her action has given us the sympathy of the public. You are, of course, one of the rare exceptions.

“Your statement that careless cutting hurt the film is also erroneous, and as a matter of fact you are not in a position to judge this, as you never saw the film before it was finally cut. It therefore seems to us that this statement of yours was inspired. As a matter of fact it was the cutting and titling of this picture, which in our opinion, has made it a great picture for audiences. For some reason or other, a few magazines have become so thoroughly biased and unfair, that their criticisms cease to be of interest, as long as the public, as they are doing in the case of “Stardust,” give us their approval.

“It will no doubt interest you to know that “Stardust” is a proven box office winner and it has played at the Strand Theatre, New York; The Strand Theatre, Brooklyn; The Strand Theatre, Providence; The Olympia Theatre, Boston; The Rivoli Theatre, Baltimore; The Metropolitan Theatre, Washington, D. C.; The Grand Theatre, Pittsburgh; The Regent Theatre, Pittsburgh; The Stanley Theatre, Philadelphia; The Kinema Theatre, Los Angeles; The Strand Theatre, Cincinnati. It will play the biggest theatre in the country, The Chicago, in Chicago; The Strand, Milwaukee; The Circle, Indianapolis, and several more in the largest cities, so you see that the largest theatres in this country are playing it, notwithstanding some very marked and unjust criticisms which evidently have not influenced either the public or exhibitors.

“Very truly yours,

“HOPE HAMPTON PRODUCTIONS, INC.

“By W. A. Clark, V. P.”
LOCATIONING IN FAR NORTH

Nell Shipman with her entire staff, consisting of her cast of players, 105 animals, dogs and a special Alaskan dog team, are traveling in a special car and spending weeks at a time in such northern sections of the country as Alaska, Alberta, Northern Washington and Northern Idaho, St. Joe River, Priest Lake and Echo Lake, all these places being required for correct exterior locales for her forthcoming play, a story of the far north.

Interiors will be filmed at the plant of the Pan American Studios in Spokane, Wash., which Bert Van Tuyle, managing director for Miss Shipman, recently took over for that purpose.

PREPARING "HIGH STAKES"

Clifford S. Effelt, president of Metropolitan Productions, announces the purchase of Karl Wayland Bowman's story, "High Stakes," which appeared in American Magazine. The author has also contracted to furnish a number of other stories of his, which have been published in national magazines during the past few years. As much of the plot of "High Stakes" is laid in Spanish atmosphere, it is probable that the company will go to Mexico for many of the exteriors. Carl P. Winther, production manager, is now assembling the cast for the production. The scenario is being prepared by Frank Howard Clark, also a fiction writer.

ARMSTRONG TO MAKE NEW COMEDY SERIES

"Billy" Armstrong will be starred in a series of two-reel comedy plays by a company recently formed, in which he will be directed by Ray Hunt and the productions will be distributed by the Pacific Film Co. of Culver City, Calif.

Armstrong's last contract was with Mack Sennett, with whom he made his first comedy series years ago under the former Keystone banner, starring jointly with Juanita Hansen.

PICTURE TO FEATURE HOLLYWOOD

A motion picture into which the interesting spots of Hollywood will be incorporated is soon to be made under the auspices of the Los Angeles and Hollywood Chambers of Commerce. The enterprise is planned to offset some of the sensational printed stories representing Hollywood as a sink of iniquity. Hollywood is in reality one of Los Angeles' most beautiful residential suburbs.

TO MAKE SCREEN BOW PRESENTLY

Within two weeks Ferdinand Earle's film production of the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam will be given its official preview. While in New York, Mr. Earle exhibited his film at several informal previews.

COSTUME PLAY STEWART'S NEXT

It is understood that Anita Stewart, after a short stay in New York and Palm Beach, will return here to start work on a costume picture dealing with court life in the reign of Louis XIV of France.

It is reported that Jack Pickford has purchased film rights to "Six Cylinder Love."
“A FOOL’S PARADISE” Grauman’s Rialto

In Cecil de Mille’s latest production, “A Fool’s Paradise,” the public will enjoy a departure from this director’s customary line which nevertheless possesses many of the attributes that lent attraction to his work. This story, a revamping, by Sada Cowan, of Leonard Merrick’s “The Laurels and the Lady,” for instance finds its motivation in the sort of punchy mix-up of men and women in their search after another, which seems to hold forth so much fascination to the average dull, romanceless audience. It has also been given a consistent de Mille production from every standpoint. Excellent photography and artistic tinting exaggerate somewhat over-culative sets, which add to the always-prevalent note of luxury; a well thought-out and effectively executed scenario by Donahue Marsey, is also invaluable to the picture. If the reaction of this type of photoplay is a bit sticky, we may only suppose that the market for it is sufficiently large to overlook merely wholesome objections.

Nothing more could be asked of the cast than the high class work which it offers.

Dorothy Dalton is unusually animated and fills an almost perfect position in Poli Patchouli, a flesh and blood woman who overcomes an exceedingly earthy disposition to “play the game.” She gets over the abandonment of the Latin admirably.

With the evenness, which can be maintained only by a beautifully trained actress, Conrad Nagel interpretst Arthur Phelps, a young man of illusions, whose physical blindness loses him one sweetheart and whose spiritual lack of vision robs him of another.

A striking characterization is added to the cast by C. Owen Davidson, whose work as Nihmae Prince, Talaat-Noi, provides some of the most graceful moments in the picture.

Mildred Harris is typically dainty in the illusion, dancing snow queen, while Theodore Kosloff offers a vital touch in Roderiguez.

Julia Faye, Kamuela Stairles and Jacqueline Logan complete the cast.

Paramount releases “A Fool’s Paradise.”

“WATCH YOUR STEP” California

A brisk and truly clever little comedy by Julian Josephson is “Watch Your Step,” a Goldwyn offering which presents Cullen Landis in the featured role. Being a simple chronicle of the adventures of an American boy against rather ordinary odds, the story’s interest lies chiefly in the comedy found both in its situations and atmosphere. A clever cast assures the successful accomplishment of each laugh attempted. Technically everything is satisfactory. Beaudine directed the cinematic play which was photographed by John Messull.

Landis has pronounced star material in his makeup, an advantage perhaps he better expended upon something sympathetic than upon comedy. Nevertheless, in matter of cultivation he is equal to any thing and as Elmer Stocum, a misguided “city feller,” who accepts a six-dollar a week country job, he is entirely pleasing.

Pete Ruth Miller, a young writer, Newcomer to the screen, is also well cast and dispenses with attractive ease the fairly uncomplicated action of Margaret Andrews, Elmer’s village lover.

The performance of Raymond Cannon in Lon Kimball, the small-town, wisecracker heavy, we will leave for review by our contemporaries, as is our custom.

Bert Woodruff, Alberta Lee, Gus Leonard, Henry Rattenbury, John Cossar, and William Orlando are immense types for Mr. and Mrs. Ruth Weaver, Jennifer Kimball, the Constable, Henry Sclum and the physician, who caused it all.

George Pierce, Joel Day, J. O. O’Connor, Lillian Sylvester, L. H. King and Cordelia Callahan complete the cast ably.

More comedy on this order would be appreciated from Goldwyn.

“RANGER” BILL MILLER

This Goldwyn offering, the Constable, Henry Sclum and the physician, who caused it all.

George Pierce, Joel Day, J. O. O’Connor, Lillian Sylvester, L. H. King and Cordelia Callahan complete the cast ably.

More comedy on this order would be appreciated from Goldwyn.

“RANGER” BILL MILLER

Mrs. Ruth Weaver, Jennifer Kimbell, the Constable, Henry Sclum and the physician, who caused it all.

George Pierce, Joel Day, J. O. O’Connor, Lillian Sylvester, L. H. King and Cordelia Callahan complete the cast ably.

More comedy on this order would be appreciated from Goldwyn.

“HER HUSBAND'S TRADEMARK” Grauman’s

A Clara Beranger story serves Gloria Swanson for her newest Lacki vehicle, “Her Husband’s Trademark,” and Lorna Moon’s adaptation of it forms a drama of considerable value. Its incident is well developed and while its star position is a bit far from the predominant one, a suitable picture for the Swanson personality and ward role results. Moreover, the story uncovers a capital punch in the Mexican fight stuff toward the finish which is well received. Sam Woods competently directed the production, which was well photographed by Alfred Gilks.

The star plays Lois Berkeley, a butterfly matron, with no very vivid characteristics, sympathetic or otherwise, but her costumes and gowns, if somewhat movement-hampering, costumes will be a never-ending source of joy to the feminine public. Such do we demand as entertainment.

Stuart Holmes is very clever with his heavy work in Berkeley, Lois’ parasitical husband, while his two or three comedy touches never fail to hit even in the midst of strenuous action.

The sympathetic male lead is enacted by Richard Wayne, who lends considerable virility to Franklin, the young engineer who loves a married woman.

Jacqueline Ray and Clarence Burton do excellently a comedy secretary and a Mexican bandit respectively, with Charles Oglesby, Edythe Chapman and James Neil otherwise established.

PREACHER AND EXHIBITOR ACCOMMODATE ONE ANOTHER

The manager of a motion picture theater in Toccoa, Ga., recently accomplished the supposedly impossible feat of crowding more people into his playhouse than there are residents in the town. Toccoa boasts of a population of 3,500, but Joseph Burton, manager of its chief picture house, jamed 5,865 admissions through his doors in a single day to see Katherine MacDonald in “Her Social Value,” supplemented by a Buster Keaton comedy.

Manager Burton doesn’t have to concern himself with “blue laws.” He turns his theater over to the local Baptists for their Bible class every Sunday morning, in return for which the Baptist minister gets through his evening sermon in time to permit his congregation to attend Sunday night’s second picture show.

Harold Miller has been selected to play an important role in support of Shirley Maclaine in her current starring production which Harry Beaumont is directing at Fox.
VERA STEADMAN AGAIN DONS MAKE-UP

Vera Steadman, after ten months' absence, is back on the Christie stages, appearing in the leading supporting role with Neal Burns in a new comedy being directed by Scott Sidney. Miss Steadman made her last appearance in "Exit Quietly" with Bobby Vernon, produced early last summer.

SHIPMAN PRODUCTION STAFF

The production staff of the Nell Shipman productions for the current picture consists of Assistant Director Billy Dagwell, Camera men J. B. Walker, Robert Newhard and Cliff Maupin; still photographer, Guy Newhard; property man, James Davis; chief electrician, R. F. Dugay; assistant studio manager, Lester Curson; script clerk, Dick Playter; zoo manager, Felix Graf; director-manager, Bert Van Tuyle.

DE GRASSE TO DIRECT RAY

Charles Ray has engaged Joseph de Grasse, who directed "The Old Swimmin' Hole," from the James Whitcomb Riley poem: "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway" and "Nineteen and Phyllis," to direct his next picture which will in all probability be "The Tailor-Made Man." This will be his first United Artists production.

PIERSON WITH UNITED ARTISTS

George Moser of United Artists, recently appointed Seymour Hilliard Pierson, manager of the Tokidoff office, Japan. Mr. Pierson, a member of The New York Morning Telegraph staff, has resigned his position and will start for the Orient presently, where he will be joined by Mrs. Pierson and his small daughter, as soon as he is settled there.

JOINS PASADENA COMMUNITY PLAYERS

Mrs. Guy Bates Post (Adelle Ritchie) recently enrolled as a member of the casts of the Pasadena Community Playhouse and will be seen in the role of Annabelle in "Good Gracious, Annabelle," about to have its premiere showing.

TO ASSIST WRA-A

Scott R. Boll will serve as John Griffith Wray's assistant director in the new Thomas H. Ince feature by C. Gardner Sullivan, "Someone to Love," which enters production next week.

LASKY SIGNS WILLET

Irvin Willat has been signed by Jesse L. Lasky to direct a special production with Dorothy Dalton in the leading role. It has the tentative title, "The Chatted." Ah Wing is supporting Nell Shipman in her current picture, a tale of the frozen wastes of the north.

June Elvidge is playing an important role in support of Katherine MacDonald in "The Woman Conquers," under the direction of Tom Forman.

LASKY ENGAGES ROSANOVA

Rose Rosanova has been chosen to interpret the role of the Spanish mother of Rudolph Valentino in Ibanez "Blood and Sand," which will serve as Valentino's initial starring vehicle for Paramount.

SCHULBERG SIGNS LEWIS

Mitchell Lewis has been engaged by B. P. Schulberg for a leading role in Katherine Macdonald's forthcoming First National attraction, "The Woman Conquers." Mitchell Lewis will be remembered for his work in "Burning Daylight," "A Daughter of the Snows," "Snake Bellow," "The Mutiny of the Elsinore," "The Code of the Yukon" and "Children of Banishment." The screen career of Mr. Lewis started with a prominent role in "A Chinese Honeymoon." Then he appeared in "Everywoman," with Nazimova in "Citation Shoons" and in Rex Beach's "The Barrier."
WRAY DISCUSSES RELATIONSHIP OF DIRECTOR AND STAR

What is the psychic relationship of the screen player to the director? John Griffith Wray, director of the Thomas Ince productions, "Comrades to Love," "Jim," and "Hail the Woman," believes the screen director must take the place of the spoken drama's audience; that just as an actor achieves more by glowing, subtle, or profound histrionism in ratio to the sympathetic attitude of an audience, just so does he rely on the screen director for his heightened inspiration before the camera.

"A director must cleave to a sustained psychological mood. He must indicate his appreciation of every subtlety, of every nuance. He is both director and mirror. The element of vanity does not enter in; its simply a case of the player exacting recognition."

"Therefore, I maintain that it is an important that an aesthetic and artistic attitude be effected between director and star—in the interests of fine histrionism, as it is necessary for a star to have and hold the interest and sympathy and understanding of an audience in the case of the spoken play:"

"RINTINTIN" WINS HONORS

"Rintintin," Belgian shepherd police dog brought from the European tranches back to this country by Lee Duncan of Lanker-shim, carried away honors for high jumping at the first annual Specialty Show held in Pasadena recently by the Shepherd Dog Club of the West. It was "Rintintin's" ability to jump that won him an important place in Irving Cummings' forthcoming five-reel feature, "The Man from Hell's River," about to be released.

RECENT VISITORS

Mr. and Mrs. Freeman of Columbus, Ohio, and Mr. and Mrs. Moore of the Church Film Corporation, were recent visitors at the Cosmossart Studios, where they expect to make pictures for exhibition in churches. It is understood that eight corporations are now in existence for the making of films for this purpose.

DANISH STAR IN NEW YORK

Magda Thorsen, the Danish cinema star, who is now residing in New York, will very shortly test her ability in American motion pictures.

Some of the photoplays in which she was recently starred, are "Den Hvide Fuele," "Den Tabis Change" and "Tabt Karlighed," which may be shown later in American. While in the States she will be under the management of Miss Gwen Sears.

ORGANIZES SALES COUNCIL

The Goldwyn Company has appointed a sales council to direct the selling of the Goldwyn product and take the place of A. H. Arnold, general sales manager who lately resigned.

The sales council is composed of five members, Cecil E. Maberry, director of sales; Charles B. Beaman, Jr., and J. E. Flynn, sales managers; W. F. Rodgers, manager of distribution, and Howard Diez, who will continue to act as director of advertising and publicity.

ELFELT EXONERATED

By a ruling of Judge Brown of the Justice Court, Clifford S. Elfelt has been fully exonerated of the technical charge of forgery brought against him in connection with his work recently with the Nell Shipman Company.

LAURA LA PLANTE

FIFTEEN PAGES FROM SIAM TO MEXICO

Twenty-five days from Siam to Mexico. While days and days are required to traverse the distance between these two nations, on one occasion at least they were brought near enough so that any man could walk from one to the other in fifteen paces at the most.

It was during the filming of Cecil de Mille's Paramount production, "A Fool's Paradise," which opened Paramount week celebration at Grauman's Rialto on Sunday, March 12th, that these two countries were brought into such proximity. On one end of a stage at the Lasky Studios there was a desolate interior of a Siamese temple; on the other end stood a cantina of a oil town in Mexico. A short distance away from these two sets which are seen in "A Fool's Paradise," was another which represented a city in France. The action of the de Mille creation encircles the globe.

Alfred Allen and Barry Barham are included in the cast of the latest Nell Shipman production which is being filmed in northern sections of the country.

AUTHOR WRITES MUSICAL SETTING

Eugene Manlove Rhodes has written the musical setting for the presentation of his "Steps of Light," about to be filmed by McNadden Productions with Robert Gordon in the stellar role.

The continuity for this picture has been approved by Mr. Rhodes, who will act in a supervisory capacity with Mr. McFadden throughout the picture's filming.

SHIPMAN CAMERAMAN A BENEFICENT

J. B. Walker, who is serving as cameraman for Nell Shipman Productions during the filming of Miss Shipman's forthcoming picture, was recently married to Miss Marjorie Chase. Mrs. Walker is accompanying her husband on his trip north with the company.

Anita Brown, 250-pound comedian, who was recently seen in a character role in "Inside the Cup," is now in Hollywood.

A daughter was born recently to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Speier. Mr. Speier is Vice-President of the Cosmossart Studios.

Hal E. Rosch has added Jackie Condon, three years old, to his stock actors, the new addition being the most youthful member on the lot.

Winnifred Verina recently left the New York Repertory Ballet to appear in Pathe serials starring Charles Hutchison.

William A. Brady is said to have refused an offer of $200,000 for the motion picture rights to "The Man Who Came Back."

Evonne Hambleton is cutting the initial Mission Film production, "Carry on the Race," which Clarence Geldert directed.

Lloyd Hamilton, of Hamilton-White Comedies, will make a trip to New York upon the completion of the production in which he is now working at United Studios.

Baby Peggy Montgomery, who has a prominent role in "Penrod," also has a good part in Marshall Neilan's "Fools First," which has just been completed.

Thomas N. Miranda, who edited and wrote the titles for the First National feature, "The Rosary," is at present engaged in titling the Fox feature, "The Last Mail," starring Charles Jones.

Florence Lewis of the Marion Morgan dancers trained the chorus which appears in Young Vidor's forthcoming cinemalogy, "The Real Adventure," in which Florence Vidor enact the role of a chorus girl.

The report that Al Ray was to assist F. Richard (Dick) Jones in the filming of "Suanna," starring Mabel Normand is erroneous, and Mr. Ray wishes to state that he expects to be affiliated indefinitely with his cousin, Charles Ray, in the filming of forthcoming Charles Ray productions for United Artists.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Harold Lloyd is taking the final scenes this week for his comedy, which will probably be called "Grandma's Boy." Four scenes that constitute the "water sequence" and final fadeout were necessarily postponed as the comedian was stricken recently with the "flu" and is just getting around again. Five reels of the comedy are assembled and titled.

Harry "Snub" Pollard's work this week has been used for an episode of his leading lady, Marie Mosquini, who had a light attack of the "flu." Mr. Pollard has been taking various location shots for a costume comedy which was finished recently. His comedies, "To Me a Favor" and "The Movie," were previewed this week at the studio.

Work is progressing on the second production of the children's comedy company. Tom McNamara, who wrote the script, is on the set daily with Bob McGowan, director of this unit.

"Paul" Parrott is working this week on interiors for scenes in his latest comedy, which has the working title of "The Joiner."

AT THE UNITED STUDIOS

Sol Lesser, producer of the Jackie Coogan pictures, has taken offices at the studios and will use them as his headquarters indefinitely.

Lot Anger, general manager of the Joseph M. Schenck Productions, has received word from New York that Constance Talmadge will return to the studios presently, prepared to start another production. Sidney Franklin, who recently completed "The Divorcee" with Miss Talmadge, will handle the megaphone on her next picture.

Allen Holubar has completed the exterior ship scenes for "The Soul Seeker," his current attraction, and has returned to the studios to complete the production. A. Carle Palm has left for New York with the negative of "The Masquerader," in which Guy Bates Post is starred.

AT THE INCE STUDIOS

Two more weeks of active work will see the completion of Maurice Tourneur's "Lorna Doone." The cutting and editing will be done by Mr. Tourneur and Wyndham Gittens.

Reeve Houck, assistant production manager, for Thomas H. Ince, is in San Francisco negotiating for an entire circus to be used in "Someone to Love."

"The Brotherhood of Hate" company, directed by Lambert Hillier, has spent the week filming exteriors.

WESTERN PICTURES NOTES

Lester Cuneo begins work next week on his new picture, "Double Fisted," written by Leo Meehan and Harry McCarthy.

Dick Hatton expects to start production in about two weeks on a lumber camp story.

"The Man from Hell's River," is on its way to New York, where Irving M. Lesser has arranged for a showing of this latest feature, starring Irving Cummings. The picture was made from a story by James Oliver Curwood and was filmed in Yosemite Park, following the recent heavy snowfall.

"The Digest of the Motion Picture Industry"

AT THE COSMOSART STUDIOS

The Cosmosart Studios are nearing completion. A syndicate to make educational pictures at the studio is ready to start production activities, with W. G. Logan, President of the Logan Wholesale Drug Company, installed as business manager and treasurer.

"Egoletto," the first of the grand opera series to be filmed on this lot, will go into production shortly.

Hugh Thompson and C. K. Van Auker are interpreting principal roles in Neil Shipman's forthcoming photoplay of the far north.

Bryant Washburn is said to be considering the relighting of "Skinner's Dress Suit."
Production Notes

RECENT UNIVERSAL RELEASES

Late Universal releases are:

- "The Dangerous Little Devil," featuring Marie Prevost (6 reels).
- "Two of a Kind," featuring Harry Sweet (2 reels).
- "The Call of Courage," featuring LaRo LaFianne and Percy Peabrook (2 reels).

PRESENT CONDITIONS OF THE STATE-RIGHT MARKET

Never before had the Independent Producer a better opportunity for success than is afforded to them under the present market conditions.

Though prices to stand the competition, yet good enough quality to make the market for foreign made pictures impossible.

Independent producers are now able to ascertain therefore exactly just what type of pictures the state-right buyers demand—and produce them economically, so that they could be sold direct to the buyers for low enough price to stand the competition, yet good enough quality to make the market for foreign made pictures impossible.

TILFORD CINEMA PURCHASES TIFFANY STUDIO

Walter Ford Tilford, president of the Tilford Cinema Corp., of New York, announced recently that his company had purchased the studio at 334 West 44th St., New York, now known as the Tiffany Studio.

Tilford Cinema has designed and executed the sets for quite a number of Eastern-made productions recently, among them "School Days," "Who Girls Leave Home" and "The Beggar Maid."

The plant was formerly the old Amsterdam Opera House, which was converted into a studio several years ago. Robert Z. Leonard made "Needless Moths" and "Peacock Alley" there.

CHANGES IN SELZNICK NEWS

Secretary David O. Selznick, in his capacity of managing director of Selznick News, recently appointed Lawrence J. Darmour and Lewis Allen Browne as heads of the editing staff of the reel. Mr. Darmour will be editor and Mr. Browne news editor.

Mr. Selznick also announces the appointment of E. V. Hurting, former editor, as sales manager for the news reel. Thomas A. Hurd has been named executive assistant, and Hart LaPlante as laboratory representative, complete the staff of the News.

The third Ben Wilson-Neva Gerber production is "Impulse."

The American Feature Film Company, which distributes the Universal product in New England, with the exception of a little corner in Connecticut, recently opened its new quarters in Boston, Mass.

W. S. Van Dyke, director; Arthur L. Todd, cinematographer, accompanied by Gareth Hughes and Bessee Love, spent most of the week at Laguna Beach filming scenes for "The Heart of a Child," which Louis Burrell is producing.
"LOVES OF PHARAOH"
(Paramount)
"The Loves of Pharaoh," billed as the masterpiece of Ernst Lubitsch, and brought to this country by that master of all German directors, is another big production abounding in imposing architectural compositions, stirring battle scenes, in which thousands of actors, expert Egyptian splendor, and depending upon these for much of its merit.

"The story is one that, while humanly possible, is interesting only at times and at other times drops to a point that is only relieved from tedium by the advent of one of the big mob scenes. There are a number of these and in every instance they are handled with rare skill."

Exhibitors Herald.

"The superlatives heaped upon Ernst Lubitsch for his masterly production of 'Deception,' are in order again with his newest achievement, 'The Loves of Pharaoh.' When the season is complete, this spectacular drama of Egypt and the fall of a king will stand near the top. It carries color, bizarre sets, perfect atmosphere and detail, splendid acting, thrilling in abundance, real dramatic incident and massive backgrounds against which are assembled thousands of extras."

Motion Picture News.

"The Loves of Pharaoh" is a masterpiece. Coming as it does during a period that seems to be marked with a succession of such excellence that all previous standards of comparison are utterly shattered, that it is a masterpiece of the spectacular in moving pictures has far more importance than if it was qualified as such at another time. . . .

"The gorgeousness, stupendousness and sheer artistry in direction baffle description. So much that is overwhelming gets the eye of the enraptured onlooker that his reaction is not to burst into paroxysms of wild praise, but to attempt in the simplest manner possible an adequate estimate of what is in store for all persons fortunate enough to witness the latest work from the mind and hand of young Ernst Lubitsch."

Moving Picture World.

"The Loves of Pharaoh," incidentally a very bad title—"Pharaoh's Wife" would have been much better—is probably the finest foreign spectacle as yet shown in this country and in addition contains a story of real interest—something that the usual foreign production sadly lacks. Lubitsch, who showed real ability in previous productions, has surpassed all previous efforts very definitely in this.

There are so many magnificent sets and groupings of large masses of people that it would be difficult to refer to any one without minimizing the value of others, but there are few audiences who will look upon the sets showing the palaces of Pharaoh and the reception of the Ethiopians without a quiver of delight and appreciation."

"PARDOY MY NERVE"
(Fox)
"Pardon My Nerve" is a good melodrama of a familiar sort. "Buck" Jones, more willing to prise open a Christian than to violate the Sabbath, has a heroic part which he does with intelligence as well as nerve, and his agility in penalizing wife-beaters and mortgage sharks, will no doubt, win the admiration of every "red-blooded" fan."

"Adopted from a regulation pattern with the characteristic flavor of the western revealing gun-play and the other accepted ideas, 'Pardon My Nerve,' reaches the screen as 'Charley (Buck) Jones' latest opus. It is a theme that comes again, the action centers upon a single shooting scene with the identification of the villains.

"Jones engages in a fight scene which is not hefty enough to color a western."

Motion Picture News.

"Charles (Buck) Jones' latest release varies very little indeed from several of his past productions and perhaps isn't quite as artistically composed as he usually offers. There is a good deal of action, but it is all the same kind—hold-ups, and more hold-ups.

"The exteriors are of the usual order, but it is about time the Fox west coast lots saw a new western town set. The same one has been used so frequently in both the Tom Mix and Buck Jones pictures that it is already too familiar."

-Wid's.

"BEYOND THE RAINBOW"
(1.R.C Pictures)
"There is an odd mixture of comedy and drama running through the production, and either idea would have furnished material for a feature. It is too bad the comedy plot was not carried out more completely, for just as it promises a highly interesting finish, it veers off into a not-tragedy and is forgotten. The production is one of the best offered by Robertson-Cote in some time and will attract attention by reason of the large cast and the skilful handling of the story."

Exhibitors Herald.

"It is easy enough to know that the picture is good entertainment, but how to classify it is another matter.

"The lack of compactness forces the introduction of many faces, some of which are quite irritating. The production is so many-sided that it should have a very wide appeal, and if this is Mr. Cabanne's intention, he has succeeded admirably."

-Motion Picture News.

"This is undoubtedly the best picture William Chresty Cabanne has made since 'The Stealers,' and offers a variety of genre so exciting and appealing as to satisfy the desires of everyone in any audience."

-Wid's.

"When the first and foremost object of producing is to be pretentious, a picture can not fail to sacrifice something as far as entertainment and truth are concerned—and this is the impression created by 'Beyond the Rainbow.' The use of a grand cast and the elaborateness throughout are features that are emphasized to the point of being inharmonious, and consequently inartistic. No inconsiderable part of the first reel is devoted to the introduction of so many names and characters that only the most systematic and methodical of minds could possibly retain them all, and the significance of each. . .

"'Beyond the Rainbow' has only the smallest connection with the story and has most likely been selected for its picturesque-ness, if any."

-Moving Picture World.

"THE CAVE GIRL"
(First National)
"This semi-humorous romance presents a varied appeal, it is a serial, time formula. Instead of representing a city-bred girl finding a cave-man for a mate in the wilds the authors have reversed the pattern. Otherwise the picture follows the regular, orthodox channels, depending upon a wholesome story, worked out logically, although coincidence creeps in here and there to give it a dramatic flavor."

-Moving Picture World.

"As a modern slant on the hardships of romance, especially when the vacationers are society folk, The Cave Girl! is good entertainment. Most of the picture has been executed in a light vein, and contains some clever comedy. . . . It starts out by being sophisticated and humorous, continues by being red-blooded and sinister, finally returning into the first mood, as it draws to a close."

-Moving Picture World.

"For winter scenery and fine out-of-doors atmosphere 'The Cave Girl' belongs way up on the front rank and even if the story isn't a whopper, the feature as a whole will be likely to satisfy because of its splendid pictorial work and excellent quality."

-Wid's.

"HER OWN MONEY"
(Paramount)
"A rather conventional plot has been gracefully presented here in a subject devoted to the art of domestic finanaceering. The entire production to the acting of Ethel Clayton in the snubbed, restrained manner of the performance which is entertaining without being startling. The opportunities for intrigue and melodrama, but the original purpose of the story has been kept carefully in mind, and the temptation to create a 'scene' now and then just for the sake of excitement has been avoided."

-Moving Picture World.

"It really doesn't matter a great deal that the basic situation of 'Her Own Money' is not an altogether new one on the screen because the feature, as a whole, offers a pleasing entertainment of the light variety, has an appealing star to help put it over, and, after all, deals with a subject that happens to be a part of every day life."

-Wid's.

"An appropriate vehicle has been found to fit Ethel Clayton's personality and talent in 'Her Own Money.' . . . There is nothing very emotional or exciting about the story. In its favor, however, is a decidedly refreshing note. And this is what makes the picture a satisfying one."

-Wid's.

"There are no morbid sex moments. The picture holds the interest without the added help of expensive settings and sartorial display."

-Motion Picture News.
The Man on The Cover

By Ted LeBerthon

It is not often that one meets so real a man. By real I mean one totally unaffected, who says what he means, is direct and unreserved—nor afraid to voice his convictions—one who talks about others' achievements rather than his own.

There is a wholesomeness about Frank O'Connor that is stimulating to those about him, a candor that is delightful and disarming. There are very few professional actors and actresses I have ever known with the ebullience O'Connor, and those who have not met him know his sterling reputation as a peripatetic director attained during two years at Lasky's.

O'Connor came out here from New York with the late William Desmond Taylor a few years ago; in fact, co-directed nine potboilers with Taylor, including "Sacred and Profane Love"—a somewhat recent starring vehicle for Elzie Fergusson.

The big, broad-shouldered son of Erin is a master of anecdote. As we sat at luncheon in the Armstrong-Carleton Cafe on Hollywood Boulevard, he quoted Bernard Durning at another table.

"My second director," he announced, "back in the old Edison days when I was a promising young leading man, fresh from musical comedy."

"With whom did you start your screen career?"

"With Vitagraph, in Brooklyn; took the L. I. Roundabout to Sheephead Bay every morning, back in the days when Norma Talmadge was a youngster and Connie was still in short skirts."

His blue eyes twinkled gaily as he lit a cigar. "Yes, I was Gladys Leslie's leading man for several pictures, just long enough to realize that mine was not a screenable personality—that the directorial end should be my goal."

"You see, I knew all about stage direction and had kept my eyes and ears open around the film studios."

"How long were you on the stage?" I queried.

"Started when I was eleven years old with Henry Miller in "Richard Savage," Madame Liza Jeanes, Harry Northrup, and Wilfrid North—now production manager for Vitagraph, were in that same company."

"Later on I went with Richard Carle in 'In Gotham,' in the famous fountain and first floor of Siegel-Cooper's Department Store reproduced."

"Between the soup and the broiled lobster, he told me of an uncle of his who made three million dollars fifty years ago in New York by heresquing Shakespeare and not letting the audience in on the fact."

"How was that possible?"

"Well," he replied, chuckling, "it was this way: everything was advertised and presented as being serious, but the acting would be so rotten that the audiences would boot and jeer. Then my uncle would stop the play, advance to the footlights and tell the audience that they were not being fair to the hard-working players, who had families to support and were doing their best! This would evoke much derisive laughter and comment."

"So he knew what he would do to result in a piece of stage setting collapsed, so that a serious love scene would be interrupted and, of course, marred. Each performance he knew something different happen. Once the audience tossed a cabbage onto the stage and my uncle, with serious mien

Contemporary Criticisms

"THE WISE KID"
(Continental)

"Universal is fortunate to be able to secure stories of this type because they suit the personality and talents of Gladys Walton better than anything else she has had. 'The Gutternurse' was another of this variety and 'The Wise Kid' is a good follow up on it. "A good deal of the picture's laughs come from the titles of which there are a great many. They are well written, however, even if they do make the film a bit 'tacky' at times."

—Wid's.

"If there is one star who is finding appropriate vehicles for expression—that star is Gladys Walton. Her personality fits exactly the type of role which she has been portraying of late—a type of role which may find her as some razzamuffin Pollyanna or East Side Cinderella."

—Motion Picture News.

"A more than pleasant reaction for the tiresome Pollyanna fairytale, 'The Wise Kid,' is a laugh on the person who goes through the world looking for a chance to do 'kind deed' instead of minding his own business."

"It might be described as a love affair in slang as the characters are of the temenent section with the jargon and tastes of that district consistently reproduced."—Moving Picture World.

"A WIDE OPEN TOWN"
(Selznick)

Conway Tearle has been given a first-rate story in his latest production and one that will in all probability please his admirers thoroughly. The 'honest gambler' idea is not essentially original but it is nicely built up with a romance that reaches the 125 happy ending in the final reel. Director Ince tells the story evenly and it moves swiftly toward an effective climax.

—Wid's.

"A typical high-class program feature is 'A Wide Open Town,' starring Conway Tearle.... It is of the 'reform' variety, but it is never trite or gross in its purpose."

—Motion Picture News.

"CARDIGAN"
(Messmore Kendall)

"So much ground is covered by the story that many long descriptive and informative titles have been necessary to keep it comprehensive. They succeed generally in keeping facts clear and intelligible, but there a 'kind deed' instead of minding his own as saving a little too much prominence and the romance suffers thereby."

"Undoubtedly the best feature of the production is the presentation of the famous Paul Revers ride. This bit in particular is sure to inspire a great patriotic fervor and for that matter the entire picture has a tendency to boost the 'America for Americans' slogan."

—Wid's.

"The story-interest is not as keen in the picture as in the novel, there being several jumps in the continuity and liberty has been taken with showing incidents of the time which sort of defy logic."

"The Indians are not good types and the Colonial scenes are too refined. However, the picture carries some exciting sequences."—Motion Picture News.
"Crammed with exciting and varied incidents which are accompanied by a charming love story that, in a manner of speaking, plays a counter melody to the historical plot, but is strong enough to satisfy those who demand romance in their pictures, the picturization of Robert W. Chambers' extremely widely read novel of some years ago makes a picture with which no exhibitor can go wrong... It is illustrated patriotism without being mawkishly sentimental and it is stirring without performing what is popularly known as 'waving the flag' in a cheap manner."

THE MAN ON THE COVER
By Ted LeBerthon

"I'm going to make dramas and comedy dramas, but no tragedies," he declares; "I'm going to cleave to that middle road wherein the story's the thing. No trying to put over a negligible story because of its pictorial possibilities."

That same evening I had dinner with a quite successful motion picture director. I asked him if he knew O'Connor.

"Do I?" was the prompt reply. "Why, I've watched him for the past two years, and his future is an assured success. He combines practicality with a strain of poetry and a feel for strong drama that is almost uncanny. Yes, Frank is a mighty capable fellow."

AT LASKY'S

Among the interesting arrivals at the studio this week were Mr. and Mrs. George Fitzmaurice, the latter known professionally as Ouida Bergere, who is responsible for the scenarios of many of her husband's motion pictures. Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of Famous Players-Lasky Corp., announced that Mr. Fitzmaurice, who is the producer of "Experience," "On the Dance," "Ever," "Three Live Ghosts," and other Paramount pictures, would soon begin work on a screen version of "Happiness," J. Hartley Manners' stage success, with May McAvoy in the role formerly played by Laurette Taylor. Miss Bergere will adapt "Happiness" to the screen.

Tom Geraghty, formerly Supervising Editor of the London Studios, arrived, in company with Mr. and Mrs. Fitzmaurice, and will augment the staff of Frank E. Woods at the studio in a chief editorial capacity.

John S. Robertson, producer of "Sentimental Tommy," "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," "Footlights," etc., accompanied by his wife, professionally known as Josephine Lovett, are soon to become members of the big family at the studio, where Mr. Robertson will shortly begin production of a picture.

William de Mille will soon arrive in California to begin work on "Nice People," which play Clara Beranger has adapted to the screen, Mr. de Mille has secured for his production to follow "Nice People," the Booth Tarkington play, "Clarence," which is to be made with a star cast.

"Blood and Sand," which is Rudolph Valentino's initial star vehicle, was started this week at the studio under the direction of Fred Nible. June Mathis adapted this Ibaneez story, Anna Q. Nilsson is leading woman, and Lila Lee appears in one of the roles in the picture.

Gloria Swanson has begun work on "The Gilded Cage," her next picture, a Sam Woods Production. Elmer Harris wrote the screen play from the stage version by Anna Nichols. David Powell is leading man, and among others in the cast are Anne Cornwall, Chas. A. Stevenson and Walter Hiers.

Jack Holt and Bebe Daniels, co-stars in "Val of Paradise," the film play directed by Rollin Sturges, adapted by Will M. Ritchey from the story by Vinie E. Roe, are at work at the studio and nearby locations completing this western drama, much of which was made in Arizona.

"The Ordeal," under the direction of Paul Powell, is nearing completion.

Under the direction of Alfred Green, Thomas Meighan is progressing towards the climax of "Our Leading Citizen," George Ade's original contribution, which the author and Waldenmar Young adapted.

"The Woman Who Walked Alone," George Melford's production, in which Dorothy Dilton is featured, and wherein Wanda Hawley and Milton Sills have important roles, has now reached the stages when location work is necessary to represent scenes in the South African veldt and the mountainous country of that section of the world. This story is by Will M. Ritchey from the short story by John Colton.

Perryn Stanlaws' production, "Over the Border," after many weeks in the far north of the State, is being brought to a close at the studio. The cast of this picture is headed by Betty Compson and Tom Moore.

Cecil B. de Mille appeared for a short time at the studio this week, almost entirely restored to his normal health, and it is understood that, within a few weeks, production will be started on "Man'slaughter," by Jeanne Macpherson, suggested by the story of the same name by Alice Duer Miller. It will be a Paramount Picture.

PORTLAND, ME., HAS PRODUCING UNIT

A building permit has been issued to the Charlton Film Co., which provides for erection of a studio at Riveriton Park, in Portland, Me., to be used by the company which will produce pictures for theaters, scenes to be laid in and around Portland.

Valuable Publicity

Very infrequently do we stumble upon any type of publicity which we recognize as sufficiently notable or meritorious to overcome an inherited journalistic distaste for editorial advertising. "My Travels Abroad," by Charlie Chaplin, a March publication from Harper and Brothers, is a recent exception. It is because this effort is significant to the motion picture industry from several angles and therefore entirely worthy of the profession's serious perusal that we attempt a short review at this time.

Being a humorous autobiography rather cleverly shared with a half pathetic tone, of the world famous comedian's first return to Europe since his advent in America ten years ago, it makes up in picturesque phrasing and an intimate portrait of its subject, that which it misses in the way of technical perfection. The idea behind the document may be unusual in no sense, but its genuine tone and interesting attitude has never heretofore been characteristic of even the highest type of picture celebrity publicity. The real Chaplin is continually revealed through these pages of adventure as any of his acquaintances can testify and the way that liberties are taken with his mental trend further points to the idea that the droll genius is in fact the author of these sidelights upon himself. We doubt whether any eminent human would allow another to throw him into the light of ridicule of the type which Charlie consistently directs at himself. But it is delightful, constructive ridicule in places approaching the very ingenious in its comedy.

His diffidence at the prospect of meeting George Bernard Shaw, his casual failure to appear in season after having arranged an appointment with Lloyd George, his appreciation for Thomas Burke and affection for the simplicity in H. G. Wells, all of these disclose the soul of a timid but rather naughty child combated strenuously by the outlook of a hero-worshipped man of the word. To use a favorite term of the little actor, it is all very "intriguing."

Further, the personal slants upon the foremost political and artistic personages of Europe are more than entertaining; they are instructive.

From our standpoint as an industry there are two notable points accomplished here. In giving to the public something both amusing and wholesome in the way of picture colony personality sketches, Chaplin is assisting his profession to discount the detrimental press copy which it has recently received in such inordinate doses through the unscrupulous agencies of sensation seeking newspaper correspondents. Furthermore, we probably have in this little volume the only authentic life chapter which will ever be written upon this artistic and justifiably famous representative of a great endeavor. As such it is infinitely valuable for our history. Its preparation was a happy thought and its publishing by a reputable firm, a rare piece of judgment.

"Outlook" Says of the Theatre

The following article from a March "Outlook," championing the actor, should be of great interest to the picture profession. Its viewpoint is entirely wholesome and it contains only the most obvious and therefore supportable statements.

"A savage onslaught on all theaters and all actors and actresses cannot be justified, but it may be palliated, if not excused, on the ground of the accuser's ignorance. It practically never comes from any one who has a living acquaintance with the members of the theatrical profession or has any familiarity with their work upon the stage. Those who have that familiarity and have the good moral sense to seek the best which the theater has to offer will generally agree with the sentiment attributed by Sidney Colvin to Robert Browning after seeing Sullivan's impersonation of King Lear: 'It makes me wonder which is the greater, the poet or the actor.'

"Great actors have in their autobiographies and their letters graphically described the perils of the stage. They might well be inclined, when not in a defensive mood, to acknowledge that theirs is an extra-hazardous profession. There is no doubt that there is great need of reform. The responsibility for the evil conditions which exist must be divided, though unequally, between three classes. "It partly rests upon certain theatrical managers who have neither moral nor art standards, to whom the theater is merely a money-making profession, and who measure success wholly by the receipts at the box-office. Such managers are to be classed with shysters in the law, quacks in medicine, purveyors of vicious art and degenerate literature. The responsibility partly rests upon theater-goers whose morbid curiosity is great, whose consciences are dumb, and who are attracted by vicious plays—the more vicious, the more attractive. But the responsibility is partly shared by those who ought by their influence to inspire a discriminating judgment between the good and the evil, but who, instead, by their indiscriminating condemnation of all theaters and all actors encourage an equally indiscriminating approval of all.

"We hope that the day is not far distant when the preachers will regard the drama as they now regard fiction, and will use what influence they possess to inspire their young people to exercise a discriminating judgment upon both forms of intellectual and emotional life."
ARMSTRONG STARTS FIRST

Largely financed by a group of former associates on the Mack Sennett lot, "Jilly Armstrong, remembered for his comedy work under the banners of Fox, Century, L-KO, Mack Sennett, etc., has started his first star picture for Reaever Productions entitled "Slow and Easy."

Rea Hunt, a former Mack Sennett director, is directing from a script prepared by Charles Dilz, who is also general manager of Reaever Productions. Armstrong's support is headed by Hap H. Ward and Patricia McGill. Robert Smith, also from the Sennett forces, is cameraman.

The first release of this series is scheduled for June 1st.

INITIAL SHOWING IN GLENDALE

The initial showing of the Little Nip comedies took place recently at the Glendale Theatre, and Harry Burns who is responsible for the stories and direction is now arranging to exhibit the entire series at that theatre.

TOURNEUR TO START IN APRIL

Maurice Tourneur will leave for England in April to direct the Goldwyn production, "The Christian," and will be followed two weeks later by the cast, which is not yet announced. Hall Caine has prepared the scenario and will take an active part in the filming.

HOUSMAN HAS OWN COMPANY

Arthur Housman who has been appearing in a number of recent Selznick releases is being starred in a series of two reelers and features by the Housman Comedies, a $40,000 corporation recently formed in Albany by T. M. Lynch and A. L. Strauss. Production is under way on the first comedy at the Biograph Studio, under direction of Alan Crosland. In the cast are Frank Currier, Nita Naldi and Gladys Leslie.

CUNEIO LOCATIONING

Lester Cuneo is now at work on a five-reel outdoor picture which has been given the working title of "Double Fisted." The exterior scenes are being taken in the canyon of San Fernando and at Chatsworth Park.

CHRISTIE STUDIO NOTES

The comedy "Fair Enough" has been finished this week for early release on the Educational program and another is being started.

"Fair Enough" is a Christie farce comedy with Dorothy Devore featured, supported by Earl Rodney. This story is by Robert Hall and directed by Al Christie.

The picture now under way is to be called "A Hickory Hick" and will feature Bobby Vernon, supported by Charlotte Connelly, a newcomer in Christie Comedies. Harold Beaudine, who directed Bobby Vernon in "Hokus Pokus," recently released, is handling the script on the new picture.

Tom Mix recently completed "The Fighting Streak" for Fox.

ENTER SAM WOOD PRODUCTIONS

It is understood that future pictures made by Sam Wood will be known as Sam Wood Productions. Mr. Wood has directed the last few Gloria Swanson pictures for Paramount and will probably make the future ones as well.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Harold Lloyd put the final touches this week on his feature, "Grandma's Boy," which has had several studio and two public previews, and with a third showing will be ready for shipment to New York. The comedy went under production October 22.

Screen credit in addition to Mr. Lloyd and Mildred Davis playing opposite, goes to Charles Stevenson, "heavy," Anna Townsend, Lloyd's grandma, and Dick Sutherland, the rolling stone. Mr. Lloyd will take no vacation but will commence immediately on his next production, "Heaven," which was written by Hal Roach, Sam Taylor and Jean Havez.

Harry "Stuoh" Polland began his first two-reeler this week, the working title being "Grandpa's Will." Charles Parrott, director of Roach Productions with the exception of the Harold Lloyd comedies, wrote the story and will handle the megaphone, assisted by Bob Evans. Marie Mosquini heads the support.

"Paul" Parrott has a few more scenes to take for his first picture under his new series of comedies. Mr. Parrott is going over the script for the second comedy which starts production next week, for which was written by Hal Roach, Sam Taylor and Jean Havez.

HUMAN HEARTS," a Jewel special, starring House Peters, supported by an all-star cast and directed by King Baggot is being given its second and final editing. "The Storm," the second special, starring Peters, directed by Reginald Barker, and "The Loss of Lowrie's," a Jewel production starring Priscilla Dean are also being edited.

Recently completed features to be sent to the exchanges this week are: "The Man Under Cover," Louis Victor Etying's story of a convict by a convict, starring Herbert Rawlinson and directed by T. Browning; "The Way Back," the last screen story by the late John Fleming Wilson, starring Frank Mayo and directed by Stuart Paton; "Kissed," starring Marie Prevost, directed by King Baggot; and "Second Hand Rose," A. P. Younger's story with Gladys Walton, directed by Lloyd Ingraham.

The three Universal jewels that are starting production are "Under Two Flags," Ouida's international romance starring Priscilla Dean; "The Suburban," Charles L. Dazey's old time stage melodramatic success, to be filmed as a Universal jewel with an all-star cast; and "The Filt." "With Stanley in Africa" and "In the Days of Buffalo Bill," two historical chapter plays starring George Walsh and Art Acord, are two thirds completed, while "The Adventures of Robinson Crusoe," starring Harry Myers, in making rapid progress with earlier episodes.

Euna Luckey is included in the cast of "Locked Out," starring Alice Calhoun.

The removal of the Selznick organization and Warner Brothers to Hollywood virtually concentrates all motion picture production in the west. There remain in the vicinity of New York only the D. W. Griffith and a very few other and less important units.

"WILD HONEY"
(Superba)

An introduction in the parks of the English nobility, tragedy in the way of a murder early in the picture, the horror of the lost in the South African veldt, a rescue from melodramatic opposition and "wild honey" with a dam explosion and a realistic, ensuing flood which brings the produc'ts' climax after effective suspense! This is "Wild Honey," Universal's latest Priscilla Dean presentation written by Cynthia Stockley and well scarnerized by Lucien Hubbard. It is an exceedingly suitable vehicle for the strenuous young star and altogether the situations hold unlimited interest.

Wesley Ruggles' direction displays a fine comprehension of his story and he achieves an unusually high tone for the photoplay in view of its class.

Miss Dean gives a characteristic performance in Lady Vivienne, an Englishwoman, who leaves her superficiality under the merciless sun upon the South African desert. This portrayal can only increase the star's popularity, generally.

Robert Ellis plays the masculine lead, Kerry Burgess, according to the hero standard, lending him much virility and considerable sympathy.

The Berry brothers are seen in distinct but equally impressive and repulsive heavies, Henry Porthen, a financial demon, and Buck Roper, a draflict. Noah fills the former and Wallace, the latter. Both are invaluable touches to the story which, as has been said, depends to quite some extent upon melodrama to accomplish its suspense.

In fact, "Wild Honey" opposition is so vital an element that it takes six actors to handle it. They are further, Lloyd Whitlock, Landers Stevens, C. J. Frank and Harry De Roy.

Helen Raymond offers a clever note in Joan Rudd, Porthen's scorned secretary who is the old murder, while Raymond Blandwayt and Carl Stockdale complete the list of players.

"COME ON OVER"
(California)

Rupert Hughes' latest Goldwyn produced story, "Come On Over," is a whimsical, simple little Irish comedy with many rich characters from old Erin strung upon an almost too thin plot-thread. In fact, the entire picture depends upon the charm, humorous and pathetic, of these various portrayals for its intrigue, intense interest, or even marked logic; the tale is conspicuously lacking. Nevertheless, it holds a fair amount of entertainment value and, as has been intimated, gold mine of characterization for its cast.

Particularly well managed by Director Al Green are the comedy situations, the picture's most excellent moments.

An understandable scenario by the author, good photographv which is to L. W. O'Connell's credit and a few quaintly beautiful localities are a further factor to the attraction of "Come On Over."

However, it takes the talented players themselves to make the production really live.

The chief feminine position is piquantly occupied by Colleen Moore whose delightful Irish mannerisms and attitude seem to carry the natural thing from her. Much more involved roles has the sincere little actress ac-

"THE SEVENTH DAY"

(Kinema)

Richard Barthelmess' second starring cinematic play for Inspiration Pictures, Inc., while being unable to boast any degree of the strength which made "Politabul David" one of the year's best, is a fortunate follow-up for that production. "The Seventh Day" is a simple romance dealing with real people, sincere and frivolous. Always one is aware of the quaint fishing village background with which its author, Porter Emerson Brown, has added so much that it is charming to his briny little tale.

Henry King seems almost essential to Barthelmess pictures inasmuch as he continues to add immeasurably to them with his su cine direction. Into this story he is certs in perfect proportion the comedy and pathos upon which it depends. His progression makes the absence of an outstanding climax or an element of pronounced sus-provides the finishing touch to the shamrock framed picture. Florence Drew, Harold Holland, Mary Warren and C. B. Leasure fill it out, each in pleasing part.

CRANIS ERMAN

Elinor Hancock, James Marcus, Tom Bates, Kathleen O'Connor, Monti Collins and C. E. Mason competently handle the remainpense, unnoticiable.

FRANCIS ERMAN

The scenario moves evenly, Conlager's pictorially fulfills all expectations and the title writer helps not a little. The cast is, without exception, capable.

Dick himself makes a lovable boy out of the unsophisticated but always dignified John Alden, Jr. He carries well the responsibility of his fishing boat and position in the community which is an agreeable di-essence in the young, rural screen characterization, ordinarily so devoid of any obligation or pose. John is all that could be desired in sincerity and it is easy to understand why even a pampered, city girl might fall in love with him.

The flapper in this instance is none other than Louise Huff whose rendition of Patricia Vane is unimaginably delectable aside from the fact that she runs to superficialities.

George Stewart and John Cornwall playing opposite another in second parts, namely Reggie Pell and Betty Alden, are an entirely attractive addition to the story. While Frank Losee, Leslie Stowell, Thunmillion, Young, Alfred Schmidt, Grace Barton, Patterson Jual and Teddie Gerard are suit-

Dryfor the remaining positions.

"The Seventh Day" will unquestionably draw well for First National. Its star is a great bet.

"TRAVELIN' ON"

Grauman's

The same rugged frontier setting, the indomitable hero, red-blooded battles and quick gunplay, wound up with a sympathetic sacrifice to death, has brought Will H. Hart into the warm light of public favor where he has remained unchallenged for the past several years, is seen again in "Travelin' On," his current production recently scarnerized and directed by Lambert Hitt-

Yet from the cowboy star's original. The suspense created upon by Hart's six year old fans and others as well, is present in abundance and the tear that comes with the good man's reform is very real. Otherwise, in fact altogether, nothing new is included in the melodrama. We doubt whether its lack will be noticed. So long as the spirit of adventure fills young hearts, big homely Bill Hart will delight thousands.

Here he enacts J. E., a man who trusts nothing but himself on less than four legs. The quiet, fearless stranger is not so pos-nor his attitude so trite as the sophisticated might be led to believe, for the appealing personality of this actor humanizes the ex-agreement.

Ethel Grey Terry is a remarkable type for the pioneer woman. As the minister's wife who knows that the Lord will provide her with sufficient strength to resist the two desperate men who desire her, she is always convincing.

Harry Carey makes Dandy McGee just as repulsive as dance hall and saloon keepers should be according to all accepted standards, and William Comer's atmosphere somewhat as Haskins, the vilcage gossip and schemer.

Brinsley Shaw as the patient minister, little Dandy Jane Irving, and Leon Kantor complete the cast of "Travelin' On," which is released by Paramount.

It is understood that Jack Dempsey will start work on a new serial about April 15th.
WARD TO DIRECT ROLAND

Ernest C. Ward has been engaged to direct Ruth Roland in her forthcoming serial, "The Riddle of the Range," which will be produced at United States Studios and presented through Pathe. Mr. Ward has been identified with the stage and screen for more than thirty years as actor, manager and director.

WIGMAKER ENGAGED FOR "OLIVER TWIST"

William Hepner has been commissioned to design and make the wigs which will be used in Jackie Coogan's forthcoming starring vehicle, "Oliver Twist," about to start production under the direction of Frank Lloyd at United Studios.

JACK ROACH WITH POLLARD CO.

Jack Roach, brother of Hal Roach, will act as second cameraman for the Harry "Snub" Pollard company on its newly launched program of two-reelers, one released to be for the domestic, the other for the foreign market. Mr. Roach has shot for all the comedy companies at the Roach studios and has recently been engaged in making a series of photographic reels on industrial California.

PAIGE IN JOSE'S NEXT

Jean Paige will be among those featured in "The Magnificent Ambersons," the forthcoming feature production which Edward Jose is to direct for Vitagraph.

LLOYD ENGAGES UNCLE

W. L. Fraser, of Denver, Colo., and uncle of Harold Lloyd, has arrived in Los Angeles to take charge of Mr. Lloyd's business affairs, with headquarters at the Hal E. Roach studios. Mr. Fraser was previously supervisor of the government reserves in Colorado.

PERSHING OPPOSITE SANTSCHI

Marcella Pershing has been engaged as leading woman for Tom Santachi in the filming of "It's the Law," which Robert North Bradbury is directing at Universal.

Eliot Howe, Jr., ten months old son of the late Eliot Howe, Benjamin B. Hannah director who died in December, is making his first appearance in motion pictures in Dorothy Phillips' starring production for First National, "The Sea Turtles," which Allan Hokbar is producing at United Studios.

Paul Brunet of Pathe expects to sail for France the end of May.

Al Hall is directing the fourth of the Nick Carter series at the Estae Studio. Edmund Lowe and Diana Allen are appearing in it.

Robert Anderson is playing in support of Allee Calthon in "Locked Out," her forthcoming starring vehicle for Vitagraph.

Margaret Livingston, who supported Florence Vidor in "Lying Lips," has been engaged for one of the principal roles with Harry Myers in "Robinson Crusoe."

RALSTON OPPOSITE PARROTT

Hal E. Roach has engaged J ohnnae Ralston to play opposite "Paul" Parrott in his first comedy. Miss Ralston has just finished work with Max Linder whom she supported in his burlesque version of "The Three Musketeers."

KANE TAKES CHARGE OF ASSOCIATED

Arthur S. Kane recently assumed his duties as president of Associated Exhibitors, Inc., succeeding Samuel Harding of Kansas City, who resigned when he formed Capitol Enterprises, Inc., recently.

John C. Ragland, vice-president and general manager of the A. S. Roach Pictures Corp., will handle the detail of the latter company, including the Charles Ray contracts, while Kane in the future will make his headquarters in the Associated offices in New York.

MORENO JOINS GOLDWYN

Goldwyn recently signed Antonio Moreno to enact a featured role in "The Bitterness of Sweet," which will be Rupert Hughes' next production for Goldwyn.

LA MARR IN INGRAM'S NEWEST

Barbara La Marr has been signed by Metro to enact one of the principal roles in Rex Ingram's forthcoming cinematic play, "The Black Orchid," filming of which has already started.

FAIR HEADS SUPPORT IN GORDON PRODUCTION

Elinor Fair is playing the principal femme role in support of Robert Gordon, who is being featured in a series of Eugene Manlove Rhodes' stories by the Ivar MacFadden productions. "Stepsons of Light," the first of six pictures which Gordon will be starred, is now in production.

KLUMB SIGNS CHAUDET

Louis William Chaudet is at present engaged in directing comedies for Roy H. Klumb Productions.

Albert Roccardi and Harold Poshay will be seen in important comedy roles in "Why Not Marry?"

Eve Southern has been engaged to portray an important role in "Locked Out," which serves as Alice Cathoun's next starring vehicle for Vitagraph.

Zeena Keefe is appearing in "Love and the Law," a James Oliver Curwood story being made by Pine Tree Pictures, Inc., for Arrow release.

Jack Connolly, Wharton James and Harry A. Smith are playing in support of Robert Gordon in "Stepsons of Light," the Eugene Manlove story which Seymour Zeliff is directing for McFadden Productions.

Hap H. Ward, formerly one of the principal supports of Gale Henry, but more recently with Chester Comedies, heads the supporting cast of "Billy" Armstrong, who is being featured in a series of comedies, produced by Reagger Productions, Inc.

Hal E. Roach has loaned Roy Brooks, a member of the Harold Lloyd company, to Tara Kinbath Young for a Russian sequence in her next production. Mr. Brooks began his career two years ago at the Roach studios where he has enacted a variety of roles.

CHINESE AMBASSADOR PRAISES "LOTUS BLOSSOM"

The authenticity as well as the excellence of "Lotus Blossom," an Oriental drama distributed by National Exchanges, Inc., received high praise recently from D. K. Wellington Koo, Chinese Ambassador to this country and chief of the Chinese delegation to the Disarmament Conference.

At the suggestion of Mr. Koo, the last function at the embassy in Washington, D. C., was a private showing of "Lotus Blossom." The members of the embassy staff expressed delight over the portrayal of scenes from the land of their nativity. "Lotus Blossom" is a Frank Graydon directed picture.

PALMER ADDS TO ITS STAFF

The Department of Education of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation announces the addition of a number of new names to its advisory council and contributors. Rex Ingram becomes a member of the advisory council. The special lecture contributors for the 1922 term are Jeanne MacPherson, Reginald Berker, Marion Fairfax, June Mathis, Clarence Badger, Paul Bern, Eve Unsell, Eugene Presbrey, Rob Wagner, Eugene V. Lewis, Kate Corbaley and Denison Clift.

EASTMAN KODAK HAS PROCESS RECOMMENDED FOR CLOSE-UP

As the result of a series of private exhibitions held in New York, some interest has been aroused among producers over the two-color process which marks the entrance of the Eastman Kodak Co. into a new field. The process, called the Kodak Process for Color Motion Pictures, shows the results of experiments conducted by the Kodak Company over a long period of years. It is principally for close-ups that this new process is recommended at the present time.

It is stated that in the near future the Kodak Company will establish a laboratory in Los Angeles to hypersensitize and develop a negative film. All color printing will be done at Rochester.

AT THE UNITED STUDIOS

J. L. Frothingham has returned to his office following an attack of influenza, and has resumed the cutting and editing of "The Man Who Smiled.

The Jackie Coogan company is selecting the featured players for "Oliver Twist," which will be Jackie's next photoplay vehicle. Dudlu Frank Lloyd is busily engaged in the preparation of the screen adaptation.

Jack White of Hamilton-Whitet Comedies, has completed his eleventh comedy for Educational.

Sidney Franklin has gone to New York for the premiere of Norma Talmadge's "Smillin' Through.

John W. Grey is completing the scenario of his original story, "The Riddle of the Range," the serial in which Ruth Roland is to star. Production will commence in about two weeks.

FIRST NATIONAL NOTES

Marshall Neilan is now selecting the cast for his next First National attraction, "Her Man," which has been adapted to the screen from the story by George Patullo.

Katherine MacDonald returned this week from Truckee, where she has been filming snow scenes for the Canadian sequence of her latest production, "The Woman Conquers.

First National Pictures has started a new Comedy Department which gives special attention to the exhibition of fun films made by Charles Chaplin, Buster Keaton and Mack Sennett's two teams of comedians, Ben Turpin and Puffy Haver, and Billie Bevan and Mildred June.

AT VITAGRAPH

President A. E. Smith has arrived from New York and is busily engaged in arranging a program for summer work at the studio.

Casting for "The Magnificent Ambersons" is expected to start shortly. Edward Jose is to direct.

Alice Calhoun is rapidly completing her third contract for the company, also from the First National.

Director David Smith and his company, making "My Wild Irish Rose," previously entitled "The Schauchraun," have been engaged in filming eight sequences this week at San Pedro and Point Firmum.

Earle Williams is finishing "Parkington's Widow," which will be remained before release.

Vitagraph has acquired for future release, "Too Much Business," a comedy in six reels, adapted from the William Earl Derr Bigger's Saturday Evening Post story and produced by Jess Robbins.

CASTING INITIAL PRODUCTION

The Associated Artists at the Boyle Avenue Studios, just organized, are inaugurating two new units to make comedies with Charles Amador, twelve pictures to be filmed every six months. The Associated consists of R. V. Quick, Cedric Fields and Frederick Reel, Jr.

Work will start at once on the Frederick Reel, Jr., features which will be a series of adventure pictures of the far north and the tropical south.

Mr. Fields is in charge of the casting.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES

It is stated that in May, James A. Fitzpatrick will go to Europe to get material for short subjects on the lives of British authors and statesmen. Charles Urban will screen them after the fashion of the Great American Author series, and the Great American Statesmen series, which Mr. Fitzpatrick has just completed for the Kineto Company.

ITALIAN DIRECTOR FINISHES PICTURE

Word is received that Gemini, one of the important Italian directors, has completed "Cyrano de Bergerac," in which Richard Mansfield appeared in this country for some years. A print is expected in New York shortly.

"East is West" To Have Lonergan in Advisory Capacity

Sydney Franklin has engaged Lester Loner- gan, who acted as stage manager for the speaking version of "East is West," to act in an advisory capacity on the preparation of the scenario, as Mr. Loner- gan is considered to know China very thoroughly, and can be of use in the research work necessary for the costumes and settings of "East is West.

Constance Talmadge will remain in New York until the middle of April, at which time she will return to begin work on "East is West.

The Morine Producing Company is filming snow scenes for the seventh picture of the N. W. Mounted series, featuring George Chesebro, supported by Vivian Rich.

Marie Prevost, comedy-drama star of Universal, has returned from her recent trip to New York.

John L. Lyttle has been appointed receiver for Exceptional Pictures Corp. The company was thrown into the bankruptcy court through the filing of a petition against it recently.

THE SCREEN TO AID IN NATIONAL BUSINESS BETTERMENT

The motion picture screen again comes to the front as an acknowledged medium for public expression in the Better Business Contest being conducted by "Topics of the Day," released by Exchange Inc. A weekly prize of $100 will be awarded for the best fifty word answers to the question of the hour: "How Can Business Be Improved for the Manufacturer, Merchant, Working Man and Woman?"

The prize winner will be announced each week on the screen. The sponsors of the contest deem the screen as a logical vehicle for the conduct of such an important campaign.

The Exchange and the producers of this reel have been overwhelmed with suggestions from various sources as to the immense amount of good possible of attainment in screening a series of Better Business messages. It is to make these messages a real help to our lawmakers, and thus bring about remedial legislative action, that the contest is being conducted.

FORTHCOMING EDUCATIONAL RELEASES

"Missing Men" will be the second of the Wilderness Tales by Robert G. Bruce, of which "And Women Must Weep," that recently had its premiere at the Capitol Theater in New York, was the first: "Missing Men" tells in a dramatic little story the misfortunes of a man overcome by the "timber panic" in the great forests of the Northwest.

"The People of Old Bruges," the next release in Educational's series of World Wanderings, gives ten minutes of interesting glimpses into the life of the people of this old town in Belgium.

COSMOSART NOTES

John Thackento, an artist from Europe, has been secured as Art Director for the Cosmosart Studios.

Ernest Palmer has left for Europe. He will return in August. While abroad, Mr. Palmer will study lighting and photography.

The new administration building is nearing completion and office space for the smaller companies is being rapidly taken.

HUTCHISON AND COMPANY IN FLORIDA

Charles Hutchison and twenty members of his supporting company, with Producer George B. Seitz and his camera staff, sailed from New York for Florida recently for semi-tropical locations, figuring in the forthcoming Pathe serial "speed," to be called "Speed." Among the principals who sailed with the party were Lucy Fox, playing the heroine role; Harry Senela and John Dillon, heavies; Winfridie Verina, Pathe contract-winner in the Hippodrome girls controversy; Cecile Bonnelle and Joe Cuny.

Both Jacksonville and Miami will be headquarters for the company while drawing on subtropical conditions for some novel "stunts." The company will return to New York by way of Chattanooga, Tennessee, whose mountain environs will furnish important sequences in the picture.

Clifford S. Effelt, president and general manager of Metropolitan Productions, has returned from a 1,000-mile trip through northern Mexico where he selected a number of exterior locals to be used in the company's next picture, "High Stakes."

AT LASKY'S

The atmosphere of old Spain is being picturesquely duplicated at the studio these days for Rodolph Valentino's first star picture, "Blood and Sand," Fred Niblo, director, and June Mathis, who wrote the story from Ibanez's novel, are devoting much attention to the settings and the atmospheric effects. It has been announced that Nita Naldi will play the role of Donna Sol, and Lila Lee is to be Carmen.

James Flavin has finished "The Dictator," starring Wallace Reid and the latter will next appear under the direction of William de Mille in the big cast of "Nice People." It is understood that Penrhyn Stanlaws, who is bringing to a conclusion his production, "Over the Border," will next produce an adaptation of Cynthia Stockley's story, "Pink Gods and Blue Demons," with Constance Binney featured and Anna Q. Nilsson in a prominent role.

Plans are being perfected by Cecil de Mille for his forthcoming production, "Man-slaughter," by Jennie MacPherson from the book by Allice Duer Miller, Lentrice Joy and Thomas Meighan are thus far mentioned as the two leading players.

"The Gilded Cage," a Sam Wood production, starring Gloria Swanson, is now under way, the opening scenes being in Southern France.

"North of the Rio Grande" is the title of the Jack Holt and Bebe Daniels co-star picture, directed by Rollin Sturgeon, which is now being finished. This is an adaptation by Will M. Ritchey and Vingle E. Roe's story, "Val of Paradise," and is largely an outdoor picture.

Paul Powell has finished "The Ordeal," in which Agnes Ayres is starred with Conrad Nagel in the leading male role.

Thomas Meighan and company making "Our Leading Citizen," under the direction of Alfred Green, will leave shortly for Mexico, where a number of village scenes will be made for this picture by George Adcox.

Irving Willat is expected to start in the near future the production of "The Siren Call," with Dorothy Dalton as the leading player. Full details will be announced shortly. Meantime Miss Dalton is completing the feature role of "The Woman Who Walked Alone," a George Melford production. The company is now on location making South African scenes.

NEW COMPANY FORMED

The McPartlan Motion Picture Co. has been formed by Seth D. Turner, Charles T. MacDonald and Harry Pariser and is at present preparing its first of a series of six two-reel comedies under the direction of Sydney Hayes to be followed upon the completion of the sixth by a series of five-reel dramas.

BABY MARIE RETURNING TO SCREEN

Baby Marie Osborne is returning to the screen after an absence of one year, during which time she has been making personal appearances under the supervision of the Pathé Exchange.

Baby Marie will appear in two-reel comedies, in which her sister Gloria, age four, will support her.

Among those appearing with Marney Wilson in "Why Not Marry?" a forthcoming National Exchange, Inc. release, are Albert Edward, who plays opposite Miss Wilson, George Wright and Agnes Neilson.

THE DIGEST OF THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY

"Too Much Business," the initial release of Jess Robbins Productions, is to be distributed through Vitagraph. It is an adaptation of Earl Burggers Saturday Evening Post story, "John Henry and the Restless Sex." The cast is headed by Edward Horton, leading man at the Majestic Theater, Los Angeles.

Preparations are now under way for the second picture to be made by Jess Robbins Productions which is to be an adaptation of Edgar Franklin's story, "The Ladder Jinx." This picture is now being cast and will be produced under the personal direction of Jess Robbins.

ROBBINS INITIAL PRODUCTION COMPLETED

NEILAN ANNOUNCES CAST FOR "FOOLS FIRST"

Upon completion of his newest production, "Fools First," Marshall Neilan announces the cast for this picture.

In the leading parts are Richard Dix, Claire Windsor, Claude Gillingwater, Raymond Griffith and George Fawcett. Other parts appearing in important characters are Leo White, Helen Lynch, Shannon Day, Harold Goodwin, Robert Brewer, Jack Duffy, molly Furer, E. Vilia, Charles Stillwell, George Poul- gold, William Irving, Theodore Van Eitl, Fred Kelsey, William Mchfin, George Hende-здez, Charles French, Hazel Keener, Monte Collins and Carrie Clark Warde.

"Fools First" was directed in its entirety by Mr. Neilan in Hollywood and San Fran- cisco.

This production is now being cut and assembled under the director's supervision. In the meantime preparations for the production of Neilan's next picture, "Her Man," are being completed and actual shooting will be started within the very near future.

INCE STUDIO ACTIVE

At the Thomas H. Ince studios Maurice Tourneur is putting the finishing touches to "Lorna Doone," Lambert Hillyer is making a few final scenes for "The Brotherhood of Hate," John Griffith Wray in directing "Someone to Love," and Director James W. Horne is completing plans for the commencement of work on "A Man of Action," the cast of which is now being chosen.

CUMMINGS CASTING

As a result of his direction of "The Man From Hell's River," Irving Cummings has been selected by the Western Pictures Exploitation Company to direct an all-star production. The subject is an underworld story written by Hope Loring, which will be filmed under the working title of "Fires of Vengeance."

Mr. Cummings is now busy selecting the cast which will be headed by Lon Chaney, who will be remembered for his interpretation of underworld types in such pictures as "The Miracle Man," and "The Penalty." This feature will be released as an Irving Cummings Production.

GORDON COMMENCES INITIAL STARING VEHICLE

Robert Gordon, who will be seen at the Kineema theatre next week in the Selig-Rock special, "The Rosary," has commenced work on his first independent starring vehicle, "Steps of Light," under the direction of Seymour Zeliff, former short story director.

Gordon has appeared opposite such actresses as Mary Pickford, Sylvia Breamer, Ruth Clifford, and Alice Joyce, and will be remembered for his work in the Paramount production of Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn."

Producer McFadden states that Mr. Gor- don will be starred in the entire series.

Anna Q. Nilsson has arrived from abroad where she appeared in several Fitzmaurice productions.

William Merrill McCormick is playing a "heavy" in "The Girl and the Motor" in its first week of production at Clune's Studio under the direction of Edward Alexander.

"FALSE FRONTS"
(Bradley Feature Film)

"False Fronts" as its title indicates, is a story of shade and pretense. Written by S. Barrett McConrath, the Cleveland impecsator, this picture reveals that a showman, having his hand on the pulse of the public, is able to give that same public what it wants.

"The director is to be commended for making a simple progressive drama. There are no repetitious details, the plot unfolding easily and naturally. Pictorially it offers some telling "shots", composing a rather lavish set, not a few of which are exceedingly vital. And it carries a fine vein of interest and suspense culminating in a sur-ing climax.

"The story carries elements of heart interest, pathos, romance, thrill, rich incident and considerable local color. It tugs at the finer nerves because it approaches the bedrock of human nature."—Motion Picture News.

"This story was written with the audience values in mind, for the writer, as the announcement discloses, is S. Barrett McConrick, managing director of the Allen Theatre, Cleveland, and writer of the well-known pictures, "Truthful Tolliver" and "The Disciple." Its situations are new: its action fact and the direction by Samuel Bradley shows a decided improvement in his work as a producer.

"The determination of a young man to 'come back' and the clever ruse by which his best friend at the risk of that friendship brings him back to his senses turns the appeal and suspense."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"LOVE'S BOOMERANG"
(British Paramount)

"Love's Boomerang" is a production made by the Parmount English studio with a cast mostly American and directed by John S. Robertson. The picture was photographed in England and France, and is an adaptation of Dion Clayton Cothorp's novel, "Per-plexus."

"It happens that beside the excellent work of the cast, it is the atmosphere that contributes most of the interest to the present picture, and in such a degree that it completely overshadows the story. The latter is old fashioned in style and unusually theatrical, so much so in fact that you can see the wheels go round, to mix the metaphor."—Moving Picture World.

"John S. Robertson has again scored in his most recent production made on the other side. While "Love's Boomerang" lacks the material and consistency of some of Robertson's former productions it nevertheless makes a charming production with many attractive points of interest. Robertson has kept the first half of the offering in his "Sentimental Tommy" mood while the climax he has intensified, the "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" element. Touches of both productions are evident in "Love's Boomerang."

"From start to finish the director's hand is evident. Well thought out details and a much handling of the situations raise the story from its ordinary level and keep the interest on a high plane. Fine sets, splendid photography, artistic locations and good acting all help to compensate for the melodramatic and inconsistent story."—

"Love's Boomerang" isn't devoid of heart interest, outlining a love story with a melodramatic setting and a murder mystery for good measure, which is solved to everyone's satisfaction at the close, virtue being duly rewarded and the guilty villain meeting his just deserts. The film was made abroad, and is consequently rich in local color, the French and British atmosphere being, of course, true to life and thoroughly in keeping with the unwinding of the tale.

"There are many beautiful exteriors in evidence, not the least of the picture's arti-tic lines being the charming views of the quiet British countryside, and good lighting prevails. The continuity is unbroken and the action moves smoothly."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"There are enough plots and counterplots in 'Love's Boomerang' to fill a serial. The central theme is interesting, since it shows an old idea refreshed with some plausible incident... It is our impression that if the picture were simplified in plot it would carry a greater appeal.

"The story is difficult to follow because of its many sub-plots. But in its favor is a remarkable effort on the part of the director sparing no expense to collect charming exteriors. There is some good circus atmosphere and technically the production is also good for such weak material."—Motion Picture News.

"SHATTERED IDOL'S"
(Associated First National)

"Perhaps because there have been so many mother love stories pictured lately in the picture, a mother's heart theme would be thoroughly appropriate and so Idle
A. R. Wylie's novel, 'The Daughter of Brahma,' was selected and produced under the title, 'A Bride of the Gods.' The adaptation has been given a suitable presentation and a capable cast selected to portray the various roles and evident discretion as to their suitability for the parts.

"The story's main situation is much too improbable to be convincing."—Wife's.

"Shattered Idols" is a lavish production of a theme that has great possibilities, India, it always seems, affords very fine opportunities for a picturesque development of drama, and this fact has been born clearly in mind. The material splendor, in this case, is more than ably executed and Hindu intrigue and Hindu traditions furnish the dramatic and spectacular interest, the best illustration of this being the temple scene.

"A justifiable criticism of the entire production is that it has a tendency to be vague at times, as if some of the important links had been omitted, and too much is left to the imagination."—Moving Picture World.

"BOY CRAY"
(R-C Pictures)

"The picture 'Boy Crazy,' featuring Doris May, is fairly good amusement for an audience who seek light comedy..."

NATIONAL EXCHANGES, INC., OPENS SECOND OFFICE

Announcement of the opening of the second affiliated exchange, owned and controlled by National Exchanges, Inc., is made by Walter L. Johnson, president of National Exchanges.

The new exchange is Cosmopolitan National Exchanges, Inc., located on South Wabash Avenue, Chicago, with Carl Harthill as manager.

The first of its own exchanges opened by National Exchanges, Inc., was Metropolitan National Exchanges, Inc., with offices on Seventh Avenue, New York City, which has been doing business for several weeks under the direction of R. C. Croomer.

With the opening of the new Chicago exchange, National Exchanges, Inc., now has its own distributing offices in the two largest cities in the country. This is in line with the policy of National Exchanges to own and operate its own distributing offices. Further expansion in the concrete form of more exchanges directly controlled by National Exchanges, is definitely promised for the very near future.

"Opening our own exchange is the greatest forward step possible for us to take," said Johnson. "The history of the motion picture industry shows that the distributing concerns that have endured have been those able to control their own exchanges. This move places us on as solid a basis as that enjoyed by the older distributing organizations. National Exchanges at the present time has more than 150 ree of film being distributed and our own branch offices are ready to give complete program service to exhibitors."

Carl Harthill, manager of Cosmopolitan National Exchanges, Chicago office, is a veteran film man. Associated with him are George West and Charles Lindian, salesmen.

"Why Not Marry?" a feature comedy romance with Margery Wilson, directed by John S. Lopez, will be the next release of National Cosmopolitan National Exchanges, Inc., in Chicago and Metropolitan National Exchanges, Inc., in New York will distribute this production as the first of a schedule calling for one feature a month, a Charles Ray picture every other week and a single reel comedy or magazine subject every week. Cosmopolitan National Exchanges, Inc., is also distributing "The Great Reward," a serial, with Francis Ford and Elia Hall.

STAFF OF ARMSTRONG COMEDY UNIT

Charles B. Diltz, studio manager of Reigger Productions, Inc., producing a series of "Billy" Armstrong two-reel comedies for release through the Pacific Film Company announces the following unit: Rae Hunt, Director; Roy Miller, assistant director; Robert Smith, Cinematographer, and Castillo Guerin, cashier.

The Reigger unit is now busily engaged in producing "Slow and Easy," which will be finished about the middle of April.

Aaron Edwards has been cast in "My Wild Irish Rose," an all-star production, now being directed by David Smith at Vitagraph.

Martha Mattox has been chosen to enact a leading character role in Rupert Hughes' current play for Goldwyn entitled, "The Bitterness of Sweets."

NEWMAN AFFILIATES WITH FIRST NATIONAL

John McCormick, western representative of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., announces that Edwin de Baum Newman has arrived from New York to assist him in taking care of the western activities of that organization.

The arrival of Mr. Newman is the first step taken to carry out the policy announced by executive committee of First National when they stated that the exhibitor organization would hereafter take a more active interest in the production affairs of the various independent producers.

Mr. McCormick announces that Mr. Newman will make his headquarters at the United Studios where a branch of the local representative's office will be maintained.

Mr. Newman is a newcomer in the motion picture business. Previously he was with the Detroit Cadillac Motor Company and during the war he managed the Aeromarine Plane and Motor Company, building flying boats exclusively for the U.S. Navy.

Mr. Newman was accompanied to Los Angeles by Mrs. Newman and their two sons.

The Iris Film Corp. of Fairhaven, Mass., has been incorporated with a capital of $125,000. The new corporation will produce three and six reel dramas, melodramas and comedy dramas.

Arrow recently purchased five Clara Kimball Young subjects, "Ten Nights in a Barroom," twenty-six Eddie Lyons and Eddie Barry Broadway comedies, and fifteen two-reel Sherlock Holmes pictures, for distribution through the eight Pacific Northwest states.

Bennie Goldstein, formerly of the Screen Talent and Classic Agency, has taken over the Pictures Players Exchange and wants all the old members and the new ones of the profession to register at once, 210 Mason Opera House Building. Phone Pico 4609.

AT THE FINE ARTS STUDIOS

Work is progressing on the continuity of the second of a series of comedy dramas for the first of which "Too Much Business," was recently sold to Vitagraph. The title and cast for the second story will be announced at an early date. "I Am the Law," with Alice Lake, Kenneth Harlan, Gaston Glass, Rosemary Theby, Noah Beery and Wallace Beery, is in its seventh week of productions. Having completed location scenes at Truckee the company under the direction of Edwin Carew is now working on interiors which are physically northwestern. The production is being sponsored by B. F. Finkel in association with Bennie Zeidman and C. C. Burr, head of Affiliated Distributors, Inc.

The story for the second of a series of twelve specialty productions for Protean Arts, the first of which is entitled "The Girl and the Motor," is in its first week of production at Clune's Studio under the direction of Edward Alexander, who is also playing opposite Miss Ritchie.

Pickups by the Staff

Ruth Owen is on location with the Thomas Melghan Company in Modesto.

A. C. Stecker, animal trainer, has returned to Universal City after an absence of several months.

Else Cohen of the Hollandia Film Studios of Haarlem, Holland, is in New York with several Hollandia pictures.

Guy Bates Post, who recently completed "The Maskerader," has come to San Francisco to visit his mother.

Norman Kerry is included in the all-star cast of "Brothers Under the Skin," the current E. Mason Hopper play.

Bryan Poy, one of the seven "Eddie Poy's," is at present engaged in writing comedy scenarios at the Fox West Coast Studios.

It is understood that the serial which Eddie Polo is now making in Florida will be distributed through the C. R. C. Film Sales Corp.

It is said that Charles Ray has filmed his own early struggles into a picture-drama in "The Barastormer," which was completed recently at his Los Angeles studio.

George Mooser will sail from San Francisco presently for the Far East, where he will establish United Artists headquarters at Shanghai, and handle releases in the Orient.

Roy Bassett and W. S. Weatherwax are included in the cast of Robert Gordon's initial starring vehicle, "Steps of Light," under production at the McFadden Studios on Sunset Blvd.

Gus Schlesinger, for six years sales manager for Inter-Ocean, recently made arrangements with RKO to head a foreign department. At present, Schlesinger is devoting his time to "School Days."

Dale Hanshaw of National Exchanges, Inc., is in Los Angeles to close negotiations for the acquisition of distribution by National Exchanges, Inc., of several new feature productions.

King Vidor has completed the filming of "The Real Adventure" by Henry Kitchell Webster and is now engaged in cutting the production. The name of his next picture has not yet been announced.

Charles E. Bartlett, who formed a company bearing his name in Albany, New York, recently, intends making a series of Northwest Mounted Police stories. In the corporation are R. D. Noble, Ruth Allen, Kathan, George A. and Bertha Fellows.

Ralph Block, associate editor of the Goldwyn scenario department, has been active in getting material from West Coast motion picture stars to be included in the program for the big benefit to be given in New York for destitute Russian artists.

Co-operative Producers, Inc., has engaged Ethel Ritchie to star in a series of three two-reel semi-westerns, the first of which, "The Girl and the Motor," is in its first week of production at Clune's Studio under the direction of Edward Alexander, who is also playing opposite Miss Ritchie.

Still Finishing Reproductions
To the Editor of Camera!:

It is seldom that I intrude even a letter of appreciation on the crowded time of an editorial staff, but after reading the two amusing letters of criticism printed in a recent issue of Camera! I concluded that perhaps such an expression as am now making might be appreciated.

I subscribe to Camera! because I am interested in certain phases of motion picture production, and being too busy to scan the voluminous matter contained in fan publications, find that your little magazine contains all that is worthy of mention compressed in a comprehensive but always brief and readable form. The editorials are distingue. I like their pointed, snappy and slightly sarcastic (caustic sometimes, but none too severe) style. After raging to a white heat over the filthy and grossly unjust newspaper insinuations made upon the pretext of the Taylor case, I found that my indignation had been boiled down to a nice exactness and expressed with dispatch in the current Camera! editorial.

Then, too, I would say a good word for the colorful articles by Ted Le Berthon. With a distinct literary flavor and an agreeable absence of interview "Hokum," they are informative and entertaining. After wading through the slush and crepe de chine verbage of the conventional fan interview, it is altogether delightful to find a sane and introspective interview such as this Le Berthon is capable of. Truly, he is an artist, and if he is not now contributing to SMART SET, he should be.

May the good work that Camera! is accomplishing for the industry continue to the prosperity of its creators as well. Selah!

Very truly,

W. E. SPENCER,
Lacey, Drew County, Arkansas.

Conditions Improve

Now that an often threatened, production flurry has finally materialized at least to the extent of establishing itself upon our horizon with a promise of immediate development, those handfuls in the picture industry who have felt the late depression to an alarming degree may enjoy a very welcome breath of relief and once again proceed with real advancement campaigns, meanwhile indulging in pleasurable bill paying orgies.

For the encouragement of those who have suffered hopefully and for the persuasion of others who have been rendered skeptical by the optimists' previous false reports, we present some interesting information.

There are one hundred units either producing or preparing to produce feature pictures in Los Angeles this week and they are supplemented by forty-five short subject companies actually engaged in work. The former staffs are grouped in part as follows. Universal leads with thirteen companies; Lasky has eleven; Fox, seven; Ince, five; Vitagraph, four; Metro and Robertson-Cole, three each; and Goldwyn, two, with the United Studios accommodating ten independent outfits making feature length subjects; Fine Arts, four, and Balboa, two. Independent activity is increasing everywhere and every day brings rumors of new companies in formation.

It is expected that William Hart will restart production for Paramount soon; two Metro stars anticipate resigning at the termination of their contracts in the near future. Charles Schwab of the Bethlehem Steel Company is considering with favor an investment in the cinema industry in company with other equally significant capital. Garson and Schwartz have already resumed work after a prolonged suspension and the Frederick Herbst Productions enter this week. Douglas Fairbanks has commenced "Robin Hood" and Mary Pickford will reprise "Tess of the Storm Country" immediately.

Our New York correspondent tells us further that nearly all of the Eastern plants are closed with their companies and equipment Westward bound. These include Selznick and Famous-Players.

The perfecting touch should be laid upon our enthusiasm, however, when it is learned that the cheaply imported Continental films which have caused so much controversy and so nearly wrecked our American production in the past few months are reported to have failed as a class by representative exhibitors from New York to Oskaloosa. Our prospects are the best and materialized prospects become success.

"Sense or Censor?"

Extracts from a speech delivered by President John Emerson before the Drama League as quoted by "Equity."

"If, by any unlucky chance we should have a political censorship of the stage thrust upon us, I suppose the lines of attack would be much the same as those now followed, or supposed to be followed, by the various Motion Picture censorship boards. They have, I believe, three general angles of attack. They are supposed to forbid:

"First—anything indecent;
"Second—anything seditious or opposed to public policy:
"Third—anything which incites to crime, or is inhumanly cruel.

"As to the last of these categories, I think they are indulging in a lot of sheer and utter nonsense.

"If a man goes to a picture, and sees a big hulk of a brute beat his little defenseless wife, and then, before the story is finished sees this same brute receive his just reward, in a cost of tar and feathers, or a good, sound horsewhipping from his indignant neighbors,—do you mean to say that that man is thereby encouraged to go back to his house and start beating up his wife? I don't think so! Quite the contrary!

"Or a child goes to a picture and sees a boy on the screen torturing a cat, and then follows the logical development of that boy's character through the story until he winds up in a penitentiary or on the gallows,—do you think that child is thereby encouraged to go home and twist the cat's tail? I don't. . . .

"In my opinion the boy with real criminal instincts isn't up to the dime novel, nor is he up to the Motion Pictures. They're too good for him—they're too moral. Virtue is always triumphant in the pictures, and vice is always punished. What more in God's name can you ask?"

"If only one of our great philanthropists would divert a little of his money and his altruistic efforts away from the subnormal child to the supernormal child, and develop among us some leaders of thought and action, which we so sorely need, now and at all times!"

"As to the second category of things which are taboo by the present Censor Boards, I don't think we have much cause to worry. I refer to those things which are seditious or opposed to public policy. I have never yet heard of a Censor Board which forbade the showing of a picture attacking Mr. Volstead or the Prohibition Amendment, and as long as they allow us that pleasure, I don't think it likely that they will seriously curtail the right of free speech in other directions."

"It is from the first class of so-called offenses that ninety per cent of the trouble arises, that is, from those (Continued on Page 15)
Actual shooting on Douglas Fairbanks' next photo-feature, yet to be named, will start in about two weeks. The cast is practically complete with Fairbanks in the role of Maid Marion, Wallace Beery as Richard the Lion-hearted; Sam De Grasse as King John, the usurper; Paul Dickey as Guy of Gisborne, the arch-villain. Fairbanks himself will play the hero in a role showing him first as the Earl of Huntingdon and later as Robin Hood.

Since his return from New York, Mr. Fairbanks has been at the studio every day with director Allan Dwan, supervising the building of sets and the perfecting of the new story.

Sets now under construction will cover more ground than the famous "Intolerance" sets built by Griffith, or the Monte Carlo replicas set up by Von Stroheim for his "Foolish Wives." A portion of the studio is to be turned into a tournament field, and an athletic field has already been laid out where members of the cast are training for the difficult feats they will be called upon to perform in this film. Instructors have been engaged to teach sword play and archery, which will be featured in this picture.

Fairbanks states that his new vehicle will be a much more lavish spectacle than "The Three Musketeers." He has been working on the story for five months, assisted by his scenario and research departments, and his technical staff and is relying on this film to push forward another big offensive of progress for the film industry.

"While in New York recently," said Doug, "I was astounded to find how little understood this business and the people engaged in it are. Of late the entire industry has been misjudged. I have made up my mind that the only effectual answer lies not in preaching or becoming an attorney for the defense, but in forwarding the cause by making good pictures."

M. P. P. D. A. CHARTERED

The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Ass'n, Inc., was chartered in Albany, New York, recently. The organization will have direct lines to New York and hold its annual meeting the last Monday in the March of each year.

The directors are:

DANCING HOLDS SWAY AGAIN

At Christie is making a picture which includes scenes in a musical comedy theatre, for which a replica of the Musie Box Theatre in New York has been built. Twenty-one dancers from the Ernest Belcher school have been engaged for the ensemble scenes. In addition Miss Isabel Bryan has imported her dancing girls for another spectacular number which will add pictorial background to the two-reeler.

Vera Steadman who is making her first screen appearance in ten months is playing the title role in this new comedy, "The Balky Princess."
Current Reviews

“THE GREEN TEMPTATION”

Grumman's

The late William D. Taylor made of “The Noose,” by Constance Lindsay Skinner, a highly effective filmplay which Paramount now publishes as “The Green Temptation,” a starring picture for Betty Compson. Holding all of the interest so necessary to the crook plot, it is lent to its picturesque settings of the street shows and Apache haunts of Paris. The screen adaptation by Monte Katterjohn and Julia Crawford Ivers provides some thrilling suspense and a good, all around plot development. In fact, “The Green Temptation,” is as satisfying a cinema of its type as has been recently shown. The slight confusion of the war details is immaterial. The camerawork is greatly to the credit of James C. Van Trees.

The star makes quite the most beguiling little Apache in the annals of screen fiction, for the charm that lies in Miss Compson’s animation is a very real thing, creating for her a personality unto herself and giving her a beauty of her own. Gene Lee, the Apache, Coralya, the dancer, or Nurie-Jeanne Paget; each is more graceful and scintillating than the jewels which they acquire so fearlessly.

Mahlon Hamilton, playing John Allenby, the sturdy detective, is thrown into keen contrast with the Harlequin, an actress menacingly portrayed by Theodore Kosloff. The former role is entirely restrained; the other perhaps a bit exaggerated. Both are thoroughly enjoyable.

Neely Edwards in Pitton, the clown, and Edward Burns as the American boy are both well situated, while Lenore Lynnard assists the Duchesse de Chastarin to a distinguished presence and Betty Bricce offers the typical society matron of this country as Mrs. Weedon Dukyer.

Mary Thurman, M. W. Hardenburg and Arthur Stuart Hull enact the remaining roles augmented by "Broken Nose" Murphy in a small but excellently managed piece of business.

“THE ROSARY”

Kinema

Selig-Rork is presenting a new version of Edward Rose’s dramatic adaptation of “The Rosary,” so popularized by Bernard McConville and engaging the services of an all star cast. The picture, a Jerome Storm production, suffers to some extent from unsatisfactory cutting which shatters the continuity and tempo now and again. However, the quaint backgrounds, even performances and the well worn, old story will delight the many who choose the old fashioned, even if it be completely stereotyped, to the modern in entertainment.

We all remember the story to be built upon the most conventional of religious foundations, the type of thing from which art is not native, but the restrained methods and old timers will unquestionably turn out in great numbers to see this romantic subject.

Last seen as Father Brian Kelly, may be said to head the cast. He is a picturesque figure so placed and a good opposite for Eugenie Besserer who further and wholesomely interprets Kathleen Wilton the woman who loves him and sacrifices for him—her all. It perhaps takes less footage for Miss Besserer to register her sincerity than for any other performer known to us. Jane Novak is a study in lights and shadows as Vera Mather, just a village girl.

Her lover, Bruce Wilton, is played by Robert Gordon, who might be considered as too effeminate for the role. Nevertheless, he dispatches his action competently.

IDA SCHUMAKER

The comedy element is drostly accomplished by Dore Davidson and Bert Woodruff, whose fierce controversies and inconsistent friendship are the privileges of village mentors.

The opposition is in the hands of Wallace Beery, who is seen as Kenwood Wright, an undisguised soul, and Pomroy Cannon, who fills MacFusives, a pirate of the sea.

A fitting duo to complete the romance is composed of Mildred June and Harold Goodwin. They play Alice and Skeeter, her faithful suitor. Miss June displays promise of real things in the comedy flipper line a la Mary Hay.

First National distributes “The Rosary.”

“WHITE HANDS”

Clune’s

Any screen drama presenting Hobart Bosworth in the leading role is invariably anticipated with eagerness by the older school of picture goers, inasmuch as his stories are known to be marked with the virility and strength that were so popular in the cinema’s earlier days. It is therefore to be deeply regretted that in “White Hands,” the current Max Graf production presented by Wit Guinan, so capable a performer should sell himself provided with minaudie material that makes up into a far from satisfactory melodrama. Drunkenness, brutality and mentality for love’s sake are carried on continuously and they leave an impression that cannot be eradicated by the dishwatery moral trend which appears late in the scenario.

The picture by C. Gardner Sullivan is a huge failure. It is a creation of his fine fineness that made “Hail the Woman,” such a worthy attempt by this author. Lambert Hillyer apparently does all that is possible with direction and J. O. Taylor’s photography is up to his usual high standard.

“HURRICANE” Hardy, the bestial character with a fine sense of humor and mimicry ability, and Sonia Dee is a beguiling situation for the stiwart Bosworth even though its final reform through the agency of a baby seems a trifle inconsistent with its previously unscrupulous attitude. Once phased, however, “Hurricane” encourages his regeneration with great vigor and results of his lost sympathy with efficient dispatch obviously that the sentimental and dubious in the audience may be completely reassured.

Little Maril Frances Dana in Peroxide, a pleasurable portrayal, is the one lightening element in the cast, for Helen Maitland, the ingenu, enacted by Elinor Fair, is of necessity a heavy, unwieldly position in view of the fact that her action is just one effort at self protection (from the ferocious males surrounding her) after another. In spite of this handicap, the young actress maintains her poise and the part is sincerely played.

Robert McIn and Al Kaufman handle other villainous heavies villainously while Freeman Wood is rather interesting in the juvenile, a beachcomber, who “comes back.” Enoch, said the better,” as the saying goes.

“HER MAD BARGAIN”

(Loew’s)

Josephine Quirk wrote the photoplay, “Her Mad Bargain,” in which Louis B. Mayer offers Anita Stewart over the First National program at this time. There is nothing reasonably about if the story is as yet unusual enough to hold the interest and only annos during the various episodes in which the heroine, a poor unpurchasable individual, battles wildly to retain her virtue. Too much of this sort of business is distasteful in both its sloppily conventional and indiscrete aspects. As Alice Lambert, a luxuriously raised and incompetent girl, the best criticism of Miss Stewart is accomplished when it is remarked that she is entirely typical—of herself. We find it impossible to definitely recall any performance in which we have seen her play. They are all the same, so at least one is no worse than another.

Walter McGrail’s masculine lead, David Leighton, is very fitting, while Gertrude Astor and Adele Farrington manage the feminine opposition with attendant satisfaction. They play Ruth Beresford and Leigh Twomey.

The cleverest interpretation in the picture is the effort of Arthur Edmund Carewe as the detective, a dilettante.

Helen Raymond, George Williams, Ernest Butterworth, William Badger, Margaret McWade and Perry Challenger are carefully killed off.

Edwin Carewe’s direction of this production takes all possible advantage of the scenario. Robert Kurrie’s photography is good.

Sidney Franklin is included in the cast of “Abie’s Irish Rose,” now showing at the Morosco.

COOGAN ENGAGES ART DIRECTOR

Stephen Goosen has been engaged as art and technical director for the Jackie Coogan production of "Oliver Twist," which will be filmed at United Studios under Frank Lloyd's direction. Mr. Goosen was awarded the international medal of honor for architecture in 1916.

NEILAN'S NEXT INCLUDES MOORE

Matt Moore has been engaged by Marshall Neilan to portray a principal role in Neilan's next First National attraction, "Her Man," which started production recently at the Hollywood Studios.

ENGAGED FOR CHRISTIE

Lincoln Plumer, prominent character actor, has been engaged by Christie to play a leading role in a new picture which will feature Neal Burns and which will be directed by Scott Sidney.

CUMMINGS ENGAGES MULHALL

Jack Mulhall, who played opposite Mabel Normand in "Molly O," has signed a contract to play in the all star picture to be directed by Irving Cummings. The working title of the picture will be, "Fires of Vengeance."

JOY IN "HER MAN"

Lestrade Joy, who appears in Cecil B. de Mille's "Saturday Night," has been signed by Marshall Neilan to interpret a principal role in "Her Man," Neilan's current cinema-play for Associated First National.

CHANNEY TO ENACT "FAGIN"

The important role of "Fagin" in "Oliver Twist," in which Jackie Coogan will play the title role, will be filled by the character actor, Lon Chaney.

Virginia Valli heads the feminine support in "The Black Bag." Herbert Rawlinson's latest starring vehicle.

Eddie Fitzgerald of Fitzgerald and Quigley Orpheum fame, has been playing a part in Neely Edwards' newest comedy, "Taking Things Easy," for Universal.

UNIVERSAL ENGAGES HEARN

Edward Hearn has been chosen by Universal to enact the leading male role opposite Marie Prevost in her most recent Universal starring vehicle entitled "Her Night of Nights."

BEAUDINE AGAIN WITH CHRISTIE

William Beaudine, who was for three years a Christie Comedy director, is now back in the fold and will direct the next picture to feature Neal Burns. Beaudine was absent for a short time, directing a Goldwyn feature, "Watch Your Step," which is now having first run showings.

Of the new Christie Comedies this year, William Beaudine directed "Oh Buddy," "Falling for Fanny," "Fresh from the Farm," and "Pure and Simple." His brother, Harold Beaudine, is also a Christie director, and was in charge of filming "One Stormy Knight," "Hokus Pokus," and "Tis the Bell," and is now making "A Hickory Hick" with Bobby Vernon.

MONG IN YOUNG'S NEXT

Producer J. L. Frothingham has loaned William V. Mong for an important part in Clara Kimball Young's next production. Mong will soon be seen in the leading role of Frothingham's latest filmplay, "The Man Who Smiled," for release-through Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

BEDFORD WITH MAYO

Barbara Bedford has been signed by Universal to enact the leading feminine role in "Out of the Silent North," starring Frank Mayo.

Gilbert Warrington is photographing Clara K. Young's current production.

Harry Lamoille is playing a Spanish torero role in "Blood and Sand" at Lasky's.

Laura La Plante appears opposite Neely Edwards in the comedy, "Double and Quits," recently completed at Universal under the direction of William Watson.

Victor Potel is engaged in portraying the role of Peter in "A Tailor Made Man," which will serve as Charles Ray's initial starring vehicle for United Artists.

Lionel Belmore and Harris Gordon have been assigned important parts in Frank Mayo's current filmplay for Universal, "Out of the Silent North."

Noah Beery is supporting Madge Bellamy in the forthcoming Thomas H. Ince special which John Griffith Wray is directing, entitled "Someone to Love."

Emily Gerdes and Dorothy Hagan appear in support of Neely Edwards in the recently completed Universal comedy entitled "Double and Quits."

Dustin Farnum, William Russell and Jack Gilbert are to start starring pictures at the Fox Studios soon. Their leading ladies will be, respectively, Doris Pawn, Ruth Renick and Renee Adoree.

Louis Calhern, who played the male lead in "The Blot," and other Lois Weber productions, has been engaged to play in the same capacity opposite Olga Petrova in her New York stage success, "The White Peacock."

Stars Her Fourth for First National

Marguerite de la Motte, a J. L. Frothingham star, has begun work on her fourth consecutive picture for release through Associated First National Pictures. Her first was in the leading role in J. L. Frothingham’s “Shattered Idols”; the second the leading feminine role in Thos. H. Ince’s “Jim,” not yet released; the third, “The Brotherhood of Hate,” also an Ince special now in the making, and fourth, “A Man of Action,” also in preparation at the Ince Studios.

"Freckles" to Visit White House

“Freckles” Barry, who is at present touring the country in connection with Marshall Neilan’s “Petrol,” is to visit President Harding at the White House before he returns to Los Angeles.

Mrs. Barry, “Freckles’” mother has just left to join her son at St. Louis and will accompany him on the balance of his tour.

Celebrates Birthday

Junior Coghan celebrated his sixth birthday with a party recently. Among the screen children invited were Helen Stone, Barbara Maier, Philippe De Lacey, Dorothy June, Robert De Vlibis and Freddie Drooglund.

Dale Fuller, one of the cast of Von Stroheim’s “Foolish Wives,” entertained the children with her clever trick parrot, Laurie.

Irvine Correspondent of East Indian Paper

Clarke Irvine, motion picture writer of Los Angeles, has just been appointed American representative and studio correspondent of the Indian Film Gazette, by H. C. Mekjeri, the editor of this magazine, the only film trade paper in India and the far east.

Blanche Sweet plans to tour the Orient before returning to the screen.

Five companies were assembled recently at Truckee, California, making winter scenes for motion pictures.

Marie Crisp is playing in support of Tom Santschi in “The Getaway,” under the direction of Robert North Bradbury.

The triple bill of Charles Chaplin in “The Kid,” “A Dog’s Life” and “Shoulder Arms,” recently passed its five hundredth performance at the Leicester Square Cinema in London, England.

Henry Holt & Co. have published a book called “Motion Pictures for Community Needs,” by Gladys and Henry Bollman. The volume is intended to serve as a “practical manual of information and suggestion for educational, religious and social work.”

To Maryon Aye goes the honor of having disposed of the last tickets for the “Wampus” Frolic and Ball held recently at the Ambassador Hotel. Miss Aye is co-starred in “Cactus Features” with Bob Reeves.

Vernon Directing

Bobby Vernon is now a full-fledged actor-director, for he has just completed his fourth comedy in which he is the star performer and wielder of the megaphone.

David Selznick has recovered from an attack of the “flu.”

Thomas H. Ince has just finished a photoplay titled “The Man She Married,” while Anita Stewart recently completed “The Woman He Married.” Both productions will be released by First National.

Katherine Cecil Thurston, author of “The Masquerader,” in which Guy Bates Post is starred, is to be given a special presentation of the photoplay from a print of the picture which will be shipped to her in England by Associated First National.

Neilan’s First Stage Director in Mickey’s Productions

George Barnum, veteran stage producer and actor and who gave Marshall Neilan his start as an actor at the old Belasco theatre, Los Angeles, has been engaged by the motion picture producer to play an important part in "Fools First."

Mr. Barnum gave Mr. Neilan his first part on the stage some fifteen years ago, in the historic play, "The Heart of the Geisha."

In this play the movie producer—then a youngster—portrayed the part of a Japanese boy.

"Whenever I needed a boy character I sent for Mickey," said Mr. Barnum in discussing the old days. "He could play a Jap boy, an Irish boy, or a German boy equally effective."

Mr. Barnum has just returned from Australia, where he staged a number of plays and is here to study motion picture production. With the idea of learning the business at close hand, he is starting his motion picture career as an actor. He will also appear in Mr. Neilan’s new production just starting, "Her Man," taken from the Saturday Evening Post story of that title.

Storm to Talk at Next Photo-Playwrights’ Meeting

An original scenario, “Woman, Forward March!” by L. Stinck, was criticized at the last meeting of The Photoplaywrights, held recently at the Brack-Shaps. At the next meeting the screen version of “The Rosary” will be discussed. L. Rhodesbeck has prepared an original synopsis from the picture, to be followed by critical estimates and impressions of the production by Miss Alberta Truesworthy, Mrs. D. Selover and A. Stanton.

It is expected that Jerome Storm, director of “The Rosary,” will talk at this session. Any man or woman who is actively interested in scenario writing may attend the meetings.

Earle Preparing Faust Film

Doliving once more into the lore of the Middle Ages, Ferdinand Earle has resumed his labors of research on the Faust legend after an interlude of two months, which time was spent in New York, editing his screen version of the life and Ruhmat of Oscar Khayum.

French Producer in States

Henri Diamant-Berger, former editor and publisher of Le Film de Paris, one of the leaders of the motion picture industry of France, arrived recently in New York. Diamant-Berger has been producing in Paris for the past three years and brings with him his French version of “The Three Musketeers,” as well as “The Bad Boy,” featuring Chevalier, the Casino de Paris star, who is to be starred in this country by Billingham next year. The French producer plans to film “Twenty Years After,” by Dumas, this summer. He will also make a film with Georges Carpentier, the French pugilist, probably next fall.

The Digest of the Motion Picture Industry

Roul Walsh is expected in town soon to start his sixth independent production.

Peter Milne has joined the production staff of Pyramid Pictures, Inc., as head of the scenario department.

Ethel Clayton's latest picture for Paramount, "The Cradle," comes to Grauman's Million Dollar theatre the week of Monday, March 25th. The supporting players are Charles Winninger, Stanley Adams, Ann Burr, Walter McGrail and Adele Farrington. The picture is based on the French play by Eugene Deloux, the adaptation having been written by Olga Printzau.

LEVEE TO SUPERVISE ROLAND SERIALS

M. C. Levee, president of United Studios, has announced that he will be the producer and supervisor of the two serials which Ruth Roland is to make for General for distribution by Pathé. Work on the first production, "The Riddle of the Range," will commence on April 3rd. The arrangement for Mr. Levee to produce these serials was made with him by Paul Brunet, president of Pathé, during Mr. Levee's recent visit to New York.

LASKY LENDS ROBERTSON TO PICKFORD

Mary Pickford has succeeded in borrowing from Paramount John Robertson to direct her next independent production for United Artists which will be a reworking of "The Jockey's Gal." Camera work starts this week on "Oliver Twist," casting for which is nearing completion. Additional stage and studio space has been leased by the Coogan organization.

GOLDwyn TO FILM OLD TIME MELODRAMA

One of F. J. Godsal's first official acts as president of Goldwyn was to give his approval to the purchase of "The Great Metropolis," a stage melodrama, that flourished in London and New York around 1898. Paul Bern recently made all arrangements for the negotiation of this thriller from Klaw & Erlanger.

POST ON NEXT LEGION PROGRAM

Guy Bates Post has been secured to appear at the forthcoming meeting of the Hollywood American Legion to be held presently at their Stadium in behalf of the new Hollywood Bowl.

Mr. Post will give selections from "The Masquerader," assisted by his wife, Adele Ritchie, who was associated with Mr. Post in the stage version of this play.

"Broadway Rose" is the title of Mac Murray's next picture.

AT LASKYS

Under the direction of Philip E. Rosen, who directed Wallace Reid in “Across the Continent” and “The World’s Champion,” Betty Compson began work recently on her next starring Vehicle, as yet not officially titled, by Albert Shelby LeVine, based on the story of the John Fleming Wilson. The following is the line-up: The role of Angela Gaskell is played by the star; John Sumner is played by John Bowers, a well-leading man, who has appeared in several Reallart pictures, such as “The Cumberland Romance,” etc.; Lee Marvin has been assigned to Richard Dix, formerly leading man at Morosco Theatre and well known in motion picture circles; Captain Gaskell will be portrayed by J. Farrel McDonal, and Lucinda is to be played by Ethel Wales.

According to report the next Agnes Ayres star picture will be directed by Paul Powell and will be an original story by Douglas DeMille. The title has not yet been decided upon, but work will start about April 3rd.

“Man Unconquerable” is the title of Jack Holt’s next picture scheduled to start March 27th, under the direction of Joseph Henabery. This is an original by Hamilton Smith, and Julian Josephson has adapted the story to the screen. The supporting cast has not yet been chosen.

William deMille started this week on "Nice People." The cast selected for this picture, including Wallace Reid, Bebe Daniels, Conrad Nagel, Julia Faye, and others. Cecil B. deMille is preparing to start his new production "Manslaughter," his first picture since his return from Europe.

Thomas H. Ince is in Modesto, where scenes are being made for "Our Leading Citizen." Returning from location a number of scenes will be made in the studio which will complete the picture in time for Mr. Meighan to begin work with Cecil B. deMille.

AT THE R-C STUDIOS

“The Midnight Call,” latest R-C production to be completed, has undergone final revision and will be shipped East early next week. The story is original by J.J. Johnson, who has written two Bosworth vehicles, was directed by Emory Johnson, and includes in its cast Ralph Lewis, Johnny Walker, Ella Hall, Claire McDowell and Benny Alexander.

Final scenes of “The Son of the Wolf,” initial production by the Patton-Mandelveit unit at the R-C Studios, were taken recently. The play is an adaptation by Edwin Warren Guyol and Alice Cadiln of two Jack London books, one bearing the title retained by the film version, and the other, “The Wife of a King,” both dealing with the days of the Klondike gold rush. Edith Roberts, Wheeler Oakman and Fred Kohler are seen in the leading roles. Of course, the play finds its setting among scenes of primal nature, to produce this atmosphere the company found it necessary to spend three weeks of shooting amid the Yosemite snows.

Harry Holt decided on his first play to be produced under the R-C banner. Tentatively, it is called “The Battle.”

Robert Thorneby and William A. Seiter are busy preparing stories for future productions.

INCE STUDIO NOTES

A three-ring circus is to furnish the background for a motion picture feature production with the all-star cast living the life of the “big top” for several weeks during the making of the picture, according to production plans announced by Thomas H. Ince for “Someone to Love.” The “Someone to Love” company, under the direction of Griffith Wray, will be with the circus for the first three weeks on the Central and Southern California tour after the circus leaves its winter quarters at Palo Alto, Calif. The principal characters will be “the elephant girl,” to be portrayed by Madge Bellamy, a young violinist to be done by Cullen Landis, and a circus trick elephant to be played by “Charley,” the elephant picture star. This latest Sullivan story is announced as the first of the Ince feature productions to be made during the coming months for release next fall and winter.

Arthur Beck has completed the cutting of “When the Devil Drives,” the second of the series that Leah Baird Productions is making for Associated Exhibitors release. Included in the cast of “When the Devil Drives” in support of Miss Baird, are Richard Tucker, who has a role similar to the one he portrayed in “The Old Nest,” Arline Pretty, who was last seen in the leading role of “Life,” the Wm. A. Brady Production; Vernon Steele, who heretofore has appeared opposite Ethel Clayton, and Katie Lewis, who has appeared in several of Miss Baird’s latest productions. Paul Scardon directed and Charles J. Stannus was the cameraman.

HOLLYCRAFT PICTURES PREPARING

The Hollycraft Motion Picture Corporation will commence operation at its studio on Wilshire Blvd., Santa Monica, presently. Announcement of personnel, stars, casts and other details will be given out around April 1st.

“COME ON IN” COMPANY LOCATIONING

Director Edward Alexander and his company filming “Come On In,” the initial five-reel photoplay of Co-operative Producers, Inc., are at Warner Hot Springs “shooting” exteriors. It is expected that two weeks more will be necessary to complete the picture.

REGENT FILM COMPANY

NAME OF PURVIANCE ORGANIZATION

Papers of incorporation have been filed by the Regent Film Company which has been organized under the laws of the State of California, Inc., as featured player Eliza Purviance, for many years leading woman for Charles Chaplin.

All of the productions of the Regent company will be filmed at the Chaplin plant on La Brea Ave., where extensive additions are being made to enable the company to carry on its own activities before the camera without interfering with the progress of the company which will star Miss Purviance.

Miss Purviance’s first story will be an original, in which she is in the writing. Sydney Chaplin looks upon as the probable director of this company and the general management of the affairs has been given over to Alf Reeves, who acts in the same capacity for the Charlie Chaplin Productions.

A new system of overhead lighting is being installed on the two stages. A network of steel is being put up in the shape of a truck and trolley system in order to make it possible to light the stages from above without interfering in any manner with the work on the stage.

Many additions have also been made to the electrical equipment including lamps perfected by the Cooper Hewitt company.

FOX BUYS NEW FORST STORY

The latest story from the pen of Emil Forst, “Vows Made, Broken,” has been secured by Fox Film Company and will serve as a future starring vehicle for Dustin Farnum.

Mr. Forst was also the author of “Occasional Sours,” recently produced by R-C Pictures, as well as “Sylvia on a Spree” for Metro, “A Social Pirate” for Fox, “Wows and Their Money” for Metro, and “The Splendid Sin” for Fox.

BOATS TO HAVE FILMS

Through the Associated Screen News of Canada, a subsidiary of the Canadian Pacific Railway, arrangements have been made for the showing of Paramount pictures on all the ocean ships operated by the Canadian Pacific.

Eventually it is planned to show Paramount pictures on all the passenger ships of the C. P. R. plies the Atlantic, Pacific and Great Lakes.

FRENCH AVIATRICE IN ROLAND SERIAL

Mlle. Andree Peyre, who is a licensed air pilot in both France and this country, has arrived in Los Angeles to play an important role in the Ruth Roland serial, “The Middle of France,” which will soon go into production.

Before she came to this country Mlle. Peyre’s screen engagements included six productions that were made at the Pathé studios at Vincennes, France. The forth coming serial will mark her début as an actress and aviatrice combined.

Mlle. Peyre was engaged for the serial by President Paul Brunet, of Pathé, which company will release the production.

APPEARING IN PERSON

Baby Muriel Frances Iama, who has just completed her engagement with William Fox in "White Hands," appeared last week personally with "White Hands," a Hobart Bosworth picture in which she has the title role.

"THE SHEIK'S WIFE" (Vitagraph)

"Chief among the outstanding qualities of 'The Sheik's Wife' is the fact that it doesn't follow along the familiar, beaten path of screen melodrama. Its atmosphere is unique, for the entire picture was filmed in Arabia, with the result that the desert scenes are outlined with wonderful fidelity to nature and artistic appeal.

"The Oriental atmosphere is admirably developed, the continuity holds together, and the action moves at a rapid gait."

—Exhibitors' Trade Review.

"The story is a very simple one and hard- ly capable of standing up for even a five- reel feature despite the colorful production that has been accorded it. There are numer- ous picturesque settings and the scenes among the ruins are especially attractive. All the desert episodes are appealing, but the interiors are confused and badly lighted usually. So many extras have been employed and there is such an overwhelming number of both the principals and the extras, added to the similarity of the costumes, that the general impression is one of chaos."

—Wid's.

"Because of its atmosphere, attention to detail, marvelous backgrounds and apparent authenticity of scenes showing the manner and customs of the Mohammedan, rather than from its story value, 'The Sheik's Wife' impresses as a film well out of the ordinary and one which should especially ap-peel to the better class of theatre goers.

"The picture has been produced in the actual locale of its story, Algiers, with a multitude of natives, evidently carefully rehearsed, used in numberless big scenes. There are camels, tents, mosques, ancient ruins, oceans of sand, and all of the other Oriental knick knacks in abundance.

"The picture is a scenic and an educational, as well as a drama. It takes you on a trip through Algiers, shows you all the sights and informs you as to the ways, customs, religion, and superstitions of the disciples of Allah.

"The plot is exceptional but it is typical and furnishes some excellent action scenes."

—Motion Picture News.

" 'The Sheik's Wife' was photographed in the Algerian edge of the Sahara desert. Henry-Koull, the producer, used a French cast of principals, headed by Emmy Lynn, and utilized a large group of natives, including Arabs and Senegalese soldiers, as extra people. The effect is realistic in the extreme, as might be supposed. The scenery is striking and the director has manipulated his action in an impressive manner."

—Moving Picture World.

"IRON TO GOLD" (Fox)

"While there are many familiar situations in 'Iron to Gold,' the author, George Owen Baxter, has introduced a sufficient number of novel and unusual incidents to offset these, and besides being a very well photo- graphed and directed picture, contains many exceedingly well drawn characterizations."

—Exhibitors' Herald.

"A melodrama of the West that does not take itself too seriously and allows a slightly more generous measure of heroes to Dustin Farnum than usual is offered in 'Iron to Gold.' Evidence of this has been a decided effort to avoid the too-familiar in preparing this production. There is more emphasis in character- ization and more comedy relief than is frequently found in such subjects and the hero has been made more of a victim than a conqueror."

—Moving Picture World.

"A story of the West containing an abundance of thrills, hold-ups and shooting in which Dustin Farnum gives a good account of himself.

"The fluidity of the star and the qualities of the picture itself should make this production totally able to satisfy the demands of those who crave melodrama done in a true Western fashion."

—Exhibitors' Trade Review.

"This is about the draggiest and most tiresome Western that has ever come from the Fox studios. It contains very little worth while action and the rest is made up of such weak situations and slow-moving sequences that the picture will never keep them in their seats even for the four and a half reels which it consumes.

"The story isn't a good one, to be sure, but there are places where the action could have been speeded up and the handling of the players is sometimes very poor.

"Dustin Farnum is capable of much better work than he does here and worthy of stronger material."

—Wid's.

"THE MISTRESS OF THE WORLD"

CHAPTER ONE—"THE DRAGON'S CLAW"

Paramount

"The much heralded German serial, 'The Mistress of the World,' which is being off- ered in a series of four Paramount pictures, has reached the screen, and after taking into consideration its reception at the Rivoli, New York, one must frankly state that it needs heavy exploitation to attract a crowd.

"The serial, judging from the first chapter, is unadulterated melodrama with thrills as- sembling in rapid-fire order. But the inci- dents are so heaped up with so much detail that the thread of the story is hard to fol- low.

"One thing it has in its favor—a genuine back- ground. Joe May, the director, has taken his principal players to China where he has succeeded in collecting real atmosphere not only in the sets and locations, but in the vast assembly of extras, all of whom are Chinese."

—Motion Picture News.

"The German producers, in the making of 'The Mistress of the World,' have not done anything that has not already been accomplished in this country. There have been any number of serials just as thrilling and stir- ring as this one. Perhaps the variety of backgrounds and unusual natural setting which are found in this will have a tendency to distinguish it for pictorial appeal, but otherwise it does not surpass native product.

"There are many splendid Chinese play- ers in 'The Dragon Claw' episode."

dealing with the question of decency or indecency—and the trouble is due, as Mr. Elmer Rice has well said, to the fact that there can be no objective test as to what is decent or proper. These matters are purely subjective, and standards vary enormously in different individuals and in different periods of time.

"What would be perfectly proper and decent to any normal minded person is indecent and improper to the Reverend John Rocher Straton and all minds of that ilk. Also what is perfectly innocuous and proper to a child of ten is salacious and deliciously filthy to a dirty-minded old man. So it is extremely difficult for any group of persons who are of one type of mind, or who have a common, set point of view toward these matters, to fix any sort of representative standard.

"If I could have my way, I should open every avenue of knowledge to every child born into the world, and should encourage him to walk freely and boldly in it, at the very earliest possible moment. And I should lay particular emphasis upon knowledge regarding the relations of the male and the female to each other, as that is the avenue which is now closed to the young, thus creating in their minds an abnormal and unhealthy and demonizing effect.

"I have no sympathy with this business of talking behind the hand or sending little Willie out of the room whenever anything interesting is to be spoken, because I believe there is no surer way of polluting Willie’s character and mentality than by this stimulating of a vicious, resentful, unhealthy, morbid curiosity about things which he as a normal human being has a perfect right to know.

"And I also believe that in this philanthropic work the serpent was aided and abetted by the Lord Jehovah. Jehovah wanted Adam and Eve to eat of the fruit of that apple tree—otherwise the putting of that tree in the Garden was the act of an idiot, and Jehovah was no idiot! The Jehovah of the Jews, in addition to all his other admirable qualities, was possessed of an infinite amount of common sense. This is shown convincingly and conclusively on almost every page of the Old Testament Scriptures.

"I believe that every normal person really enjoys a good harmless story or a good harmless play. And any pretense to the contrary has always impressed me as a form of hypocrisy. The only requirement that I see is that the story or the play must be good enough to justify itself, and must not be salacious simply for the sake of its salaciousness—which I fear certain of the plays on Broadway at present are.

"And at this point the Managers’ Association, the American Dramatists and the Actors’ Equity Association are, I believe, ready to join hands with the sponsors of the Better Play movement, and I believe they are ready to join us. We have met their representatives and I for one have found them sane, reasonable and sincere. They do not want a political censorship any more than we do, and I am convinced that by putting their cards on the table and working with them in all sincerity we shall arrive at a conclusion which will be satisfactory, not to the extremist on either side, but to the great body of our decent, upstanding and self-respecting citizens."

Elwood M. Payne of the Paralta Studios has just returned from a three months’ vacation in the South Seas.

BURSTON SPECIAL NEARING COMPLETION

Final scenes are being taken this week for the Louis Burston special production en titled "Forget Me Not," which costars Gareth Hughes and Bessie Love. W. S. Van Dyke is directing, with Charles J. Chie as his assistant. Camera work is in charge of Arthur L. Todd and the cast includes Irene Hunt, Myrtle Lind, Otto Lederer, William Machin, Gertrude Curlin and Aggie Herring. On completion of the editing Mr. Burston will take the picture to New York for a special showing.

PERRIN AND HILL BUSY

Jack Perrin and Josephine Hill are again working together in a series of five-reel western dramas for the Commonwealth Motion Picture Producers under the direction of Fred Caldwell.

Mr. Caldwell has recently finished shooting "The Release," which is the fourth of a series of five-reel westerns to be released through the Affiliated Picture Enterprises, featuring Mr. Perrin and Miss Hill.

"The Death Wagon," a Swedish production, has been purchased by the Metro Company for release in this country. It was produced by the American Kruger and Toel Corporation.

Do you realize the advantage of showing your publicity when called for an engagement? See page 19.

LATE PATHE RELEASES

Recent Pathe releases are: "The Mark of Cain," starring Irene Castle with Antonio Moreno, latest Pathe Playlet.

"The Opossum," latest offering of the series of "Adventures of Bill and Bob.

Rudyard Kipling’s "Ballad of Fisher’s Boarding House."

"Sunshine Harbor," Playgoers Pictures attraction.

"Lady Godiva," a Wistaria Production, the first work of that master of verse, Alfred Lord Tennyson, to be brought to the screen.

"It's a Hit," re-issued one-reel comedy, starring Harold Lloyd.

"The Anvil Chorus," Hal Roach comedy, featuring "Smack" Pollaro, who is assisted in the offering by Marie Mosquini.

"The Lion and the Mouse," one of the best known fables of Aesop, is the next animated cartoon of the series of "Aesop’s Film Fables," produced by Fables Pictures, Inc., and created by Cartoonist Paul Terry.

HENRI DIAMANT-BERGER, French producer, arrived in New York recently from France.

HODKINSON RELEASES

The W. W. Hodkinson organization gives "Free Air," a Sinclair Lewis story, as one of the first spring offerings. E. H. Griffith, the director, has completed the picture and Katherine Hilleker has written the title. The date of release is April. "Don't Weaken," by Charles K. Harris, adapted from a play that was originally produced in stock by the song writer, will be added to the Hodkinson repertoire. It will serve Irene Castle as a vehicle. "Patterning Foot," purchased by Hugo Dollin for Mabel Railin from Neil Dacy of Chicago, is another promise, as is "Hope," with Mary Astor, the fourth in the series of Triart productions. Another of Myrtle Reed's "A Spinner in the Sun" stories, makes up this promised program.

PARAMOUNT RE-ISSUES IN APRIL

Hugo Reisenfeld of the Ralito, New York, has arranged to show during the week of April 9th seven Paramount re-issues, all of which were released prior to November, 1929.

The seven chosen films, which Sidney Kent, who is responsible for the Paramount re-issue idea, has selected for presentation in New York and also throughout the country, will be released in block.

They will make their appearance in successive showings, starting with George Loane Tucker's "The Miracle Man," and following with John Barrymore in "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," Cecil B. de Mille's "Old Wives for New," George Fitzmaurice's "On with the Dance," Cecil de Mille's "Why Change Your Wife?" George Melford's "Behold My Wife," and Cecil B. de Mille's "Male and Female."

BALBOA STUDIO NOTES

C. W. Stater will start production on his series of western historical pictures presently, having just finished distributing his latest six-reel western entitled "The Days of the Buffalo."

The Monute Producing Company is shooting interiors on its seventh five-reel N. W. Mounted story, featuring George Chesebro. Bob Horner is expecting to start on a five-reel western picture presently to be distributed by the Western Classics Film Co.

Rex Thorpe, leasing manager of the studio, was in Hollywood this week in the interest of the studio.

"Clarence," Booth Tarkington's comedy, has been purchased by Famous Players for production in the near future by William de Mille.

Jackie Coogan is at present busily engaged with his wardrobe mistress, who is making the costumes he will wear in "Oliver Twist."

Sam E. Morris, at present general manager of Selznick, leaves for Europe presently to become general European representative for the various Selznick Enterprises.

Publicity alone never made a star, but it has called public attention to many real actors.

DONOVAN'S GARDENS HAS MOVIE CLIENTELE
Jack Donovan, who is at present supporting Dorothy Phillips in her current photoplay, has a bungalow court in Hollywood which he calls "The Studio Gardens," to which not a few players and directors of the motion picture industry have been attracted.

Among those living in the Gardens are Rex Ingram, who directed "The Four Horsemen;" "The Conquering Power;" and "The Prisoner of Zenda;" Lorna Moon, of Famous Players-Lasky, who wrote the scenarios of "Don't Tell Everything;" "Her Husband's Trademark;" and "The Affairs of Anatol;" John B. Clymer, a writer for Universal and Louis Burston; E. M. Grace, of the Robertson-Cole Studios; W. K. Bush, a First National executive; Director Clifford S. Wheeler, and Director Fred Sittenbaum.

Clara Bayers is playing an important part in "The Black Bag," starring Herbert Rawlinson under the direction of Stuart Paton.

Ben Turpin, having finished "Step Forward" at the Bennett Studios, will leave on a short vacation in a few days.

Noah Beery, well known heavy of the screen, has signed to play a Chinese character part in Irving Cuming's all star feature, "Fires of Vengeance."

Bert Roach and Charles L. King are among those cast in "The Black Bag," which recently started production at Universal with Herbert Rawlinson in the starring role.

The popular novel by Katherine Hill, "Shuttle Soul," will form the basis of the second independent production by King Vidor, in which Florence Vidor will be starred.

Mary C. Morgan, who has been associated with J. L. Frothingham Productions at United Studios for over a year, has been appointed publicity director of his organization by Mr. Frothingham.

Alfred Hollingsworth and Charles King are engaging in important parts with Roy Atwell in "Loose Nuts," under the direction of Craig Hutchinson.

It is rumored that Charles Schwab, of the Bethlehem Steel Company, is going into the moving picture business, if he is not already engaged in it.

The meeting of stockholders of Cinema Studio Supply Co., Inc., was held recently and plans were arranged for a new building project and also for a new improved electrical equipment.

James Tarr and little Richard Daniels will be seen in support of Marie Prevost in "Her Night of Nights," in its first week of production, under the direction of Hobart Henley.

Hal Roach has added to his forces Clarence Hennecke who is assigned to the "Patt" Farrow company as assistant director while he will also play character roles. Mr. Hennecke has had experience on various comedy lots.

The main office of the Primex Pictures Corporation in New York City states that it is carrying on negotiations with the leading independent exchanges in the undisposed territories on "Smiles," at this time. Primex is also state-rights Cosmo Hariton's picturized novel, "The Door That Has No Key," with George Ralph and Elynn Mack as the leading roles.

News from Broadway

By HANK

(Special Correspondence to Camera)

"Silas Marner," the famous George Eliot work of English literature has been made into a super screen play by Frank P. Donovan who wrote the scenario and directed the pictures. Associated Exhibitors have started an advertising campaign on it in New York. It has the endorsements of Miss Anne Morgan, ex-Gov. Alfred E. Smith of N. Y., Harry Du Pont, Miss Elizabeth Perkins, bank presidents, college professors, Judges, Senators, Ambassadors, Editors, playwrights, authors, etc. and, when its premiere at the Capitol Theatre, it is said, early in April. George Fawcett, Marguerite Courtot, Anders Randolph, Chas. Coghlan, Edmund Breese, Crawford Kent, Emily Chichester, Helen Howland, Bradley Barker, and others of like repute, appear in it.

The Green Room Club will hold another Revel in April at one of the Broadway theatres with all star talent.

Herbert Brenon, the director, and Alan Crossland, who are members of the M. P. D. A. last Tuesday. They are sure enough coming into the lodge fast.

Let me tell you something, Westcoast folks: F. B. Warren and Walter Greene who head the American Releasing Company are the coming, headline of film "distributing team." In New York, W. R. Hearst is releasing through their organization and we have a slight hankering that he is financially interested in it. Mr. Warren of this company is an old Hearst man. They have sixty finished productions with the Capitol showing them.

Cosmopolitan Productions will spend something like $1,000,000 on "When Kindness was in Flower" which good old Bob Vignola is directing. It will take eight months to complete with Marion Davis as star.

Elmer Clifton is in Santa Domingo shooting a sea story with Ray McKeec featured. Paul Allen and A. G. Peurof late with the Griffith "Orphans of the Storm," will photograph it.

The famous Players' Studio in Long Island is done, gone and nearly forgotten. They have turned their plant to the West coast, stripping the studio clean. Selznick is moving out to L. A. in April as are the Warner Brothers to do several big features. There are only three companies working in N. Y. "Hank" Smith, well known to L. A., has promoted a bunkroll and will shoot a picture next week at the old Metro, N. Y. Studio.

The latest Dick Barthelmess picture, "The Seventh Day," did not go over very well on Broadway this week. There is nothing to the story but Dick. He doesn't live up to his first starring vehicle with a wide margin.

They say Adolph Zukor financed personally the very successful "Cynadryl," made in Germany. It cost $20,000 American dollars to produce. Experts say it couldn't be made here for four times that much. Since then the German has sold ten thousand Mark's a day (about ten dollars) and stage hands $2.50 per week how can we compete with them. Can the labor union boards put a stop to this now? It's unfair competition and against union labor of this country.

"The Digest of the Motion Picture Industry"

Paul Scardon is in town at the M. P. D. R. and he has several offers to go to work. Betty Blythe, his wife, is working with Director Kenneth Webb for F. B. Warren and Greene here.

The conditions in general are very bad in New York as I write. All in all in the world of Harry Millarde, Herbert Brenon and Chas. Giblyn at Fox, and Henry King and Bob Leonard at Biograph are working at all.

A lot are starting but God knows when. The actors have never found times so bad as now. This is a tip to those in Hollywood who are thinking of coming East. Stay where you are. It's showning here, and damn cold too.

Theda Bara will do a series of Vamp pictures under her husband's direction who, by the way, is Chas. Brabin.

United Artists wants pictures. If you have a good story and have produced good pictures in the past and need capital to produce your own, write to Oscar Price, head of United Artists, and tell him so. He will give you consideration and if your proposition merits it, also the money.

The N. Y. Star in a recent issue said that Camera! was the best trade sheet it has as yet laid eyes upon. The Star is the United Booking Office syndicate and eighteen years on the news stands. The Star knows what it is talking about.

Well, the M. P. D. A. — Will Hay's Supper Dance at the Hotel Astor, March 16, was a humdinger! Everyone was there that was anything and a few who wasn't. Galore, mayors, senators, stars, cabinet men, film makers, exhibitor heads, producers, distributors, play wrights of note, etc., etc.

And anyone that carry's a M. P. D. A. membership card in his pocket should feel proud of the way the event was handled and credit for its big success must go to George Sargent, C. J. Willians, Bill Haddock, Dawley, Irving Vigne, Millarde, and a few more. It sure was a cockoo.

Frank P. Donovan (M. P. D. A.) has started work on big picture here for F. B. Warren. More about this later.

Griffith's "Orphans of the Storm" will go out over United Artists, it is said. It has not decided yet if he plans to finish it. Broadway is covered with billboards, still the crow vort come at $2.00 a throw, so it will become regular release from present installations. Two dollars, New Yorkers feel, is too much money, and the day of the two dollar picture seems passe at least for the present.

Goldwyn and First National may combine to eliminate some exchages, it appears. Well, a lot of these organizations where the producer gets what's coming to him in a financial way would not be amiss, do you think?

The "Mistress of the World" serial from Germany and sponsored by Famous Players took one grand old American flop on Broadway. It never got into vaudeville houses, but that's about all. Broadway cannot see it with opera glasses as a first run attraction.

Dame rumor has it that W. R. Hearst bought the Rivoli Theatre from Famous Players for the New York showing on his pictures. His Henryk contract expires in a few months, you know. Loew and Hearst are on the outs as well over bookings and money.

Fifteen Hundred Dollar Scenarios

Word comes from several of the larger studios and a representative scenario school that the producers have settled upon $1,500 as the top price to be paid hereafter for either original scripts or continuities. It seems to be the idea of the leading lights that the years have brought forth few photoplays worth more than such a figure and that adaptation is but a matter of technique which once learned may be accomplished as speedily as the scenarist sees fit to work. Whether or not there is justification for such a stand we do not feel to be our argument, but this turn of events does present at least one angle which is worthy of mention.

If for instance the producers were to issue an ultimatum of like nature with regard to the screen rights of published material, and it is altogether likely that such a stand will be taken if reports are to be credited, then the original writer will have little reason to feel disgruntled over slight cuts on his work. This is because the result, as we see it, would be a tendency to eliminate a great amount of published material from the "available" list, thereby opening a larger field to the photodramatists. Their recompense would thereupon be more than satisfactory.

Any such occurrence brings much controversy and if the producers as a body have settled upon this scale, there may follow much agitation. We have an idea that three-fourths of what will be said on each side will be vitally interesting.

The Motion Picture People's Church

A new campaign has been launched to achieve "The Little Church Around the Corner," about which so much has lately been planned and said in the film colony. Below is set forth the idea behind this worthy project, its history and its contemplated operation.

The "Little Church Around the Corner" is intended to serve the spiritual and social needs of the motion picture people in Southern California. Just as the well-known actors' church in New York — from whence the name is borrowed — serves the people of the speaking stage in the metropolis, but the local project is far greater than its eastern prototype, both in conception and scope, and will, when successfully established, comprise a group of buildings, harmonious and dignified in design, housing a Church, Rectory, Community Hall, Gymnasium, Club Rooms, Executive Offices and other departments which will center about the "Little Church Around the Corner."

The Church and Community Center will be an enduring and living monument to the highest ideals and loftiest aims of the motion picture profession. Its location, in the capital of the cinema world, will enable it to keep in constant touch with a majority of the picture people. It will be a shrine to which they may turn for inspiration and support in their efforts to place and preserve the cinema art upon the high plane of the elder arts; and to foster those high ideals of thought and conduct which are essential to the artistic and professional development of the screen drama.

The vision of a motion picture people's "Little Church Around the Corner" as the corner-stone of a community center for the cinema capital came first to the Rev. Neal Dodd early in 1918, when he opened an Episcopal Mission in a Hollywood store-room. His acquaintance with picture people grew rapidly, and his present church, St. Mary of the Angels, numbers so many of the profession in the congregation that it is familiarly known as "the picture people's church."

For over three years the Rev. Mr. Dodd has kept in personal touch with the studios and the people engaged in the making of motion pictures. This vision of a church and community center supported by film people is now shared by so many leaders in the profession that the time is opportune for the actual launching of the project.

The financing of the "Little Church Around the Corner" project as at present contemplated, will be accomplished by various methods, as follows:

Building Fund
1. Donations from individuals and organizations in the motion picture profession.
2. Proceeds from entertainments sponsored by Motion Picture associations and theatres, not only in Los Angeles, but all over the United States. San Francisco, where great interest has been evidenced in the project, has promised support in this direction.

Operation
Once established, the church and community center will undoubtedly receive the financial support usually accorded to a city church. But to insure a permanent and adequate income two plans have been adopted, namely:

(a) The establishment of an endowment fund to be gradually raised to a size that would insure continuous income. This plan will be put into operation as soon as the church and rectory are completed.

(b) The purchase of sufficient land for the site of the project to allow of the erection of income residence property adjoining the main buildings. This plan could be carried out as soon as sufficient funds are available and need not wait upon the completion of the main buildings. In addi-

SELZNICK TO MOVE IN APRIL

The middle of April is the time chosen, and preparations are under way for the trip West of the Selznick Producing Company. Among those who will make the journey are MGM's Robert Coogan; his assistant, Joseph M. Schenck; James L. Flanagan, manager of the production forces; Ralph Ince, Victor Heerman and George Archainbaud, of the directorial staff, and Charles Lamont, Jim Flanagan and others. The work to be done at the United Studios will include the making of a number of special productions, "The Fastest Way," "Rupert of Hentzau" and others. Work will start immediately on a new Prudhomme feature, marking the seventh of the Hamburger series.

AT THE ROACH STUDIO

Harold Lloyd has finished his first week on the first picture of the new program of six pictures he is making for Pathé. Fred Newmeyer is directing.

Harry "Snub" Pollard has still another week of interiors for his first two-reeler with the working title, "Grandpa's Will." Charles R. Bowers is directing.

Paul Parton completes a new picture presented by Jim Davis at the megaphone and Jobyna Ralston and Eddie Baker, supporting. Al Santell, the alternate director, will work with the staff on the next comedy. "His Rascals," the latest comedy unit, has finished the second comedy and sets are now in readiness to commence shooting presently on the next picture, "Sunshine Sammy." Jackie Condon, Peggy Carter and other screen children and some of the Roach Zoo animals will appear in the scenes. Tom McNamara is the author of the script and Bob McGowan will direct.

Art titles are now being added to the last of the Pollard's one-reelers, "Strictly Moderne," and "Hall and Hearty." Following a studio preview the two comedies will be shipped to New York. The following Pollard comedies have just been released: "The Bow Wows," "Pardon Me" and "Down and Out."
Current Reviews

“THE CRADLE”

Grauman’s

“The Cradle,” Olga Printzlau’s adaptation for Paramount of the Eugene Brieux play, is a sentimental subject which has been carefully and happily pulled together, and thereby kept from dropping into the messy, heroically pitiful which prove so fatal to the ordinary play or novel of this type. The story treats of an average matrimonial mix-up and its resultant unhappy effect upon the child. Quite a little humanness and some truly touching situations make up for a rather negligible finish, which it must be said with regret is continually clear from the opposition’s very introduction. Nevertheless, there is entertainment value here in abundance and it will probably please three fourths of any picked audience.

Hal Rosson’s work at the camera is up to the Lasky standard.

Ethel Clayton as Margaret Harvey, an every-day, well-meaning, young mother, has an excellent if scarcely a star part with which to work. Her performances always indicate the real thought behind them, a study which, combined with the natural capability of their interpreter, has given us some noteworthy drama.

Margaret’s doctor husband is well cared for by Charles Meredith who has the disadvantage of seeming a little young in the character to overcome. That Robert Harvey’s essentially sturdy optimism is overlooked by the brilliance of his “outside affair” never entirely loses sympathy for him as his action is always true to life.

It is little Mary Jane Irving who is vital in the drama as the Harvey baby, an intelligent youngster who places an original but very nearly correct construction upon surrounding circumstances and assimilates the tragic facts of her life, sometimes with a clear, far-seeming mind as is the way with children.

Anna Lehr enacts Lola Forbes, an attractive and thoroughly convincing vamp; while W. C. O’Connor is the “other man” efficiently.

Adele Farrington in the role of “grandmother” completes the cast as naturally as all of its parts are played.

“SCHOOL DAYS”

Kinema

Wesley Barry fans have the opportunity this week of witnessing their young favorite in Warner Brothers’ celluloid version of Gus Edwards’ renowned, old dramatic sketch, “School Days,” or rather in an original by Director William Nigh and Walter de Leon, which is presented under the Edwards title. The sketch, of course, contained little filmable material, but its type always holds forth great possibilities. Many of these have been utilized delightfully.

Nevertheless it is a debatable question whether the same methodological plot resorted to in the play to entice the picture improves the simple narrative any, although it undoubtedly puts up the action where it grows triflery. The photography by Jack Brown and Sydney Wilcox is noticeably uneven, leaving much to be desired in places. Night’s direction is not assisted by the sometimes displeasing cutting; but the snappy subtitles always develop the laughs and sometimes provoke them unmind.

Wesley as the incorrigible “orphan,” Speck Brown, is suitably situated in the kind of thing which he can really do. His growing sophistication, so unwelcome in “Penrod,” is not perceptible in this backwoods lad and it is only after he has become familiar with New York’s wealthy strata that Frank O’Connor’s direction which manages to surround it with sincerity.

May McAvoy is perhaps the prettiest and most obviously intelligent ingenue of the season in Meg Mackenzie, an abused village girl who never permits her unhappy situation to rend her weak minded. The handling rather than the script makes this so. In these late performances, however, the admirable store of dramatic talent which gave us Grisel has remained untouched. It will come to light again offering more soul-satisfying interpretations, for this little actress’ art is inevitable.

Darrel Foss makes a picturesque hero in Stephen Ware, a novelist who is befriended by the worshipping Meg and who in turn rescues her from her persecution. The role does not allow much scope, but it is capable handed to the best advantage by Foss.

Josephine Crowell and Lincoln Stedman are rare types for the Amazonian village blacksmith and her dense son.

Charles Ogle and Guy Oliver are allowed to exaggerate the miserliness of the character in which they play, the Craig brothers, but they continually provoke laughter with their efforts in that line which might be considered to justify it.

Helen Dunbar provides a much needed human touch to the story in Ware’s understanding mother, who, Kathleen Kirkham finishes the action in Beatrice Carlisle, Meg’s opposition for Stephen’s heart.

TURN TO THE RIGHT

Mission

Rex Ingram’s Metro production, “Turn to the Right,” follows “Foolish Wives,” in the Mission. Those who are familiar with the Winchell Smith and Jack Hazard play from which it was adapted, have already remarked surprise at this choice of matter by the brilliant young director who came so near to the fore with his sensational execution of “The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse.” The simplicity of the subject, however, does not afford a strong opportunity to further prove the scope of his talent. The comedy element in the play is achieved with rare effect and the entire production has a delightful mellowness which does much to make its old fashioned heart interest acceptable.

June Mathis and Mary O’Hara scenario the play.

Jack Mulhall and Alice Terry fit gracefully into the leading roles as Joe Bascom, the misjudged country boy, and Edie Tillinger, the deacon’s daughter. Their romance has much of poetry and never drags. Gilly and Mugay, those loveable croak pair of Joe, the jewel parts in the cast, are perfectly played by Harry Meyers and George Cooper, who miss nothing in giving the characters to us in their original temper. The control they exercise.

William Bletcher is a further short but well “rounded” laugh in Sammy Martin the notoriety of J. J. Cooper and Edward Connelly delightfully placed in the situations of Mrs. Bascom and Deacon Tillinger.

Margaret Leoniis as Josie Strong, a rural maiden, ends herself in a position made strange by its divergence from those which

Censors Busy

The motion picture industry never knew knowledge was considered dangerous until the New York censor board eliminated a scene recently in an Urban Movie Chat showing how a bottle of water in the sun's rays can burn lace curtains. One would naturally suppose this information might help the public to avoid this catastrophe, but the censor board holds it might incite the stupid public to incendiary deeds.

Normand to Leave in April

Mabel Normand is completing plans to leave for the east immediately following the completion of "Suzanna," which is scheduled for the latter part of April. In June, she will sail for London. Later she will visit Paris, Berlin, Rome, Naples and Madrid. In the fall Miss Normand expects to return to Hollywood to start work on another Mack Sennett-Mable Normand feature.

"Snub" Pollard Weds

Harry "Snub" Pollard, Roach comedy star, and Mrs. Elizabeth Bowen of Bisbee, Arizona, were married here recently.

Pressure of work will cause Mr. Pollard to postpone the honeymoon trip until the end of the year when he will take his bride to Melbourne, Australia, on a three months' vacation.

Barriscale in Vaudeville Sketch

Beossie Barriscale is on the stage to remain indefinitely, and is at present appearing in vaudeville with her new playlet called "Picking Peaches."

Pauline Frederick has left pictures and gone to Chicago to appear in a new Al Woods play.

Virginia Brown Faire, who was voted into the movies by the Chicago Elks, was injured recently in an automobile accident.

The forth coming meeting of the Electrical Illuminating Engineers Society will be held at the Pickford-Fairbanks Studio on Santa Monica boulevard.

"The Man from Hell's River," the feature recently completed by Irving Cummings, in which he is the star, is based on James Oliver Curwood's story, "The God of His People."

Costumes and properties have been brought from Spain by Paramount to be used in "Blood and Sand," the Ibanez novel which is being filmed with Rudolph Valentino as star.

Mack Sennett's lot looks like Tia Juana, Mexico, and Juarez these days. Many Mexican peons are assembled for atmospheric purposes for Mabel Normand's current picture "Suzanna."

Ruth Roland has returned from a vacation in San Francisco and is preparing to begin work on her next serial, "The Riddle of the Range," the filming of which will commence presently at United Studios.

Elfelt Goes to New York

Clifford S. Elfelt, president and general manager of Metropolitan Productions, is enroute to New York for a business conference with his distributor, Franklyn E. Backer, of East Coast Productions.

The tenth anniversary of the Universal Film Company is to be celebrated in May.

James Ashmore Creelman, who adapted Norma Talmadge's next first National attraction, "Smilin' Through," is the son of James Creelman, the well-known war correspondent.

The Whitehall Chapel set erected for Maurice Tourneur's production of "Lorna Doone," is one of the largest sets ever constructed at the Ince studios, it is said.

"The Green Temptation," Paramount cinema play, the last film effort of the late William Desmond Taylor, will be presented at Grauman's Rialto, beginning Sunday, April 2nd.

Virginia Valli's current engagement opposite Herbert Rawlinson in "The Black Bag" at Universal, is her third in four months. Her two previous engagements were "Trailed to Earth" and "The Storm."

"The Battle of Jutland," Educational's three-reel special, had a showing recently at the Granada Theatre in San Francisco for hundreds of sailors, headed by high ranking officers of the Pacific Fleet.

Christine Mayo and Adelle Farrington will appear in the supporting cast of "The Unexpected Honeymoon," starring Doris May, which is starting production at the R-C Studios under the direction of William Seitzers.
Production Notes

(Western Pictures Notes)

Lester Cuneo, after several weeks of vacation, started work this week on his forthcoming picture, "Double Fisted." Scenes are being taken near San Fernando.

Releasing plans are being negotiated by this company for early distribution of "Ridin' Wild," a Hugh B. Evans, Jr. all-star production, headed by Roy Stewart, Marjorie Daw, Johnnie Walker and Wallace Beery; "The Man from Hell's River," an Irving Cummings feature in which he is supported by Eva Novak and Wallace Beery; Dave Butler in Louis Burston's production, "According to Hoyle"; Irving Cummings' production, "Fires of Vengeance," starring Lon Chaney, surrounded by an all-star cast; Dick Hatton's "Four Hearts"; Cactus two-reel features, "When West Meets East," and "Phantom of the Hills."

The script for Dick Hatton's next five-reel starring vehicle is nearing completion and production is expected to start shortly.

Backer to Distribute

According to announcement by Clifford S. Elfelt, president of Metropolitan Productions, the series of Western comedy-drama specials now being made under this brand will be distributed by Franklyn E. Backer through East Coast Productions. Carl P. Winther, vice-president and production manager, has six of the series cut and titled and ready for release and is now making preparations for the filming of the seventh, "High Stakes," casting for which will begin soon.

"The Wilds of the West," the first of the series of Western comedy-drama specials filmed by Mr. Elfelt and Mr. Winther, will make its debut on the market within the next week.

Japanese Pictures to be Assembled Here

Motion pictures are to be made in Japan and brought to Hollywood for assembling by a new company just formed for the purpose. Marion Fairfax, scenario writer, and John Jasper are promoters of the plan. E. K. Tanaka, a native Japanese, will direct the films.

Washburn in Domestic Comedies

Bryant Washburn, who is in the supporting company with Katherine Macdonald in "The Woman Conquers," is reported to be considering a proposition to make a series of two-reel domestic comedies, with Mrs. Washburn, very much after the style of the comedies in which the late Sidney Drew and his wife were starred several years ago.

Clark Completes Vidor Continuity

Frank Howard Clark has recently completed the adaptation and continuity of Florence Vidor's current production, "The Shuttle Soul," to be directed by King Vidor. Mr. Clark is also responsible for the scenario of "Billy Jim," the Fred Stone-Frank Borzage picture which ran at Paramount recently; likewise two Frothingham-Stoman pictures, "Pilgrims of the Night" and "The Other Woman." Mr. Clark has also completed a series of original stories for Metropolitan Productions.

Morris Kohn, former president of Realeart, has rejoined Selznick as treasurer. He succeeds Henry Clay Siegel who resigned recently.

Harold H. Hurley, assistant to Malcolm Boylan, director of publicity at Universal City, has resigned to handle publicity for the Universal Exchange.

MAYER AND SCHULBERG FORCES MERGE

Louis B. Mayer and B. P. Schulberg, president of Preferred Pictures, have eliminated their producing interests and in the future will occupy the studio where for the last few years Mr. Mayer has produced First National attractions with Anita Stewart and Mildred Harris and where all of the John M. Stahl productions have been filmed.

With the merger of the Mayer and Schulberg forces for Preferred Pictures, productions will be made at the Louis B. Mayer studios which will be known as the Mayer-Schulberg studios. Here the Katherine MacDonald features for First National will continue to be screened and here, too, the John M. Stahl productions will also be made.

Mr. Mayer and Mr. Schulberg will, in addition, add two new producing organizations with such directors as Fred Niblo and Louis Gasnier.

Mr. Schulberg's organization, which makes the playplays in which Katherine MacDonald is starred, has for the last three years occupied the studio that originally was erected by the old Biograph company, where D. W. Griffith started to produce five reel pictures and when his players included such present day stars as Mary Pickford, Lionel Barrymore, Harry Carey, Lillian and Dorothy Gish, Mae Marsh and others.

KIRKLAND PREPARING SCRIPT

David Kirkland, formerly director of Norma Talmadge and other screen notables, has been engaged by Jess Robbins Productions as scenario writer and manager of production. Mr. Kirkland is now making the final changes in the script for the "Ladder Jinx," which will go into production shortly.

FOURTH OFFICE OF NATIONAL EXCHANGES, INC., OPENED

National Exchanges, Inc., has just opened the fourth distributing office directly controlled by the parent organization. The new exchange is St. Louis National Exchanges, Inc., located in St. Louis, Mo. Floyd Lewis is manager and Roy Dickson is associated with Mr. Lewis.

International News No. 31 and 32.

"The Sleepyhead," featuring Harry Sweet (two reels).

"The Verdict," featuring Eddie Polo (two reels).

The Pacific Film Co. will stage right the series of six pictures starring Henry B. Watson. The first release is "The Able-Minded Lady."

Carl E. Milliken, treasurer of Pine Tree Pictures, Inc., is supervising the production of the latest Curwood picture at the Paragon Studio in New York.

"Is Matrimony a Failure?" a Paramount comedy production comes to Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre, week of Monday, April 3rd.

"The Digest of the Motion Picture Industry"

AT LASKY'S

Agnes Ayres will begin work in a few days on a new picture written and adapted by Beulah Marie Die, entitled "Borderland," which will be directed by Paul Powell.

"Man Unconquerable," in which Jack Holt is starred, has just started production under the direction of Joseph Henabery. The role of Rita, leading woman, is played by Sylvia Breamer, and the story is an original by Hamilton Smith adapted by Julian Josephson.

Shipwreck and desert island features will be among the scenes of Betty Compson's new picture, "The Bonded Woman," directed by Philip E. Rosen, in which Miss Compson enacts the role of a sea captain's daughter.

"DADDY LOVE" COMPLETED

Among the playplays recently finished is "Daddy Love," which was produced by the Roy H. Klumb Productions under the personal supervision of Mr. Klumb. In the cast are such players as Mr. and Mrs. Harry Todd, Billie Rhodes, Ted Edwards, Ernest Shields and Sam Allen. Louis William Chaudel assisted Mr. Klumb in the direction and also collaborated with Bert D. Essex on the scenario.

STOREY BACK WITH PATHE

Pathe has recalled John E. Storey to its service, with the duties and title of General Representative. The call came promptly on the expiration of a year's leave of absence which was granted to enable Associated Exhibitors to profit by Mr. Storey's experience and abilities, which he is now applying in the sales manager's position.

SHIRLEY IN AUSTRALIA COMPLETES FIRST

Arthur Shirley, who has been engaged in the motion picture business in Sydney, Australia, recently completed "The Throwback," in seven reels, and is a story of Australia and the South Seas.

INDEPENDENT PRODUCTION NOTES

The second Ranger bill Miller western, "The Fighting Ranger," will be on the market this week.

Scheduled for next week's release are Bob Horner's "Defying the Law," featuring Monty Montague, also four Victor Kramer productions with Texas Guinan, Lina Cavalleri, Zena Keefe and Noah Beery. Besides these features the Billy Franey two-reelers and the Connelly series of single reel comedies are released in semi-monthly and weekly intervals.

GRIMM GOES TO CONTINENT

Ben H. Grimm sailed for London recently to join E. J. Smith, who is making a survey of European film conditions for Carl Laemmle. Grimm will act as Smith's assistant.

CONTRACT FOR SIX FEATURES

Associated Exhibitors, Inc., will release six more J. P. McGowan features through Playgoers Pictures, Inc. The contracts were just signed and follow the release of four McGowan pictures through Playgoers. Work starts on the first film around April 15th.

"CAPT. KIDD" IN JAPAN

The Taisho Film Co., of Japan, has purchased "Capt. Kidd," the first Eddie Polo serial, for that country.

TO SUPPORT JACK GILBERT

Renee Adoree, who is Mrs. Tom Moore in private life, has been engaged by the Fox Film Company to play opposite Jack Gilbert.

Mr. Calmay, head of Independent Producers, entered into definite agreement recently with the firm of Lichtig and Rockwell to handle the casting and studio management for four producing units completed by the above syndicate to start producing in the immediate future.

Edyth Stuyart is playing an important part in Lester Cuneo's forthcoming picture entitled "Doubled Fisted."

"Bought and Paid For"

Paramount

"George Broadhurst's play is hardly more than a memory to the majority of younger picture patrons. It is revived only occasionally in stock. This fact will help the screen version of the play, for while the plot has been adhered to, the characters have been altered in some cases. . . ."

"Mr. De Mille has, of course, dressed up the production. Once he takes his characters into a life of affluence, it would be easy to guess that it was a De Mille production even were there no announcement of the fact." —Motion Picture News.

"So much has been said of the stage version for the very good reason that the picture version, produced for Paramount by William De Mille, keeps as close to the original as is possible in screen transcription, consequently there is no doubt but that it will at least equal the success of the stage play. The action of the original has been followed with remarkable fidelity and the spirit of the play is not only retained absolutely but has in a measure been increased. . . ."

"The strongest recommendation that can be made is that the picture at the start rivets the interest of the spectator and increases it as the picture progresses. It visualizes the same qualities the stage version contained, although there are times when there seems to be an unusual number of titles.

"The acting of the cast is one of the most valuable features of the production." —Moving Picture World.

"George Broadhurst's original play has been repeated so often by stock companies all over and in the World Film production of several years ago, with Alice Brady as star, that its popularity is long established and the story probably familiar wherever entertainment exists. Paramount has considered it worthy of a second picturization and William De Mille has provided the production.

"The story gives the director one of his favorite themes although there are not the possibilities for spectacular effects and lavish display that usually play a prominent part in his productions. But De Mille has refrained splendidly from dressing up the story with anything that doesn't belong and the result is a photoplay that conforms pretty strictly to the original." —Wid's.

"Bought and Paid For," adapted for the screen from the original play by George Broadhurst, fills every requirement as a first class production. The story is filled with choice comedy and one of the best love themes ever put on stage or screen. . . . The popularity of the play and the merits of this new screen version augur well for the success of the picture. —Exhibitors Trade Review.

"Come On Over"

Goldwyn

"It's as wholesome as a spring shower, as joyous as a bubbling brook and it fairly sparkles with quaint humor and Irish brogue. We have had many, many stories of the Emerald Isle, but none more fascinatingly told than this Hughes concoction, with its splendidly original, simply heroic and the many real people who surround them. There's a genuine treat in store for those who do not crave the sensational in picture-making, for tears are mixed with laughter, with the lighter scenes predominating and no especial play for sentiment."

—Exhibitors Herald.

"A pleasing mixture of humor, sentiment, Irish jigs and lovelmaking is offered by this picture, which is skillfully directed, prettily photographed and presented by a capable cast of players.

"The picture's chief charm lies in its optimistic view of life, there isn't a villain in sight at any time, even the usual film depiction of the metropolitan police as a set of rascals, is redeemed in this film. . . ."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"Rupert Hughes' story is chiefly character development and incident but sufficiently interesting and human to make up for any missing plot of the regulation continuity. He hasn't omitted anything pertaining to Irish customs or mannerisms either in those who have come over or those still in the "auld" country.

"Rupert Hughes probably wrote the subtitles which certainly fit the pictures ideally. One was loudly applauded. Colleen, in a fit of temper because she thinks her sweetheart is in love with another, runs away and is arrested for sitting on a park bench without a hat. She tells the officer she thought it was a free country and the retort that won the audience was, 'Shure, ye must be a furrier to remember the declaration of independence.'" —Wid's.

"Rupert Hughes again demonstrates his thoroughness in whatever he undertakes by making 'Come On Over,' Colleen Moore's starring vehicle for Goldwyn, as green as any stock picture but polished in the Auld Soci. Indeed, so typically Irish is this picture that the heroine arrives in what she has been told was 'The Land of Liberty' with box of Shamrocks, and then exhibits a very justifiable and equally Irish temper when she discovers her sweetheart has apparently lost interest in her. Moreover, the picture ends with everybody—rich men and poor men, their wives and kin—dancing an Irish jig on a hastily requisitioned door in a home of the busiest rich."

—Moving Picture World.

"Rupert Hughes is the sponsor of this picture and it is typically Irish. . . . His idea is old and obvious and naive in development. In fact it builds on exceedingly slight thread depending upon Celtic background and incident for its strength. In fact the humor is entirely gained from the captions which are rendered with some phrasing and truly 'ould sod' in character."

"Come On Over" is really a three-reeler extended to feature length through the employment of a few additional scenes. And these qualities are manifested with an old-fashioned reel, heart interest scenes between long separated relatives, and the eccentricities of the figures." —Motion Picture News.

"Smilin' Through"

(First National)

"In converting 'Smilin' Through,' the famous stage play, which added greatly to the laurels of Jane Cowl, into a screen vehicle for Norma Talmadge, Director Sidney Franklin has done a notable piece of work. The Scenes of the play are laid in England, and the atmosphere, costumes and customs of British life during the two widely separated periods with which the story deals, have been preserved in a remarkable manner. The setting and make-up are beautiful and the skillful photography misses no opportunity to bring these to the front with delightful efficiency."

—Exhibitors' Herald.

"'Smilin' Through' is a personal triumph for Norma Talmadge. Some persons will say, Miss Talmadge exceeds anything she has done before, but at any rate everyone will agree she at least equals it."

"Besides the charming Miss Talmadge will have upon all witnesses, it is this beauty of presentation of a story that is bound to have unusually wide appeal that assures success for the picture." —Moving Picture World.

"Compared with the ordinary picture 'Smilin' Through' shines brilliantly. It has one of the most distinguished casts on the screen, splendid settings and photography—and Norma Talmadge, who surpasses herself in the dual role of Mooneyen and Kathleen."

"We have no doubt that before the picture is released its makers will shorten it in some details and make the beautiful footage less confusing. These are matters that can be easily attended to. "Smilin' Through" is an exceptional picture. In our view it's the best Norma Talmadge ever made." —Exhibitors' Trade Review.

"Everyone, from the exhibitor to his poorest patron, is certain to beam upon Norma Talmadge for her magnificent picture, 'Smilin' Through,' adapted from the stage play which is still on tour. Here is an opera—the first that the talented star has ever had and one of the finest pieces ever released since the fifth industry was established. It gives to Miss Talmadge opportunities to reveal her emotional qualities as they have never been revealed before. "Smilin' Through" will win praise everywhere. Money has not been spent upon it in vain. It tugs at the finer senses like Beethoven's Fifth Symphony." —Motion Picture News.

"The Vermilion Pencil"

(R-C Pictures)

"If the story and drama had the same per-fecition that the production has from a technical standpoint, The Vermilion Pencil' would be an unequalled film. The story, however, scales the heights of the fanciful and improbable to a greater extent than is usual in South Seas or mountain subjects, and provides an undue strain on the imagination for the sake of exploiting the star. The interiors are a revelation of art and the exteriors show the mountains and woods that are sure to win admiration." —Moving Picture World.

"The Digest of the Motion Picture Industry"
Contemporary Criticisms

"Sessue Hayakawa is back at straight Oriental characterization and the result is an overdose of Hayakawa melodrama and mysticism, some delightful and exquisite photography, and a strong thrilling climax. The appeal is chiefly melodramatic—the story is one of physical action and romance, but Miss Dean's acknowledged abilities are given full play in this vehicle, and the result is a high-class melodrama which seems to please the types of audiences. The picture also contains two terrible pieces of realism—the wandering of the heroine in a desert, lost, dazed by mirages, and the breaking of a dam which sends a torrent of water through a narrow gorge.

"The desert and the flood are the highlights of melodramatic action, but they do not comprise the sole merits of the picture. The staging and direction and photography and lighting are very effective. "Wild Honey" is a picture of thrill—with love interest—and to our notion, comes under the classification: good."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

THE PROPHET'S PARADISE" (Selznick)

"Neither the acting nor the plot is altogether convincing. The dark plot is obvious, and Eugene O'Brien gives a rather casual effort if not actually blase interpretation of his part, without being at any point, greatly terrorized, as the seriousness of his predicament demands. "Many of the scenes are conducted with pomp, and the settings show great care."

"The production throughout is excellent and the atmosphere of the Orient is well preserved in sets and costumes."

—Exhibitors' Herald.

"Wild Honey" is by way of being a rather peculiar mixture of unusually good stuff and some very bad claptrap. But judged as a whole it should serve as fair entertainment of a three-day melodramatic sort. For if one is responsible for the staging of the bursting dam scene and the following flood through the deep canyon, he deserves unmitigated praise. This part of the picture comes as a much needed wallopping—Moving Picture World.

"Universal's latest feature starring Priscilla Dean is just about what you would expect it to be, or perhaps a little more so. Miss Dean is once more the heroine of many thrills that run all the way from her being forced into a disagreeable marriage and her last minute escape to the rescue, in the rescue in the final reel when a dam is blown up and the water rushes down, threatening her life along with the hero's. But this last one is by all means the star thrill of the production. Slow motion photography has been used effectively to show the water slowly but surely flooding the narrow gorge and finally overtaking the lovers before they can get away. Miss Dean has been written for Miss Dean it couldn't suit her better and she is always pleasing and in some of the very 'meller' bits her good acting helps to alleviate the improbabilities."—Wid's.

"Picking stories for Marie Prevost is not a difficult task. . . . The Dangerous Little Demon' is a slight story relying entirely upon the star's personality. The idea behind it is more or less in pictures, there is much ado about nothing. But here the author and director have draped in a touch of melodrama to give it a punch. And such a emanation must conclude this review sees padded with this form of treatment. There is some strainning for humor but the comedy scenes are less successful than those expressing romance."—Motion Picture News.

tion to the financial advantage accruing from the erection of income-producing property, the church would possess the additional advantage of being situated upon a main boulevard. However, it will be screened from the noise of traffic, while the harmonious blending of church design with both church and community center buildings with the income-producing structures will add architectural dignity to the whole project.

To insure a business-like administration of the funds collected for the project a corporation has been formed under the name of the "Picture People's Church Corporation," of which the Rev. Neal Dodd is President and Mr. Walter J. Reynolds, Treasurer. This corporation is expected to launch a drive for sufficient funds to carry out the whole project.

The designing of the group of churches has already been entrusted to Mr. Carlton Monroe Winslow, who is nationally known for his architectural work on the San Diego Exposition.

Mr. Winslow's initial plans include a large hall, capable of seating 700 persons, equipped with a stage and screen, and so designed as to provide space for dances and other entertainments. A gymnasium, swimming tank, club rooms and other recreation rooms will be provided. The design also includes a dormitory building for the use of girls. These buildings will comprise the community center which will surround the church and rectory.

Remember that you do not have to be an Episcopalian to enjoy the privileges this fine church offers. The whole matter to a church member. If you belong to some other faith, very good, all will have a share and interest. In reality, it is to be a haven for modern living beauty, where they can feel at home and enjoy the pleasures of social intercourse in community life.

The office of the "Picture People's Church Corporation" is 1904 Hollingsworth Building, Los Angeles, California. Checks or money orders should be made out in the name and sent direct to the office.

WE ARE CHAMPIONED
A correspondent points that not all of the press is participating in the monstrous attack upon Hollywood, which has been launched by certain syndicates. As proof he quotes a late editorial from "The Rockford (Ill.) Republic":

"Wouldn't it be rather surprising to the most bitter critics of the moving picture profession for it to be demonstrated that the slain William Desmond Taylor was above the average in kindness and honor and that his death was occasioned because of efforts to protect a friend from sinister outside forces?"

"This has not been shown beyond question, but it has been indicated more strongly than insinuations against his character. Nor have any of the young women, whose names and pictures decorated many a newspaper page, been connected in any way with the various scandals dragged into the affair by eager correspondents with keen noses for carion.

"The fact is that the tremendous public interest in picture people carried the story to extremes. Perhaps it may develop into a mere business murder, such as some great city has every day, or there may be an element of romance, not unknown in the highest and lowest of society.

"The outstanding fact seems to be that several prominent members of the picture profession have been inspected under the spot light, spy glass and X-ray, without being revealed as anything more than ordinarily foolish human beings. As has been stated before there is every reason to believe that the slayer, if of the profession, was some one who was in desperate straits rather than on the pinnacle of success.

"In fact there has been such an absence of information regarding certain persons and along certain lines that one may guess that the Los Angeles authorities have the solution in hand and are merely kicking up dust while watching the suspect.

"The worst that can be said of the famous Hollywood colony, or the Beverly Hills or Culver City colonies is seldom mentioned, it is that they may have as large a percentage of offensive or degenerate members as any other colony, profession or occupation.

"And that is rather a mean thing to say. Before casting more stones at our entertainers it might be well to run through the newspapers and check up various other groups, including some which profess greater virtue—laborers, capitalists, merchants, lawyers, doctors, criminals, reformers,—many men of many minds—are human beings, and human beings sometimes do the unexpected—as even Hedda Gabler proved, you may remember.

"Now that indignation, whipped by tongues of scandal, is burning more low, and fair play may have a word, it may be well to quote from Donn Platt:

"Humanity is about the same the world over; and while the earth has its uniformity, with slight differences in mountain and plain, so its products are very nearly alike."

The Manhattan directors, Fred W. Sittenham and Clifford S. Wheeler, have just arrived from New York and leased quarters in Donovan's bungalow village. Mr. Wheeler, it is announced, will shortly produce a picture at the Robertson-Cole studio's.

Writer and director appears to the public as only a name on the screen. Nation-wide publicity makes that name represent a real being in which people feel human interest.

THE CAMERAMAN IN THE MIDDLE WEST

From the American Cinematographer

"Everywhere we go nowadays to see important events, the moving picture cameraman is on the job, bringing the news to thousands, as the newspaper reporters have done in the past. In the days just gone by, we have been furnished with our latest news by the leading weeklies such as Pathé, Kinograms, etc. The Middle West of our country, furnishing its quota of these news events along with the rest, carried this idea forward. Now today, particularly in this territory, we have overturned this idea until we see an event in the morning and then when we attend the local picture palace, at night, we see the event moving before our eyes. Few realize what has taken place during the day, how the cameraman was on the job, how the laboratory expert, the cameraman's co-worker, continued the good work, and finally the projectionist flashes the views in action before our eyes.

"The day Marshal Foch appeared in Battle Creek, Michigan, motion pictures were taken of the train arriving, speech making, etc., and that same night these views were shown to the anxious things who had seen the events of the morning, as well as those who were unable to attend. All this done in a city of 20,000 people in the Middle West, where most people think that the making of movies is never heard of. Service like this might be expected with the facilities of New York or Hollywood, but in the Middle West it proves that the industry is striving forward, too. This stunt was put over by the writer, who is putting forth every effort to feature the advancement of the cinema to the masses.

"Another deal was put over in the Middle West not over a week ago. When the Capitol Theatre, Detroit, opened to over 5,000 people, moving pictures were taken of the crowds in front of the theatre, also of the audience on the start of the performance. When the show ended, the same audience saw themselves on the screen. This again shows what can be accomplished in this territory, the heart of the Middle West.

"This is approximately the center of our country, east and west, and is the logical place for the producer, aiding him in putting his wares before the people with greater rapidity than now, thus eliminating the process of shipping across the entire continent to the main offices in New York. The scenery is here, everything from a palatial estate to a backwood scene. The climate is here, too. What if there is a little snow now and then! Cannot a love scene be put on with it snowing? Too much summer scenery is like eating mince pie all the time. Apple pie is good for a change. So the Middle West is here for the producer, and with proper backing and support, it could become the center of the motion picture industry."

NEW YORK PREMIER FOR "FORGET ME NOT"

On the completion of "Forget Me Not," the special production co-starring Garrett Hughes and Bessie Love, Louis Burston will take the picture to New York for a special preview.

The cast includes Irene Hunt, Otto Lederer, Gertrude Claire, William Machin and Myrtle Lind. W. S. Van Dyke directed, with Arthur L. Todd at the camera. Henry R. Symonds wrote the story and John B. Clymer the continuity.

Jack Perrin is playing the male lead opposite Josephine Hill in the series of west ern pictures which has been written by Mrs. A. B. Mascher, for direction by Fred Caw well.

SILVER SHIELD SERVICE TO SERVE NON-THEATRICAL FIELD

Announcement has just been made of the formation of Silver Shield Service, a national motion picture production and distributing enterprise to serve the non-theatrical field. Production has already started on a series of unit programs and the creation of seventy-five distributing branches throughout the U.S. and Canada was already under way. Temporary executive offices have been taken in the Union League Building pending the preparation of permanent headquarters.

According to officials of the company, Silver Shield Service has been organized to satisfy a very definite demand for clean pictures on the part of churches, schools, women's clubs and other religious and civic organizations. The distributing plan is a comprehensive one. Every important city in the United States will possess a Silver Shield branch office. It is thus planned to make Silver Shield Service quickly and inexpensively accessible to every church, school and club in the country. The officers and directors include the following:

Herbert B. Goodell, formerly District Attorney and Judge, San Bernardino, and now Collector of Internal Revenue, Los Angeles.

Dr. F. W. Bassett, for the last thirty-five years practicing physician in Wisconsin and Los Angeles.

H. W. Shenk, formerly Juvenile Judge and now Judge of the Superior Court of Los Angeles.

J. B. Monnette, organizer and promoter, Pasadena.

Louis F. Parsons, formerly member of the New York Stock Exchange and President of the Denver, Cripple Creek and Los Angeles Exchange. Now an investment banker and broken in this city.

Lloyd C. Haynes, formerly investment and commercial banker in New York and Los Angeles and more recently identified with the production of motion pictures as financier and manager.

L. A. Ewing, formerly Vice-President and General Manager of the San Francisco and West Coast Exchange Company.

Millard S. Binney, formerly advertising manager of the Motor Transport Association of St. Louis and Sales and Advertising Counsel for the Ross-Gould Advertising Agency of the same city.

H. M. Owen, formerly with World, Triangle, Paramount, Hodkinson and Associated Producers, both in this country and in the Orient.

Elmer I. Moody, Legal Counselor.

In speaking of the need for this organization, Judge O'Godeall made the following statement:

"Silver Shield Service is an incorporated outgrowth of the Silver Shield League for clean pictures. The demand that exists for a district service can not be more accurately described than to serve the non-theatrical field exclusively was forcibly brought to our attention when the League was a circulartion movement of ministers, educators, club women and other leaders in one hundred of the largest cities, stating that the early organization of the Silver Shield Service was planned and outlining its ideals. Two facts stood out prominently in most of them: first, many more churches and schools reported the over circulation movements as was anticipated; second, these institutions, almost without exception, complained bitterly regarding their absolute inability to secure new films and of their great difficulty in obtaining even old subjects suitable for their type of audiences. While there are apparently 90,000 projection machines installed in churches and approximately 44,000 in schools, more than half of these are apparently idle because of the lack of suitable situations for the films made by them.

"Silver Shield Service will produce clean, wholesome pictures with the rigid requirements of the field in mind. Each program will consist of one multi-reel feature and several reels of clean comedy, scenic, travel and educational subjects. Musical scores will be used and be practical and every aid given to insure the very highest type of presentation. Religious and so-called "moral" pictures will be carried as library stock and in advance not included in the regular programs. The regular programs will be selected because of their general interest and art value and they will positively be free from salacious or otherwise harmful situations. Beginning with the story and continuing through every stage of development, wholesomeness will be the actuating motive."

"We realize that others have attempted to produce clean pictures and failed because of the lack of an organized system to make their products conveniently available to the non-theatrical exhibitors. To guard against any subsequent failures, we are now organizing distributing branches in every important city, each in charge of a capable exchange manager. These managers will be furnished pictures and to these exhibitors and furnish Silver Shield programs on specified dates on a first-run basis. Such a system will bring to the non-theatrical field the same enthusiasm that has been realized by theatres from professional distributors."

"Amplifying the foregoing, J. B. Monnette, we can bring pictures of the highest quality to the non-theatrical exhibitors to expect new films from theatrical distributors when they will be shown in competition with the theatres which furnish the distribution or with practically all revenue. As a result, schools and churches can secure from theatres in this country reliable pictures of the product need only after the theatres have used them and they are so obsolete as to be no longer competitive and their physical condition will indicate that the territory presentation is doubtful. Distribution is of such great importance as production and unless a non-theatrical field, both as producer and distributor, this field will be incapable of development and those who do not care for the type of pictures being shown in theatres will be forced to view them anyway or stay at home."

"Millard S. Binney, who has charge of sales for the new corporation, stated that actual territory organization had been going on practically three months and that many agencies in Canada have already been contracted. Applications are on hand for branch distributing contracts in practically all of the other cities in the United States and individually as investigation shows the applicants to be of proper type to represent Silver Shield Service."

Diamant-Berger claims that next year he will produce in Los Angeles.

Eitel Ritchie, Lily Mae Wilkinson and Tiny Sanford are supporting Roy Atwell in "Loose Nuts," a two-reel Universal comedy which Craig Huxchinson is directing.

Our Birthday

With this issue Camera! completes its fourth year. It does so, fondly realizing that its extended life has been entirely the responsibility of the profession which has always given it support for support in a truly unusual fashion. The term "extended" is used comparatively here in view of the dozen other trade publications that have been offered to the picture industry during our remembrance, only to be now non-existent. In reviewing the ill-fated careers of these contemporaries we feel that if they lacked any perfection which we may have achieved, it was a combination of the unprejudiced candor and heart in its people that has won for Camera! a place of sentiment among its followers.

Only a sympathetic, and yet a fair, constructive understanding of the problems of any class justifies a representative journal. To maintain just such an unbiased attitude has been Camera!’s policy, and its staff has consistently utilized it as a basis of all operation.

The beautiful response of you for whom we work has many times rewarded us for our effort while proving and reprobating the infallibility of the idea upon which we are grounded.

Our fifth year is approached, therefore, with an honest gratification that insures many returns of a very momentous week.

Camera! will continue to be at your service for the remainder of the journey.—F. R.

Sherwood on Hollywood

Robert Sherwood gives us the following whimsical treatment in a late “Life”:

After all, Hollywood is a vastly overrated place. Although I have been observing it for as much as ten days, I have attended no orgies (and as heaven is my witness I have spared no effort in trying to locate them), I have seen no murders and I have been offered no cocaine, hasheesh or bhang. Someone told me that he had a friend who knew a man who made fairly good beer in his kitchen, but that is the only sign of lawlessness that I have observed.

"However, I have not lost hope. Before long I expect to be able to announce that I have found the man who makes the beer.

“Superficially, Hollywood has somewhat the appearance of a quiet college town. The studios take the place of the university buildings and the picture people take the place of the students. All the stores are catering to this one group and display their wares accordingly.

“Behind the town is Mount Hollywood, with a tremendous “H” engraved near its summit. This, too, carries out the collegiate atmosphere, as though the letter had been carved there to commemorate some notable football victory like “Hollywood 28—Culver City 3.”

“I do believe that there is something of the kind on the cliff above New Haven, Conn."

“The movie people themselves—the actors, directors, camera men, stage hands, et al—are in no way extraordinary. They do not seem to take themselves or their work very seriously. They are perfectly willing to admit that many of their pictures contain a certain element of hokum. One particularly attractive young star informed me that she is hungry for New York because she wants “the chance to see a regular show.”

“They all work hard when they are on duty in the studios (and it seems to be peculiarly dull, tiresome work), but out of office hours they are for the most part casual and easy-going, and no one seems to worry very much whether school keeps or not.

“Of the various studios, Universal City is unquestionably the largest, but at the time of my visit there was little activity there and I saw nothing much except some left-over sets and properties from Von Stroheim’s “Foolish Wives.”

“In the Ince Studio I saw a scene of the interior of Westminster Abbey being converted into a Bowery cabaret. This studio, by the way, is the most beautiful of all, resembling from the front a stately Southern mansion, with an imposing, green- lhivered Negro butcher at the door. There were no mint juleps, however.

“I paid a formal call at the home of young Jackie Cooper and was treated to a recital that included poetry, riddles and impersonations. It is not difficult to understand the tremendous success that this seven-year-old child has suddenly achieved, for in spite of all the attention that has been showered on him, and all the praise, he is singularly naive and unspoiled.

“Much of this same quality was evident in the delightful personality of Harold Lloyd, who is actually as comic as he seems. I went out on location with him and watched him do a scene, laughing immeasurably at his antics.

“At the Paramount Studio I saw four companies at work, two of which were filming what appeared to be death-bed scenes. It was horribly realistic. The patients may have recovered after I left, but it seemed to me at the time that there was little hope.

“Douglas Fairbanks showed me the settings of his huge new picture—in which he is to be Robin Hood—and gave a remarkable exhibition of archery. He also

Film Capital Production Notes

"TESS" TO START APRIL 15TH

Charles Rosher, who since photographing "Little Lord Fauntleroy," has been working in Rome for an Italian company, is expected to arrive in Los Angeles the latter part of next week to commence work at one of Mary Pickford's next picture, "Tess of the Storm Country," locations for which are now being selected by John S. Robertson. The scenario for "Tess of the Storm Country" is being prepared by E. Loyd Sheldon who, with Director Robertson, was brought to the coast by Miss Pickford especially for the new picture.

It is expected that production will start on "Tess" about April 15th.

MISSION FILM CORPORATION AT FINE ARTS

The Mission Film Corporation has moved to the Fine Arts Studios, where Clarence Geldert, president of the corporation, is at present engaged in cutting his recently completed picture, "Carry on the Races," where, in all probability the next Mission Film production will be made.

CASE STARTS

Charles Case has started work on the initial comedy production for Movietone Films, which has the working title of "Revenge." This comedy will star Mr. Case and Marion Laken, a newcomer to the screen.

CALDWELL WRITING CONTINUITY

Fred Caldwell, who has just finished shooting a series of five-reel westerns for the Commonwealth Motion Picture Producers, featuring Jack Perrin and Josephine Hill, is now writing the continuity for a seven-reel comedy drama, the title of which will be announced later.

ORGANIZE FOR "CLEAN" PRODUCTION

"To encourage the production of clean motion pictures" is the principal object of the United Women of America, Inc., of Albany, N. Y., a membership corporation, and a charter member of the Association of the Secretaries of State. Among the incorporators are Mrs. Henry Clark, Mrs. Walter E. Lambert of Albany, and Mrs. J. Woolsey Shepard of New York.

REMAINING S-L PICTURES TO BE COAST-MADE

Arthur H. Sawyer and Herbert Lubin, who operate S-L Pictures, are understood to have three more pictures to make for Metro release. The contract was originally for ten. Of that number George D. Baker made five starring Garrett Hughes, and the other two completed had all-star casts. The three remaining films will be made on the coast, probably at the Metro studio.

BALLIN WORKING AT BIOGRAPH

Hugo Ballin is working at the New York Biograph studio on his next production—based on a story that won the $1,000 prize recently offered by Ballin to Chicago writers. Mabel Ballin and Percy Marmont are cast for the leading roles.

CHAUDET CASTING

Louis William ChauDET is about to start the filming of his first independent production, "The Pillagers." Those already cast in the picture are Jack Muhall, Lois Wilson, Noah Beery, Russell Slappendal and Ralph Lewis.

JOY COMEDIES TO FEATURE FOX

Virginia Fox, for more than a year leading the way for Buster Keaton as featured by the Joy Comedy Company, which organization recently filed final formation papers to produce a series of twelve comedies.

Billy Joy, brother of Leatrice Joy, is the director-producer of the new company and has completed arrangements whereby the company will start shooting on April 24th in the new Horsley studios on Sunset Blvdy.

G. K. Hollister will be cameraman.

POLLARD TO HOLD MEGAPHONE WITH GIBSON

Harry Pollard, who has been engaged in directing "The Leather Pushers," has been secured by Carl Laemmle to direct at Universal City.

Pollard's first work will be to guide Hoot Gibson through a western feature, "Trimmed and Burning," a magazine story of Hapsburg Liebe, production on which will start in a few days. The cast is being selected.

CUMMINGS COMPLETING

This week will see the completion of the Irving Cummings production, "Fires of Vengeance," starring Lon Chaney. Louis Weadock is now at work on the sub-titles, while Hal Kears is in charge of the cutting.

WILEY TO TITLE "FOOLS FIRST"

Marshall Neilan has engaged Hugh Wiley, noted Saturday Evening Post author of negro, Chinese and other stories, to title "Fools First," in which Claire Windsor, Richard Dix and Claude Gillington are featured.

Mr. Wiley wrote and titled "Hop," the Chinese episode in Mr. Neilan's "Bits of Life."

ROSS MANAGER OF CLASSIC FEATURE COMPANY

Herman Ross, former secretary and treasurer of the Labor Film Service, Inc., which he also organized, is now business manager of the Classic Feature Film Co., which is reissuing a number of pictures in the non-theatrical field, including "The New Wizard of Oz," "Dombey and Son," "Her Greatest Performance," "The Lyons Mail" and "Lady Windermere's Fan."

William Farnum may make another picture in the east before coming to Los Angeles.

It is announced that a new process has been invented which claims to make non-burnable film.

"Famous Players has arranged to handle "Ten Nights in a Bar Room" in Canada.

Hodkinson has secured "Free Air," made by E. H. Griffith. It is scheduled for release in April.

---

Notes

"Loyd" is a contraction for Miss Loyd, who is a new star for the studio.

"Father's Day" is also known as "Tales of the Jazz Age." It is a comedy produced by the studio.

The "Fool's First" series will reach ten pictures.

"Famous Players" has acquired the rights to "The Last Voyage."
"IS MATRIMONY A FAILURE?"

Grauman’s

A merry combination of clever farce, polite slapstick, and not a little real human interest excellently directed and perfectly played by a brilliant all-star cast makes "Is Matrimony a Failure?" quite the most sparkling Paramount comedy lately seen.

KATHLEEN CLIFFORD

The author, Walter Woods, hit upon an invaluable idea when he decided to treat so broad a theme as matrimony through the examples of five entirely different but typical married couples. His story is further enriched by some rarely understanding casting and James Cruze’s subtle direction of the predominant farce element, one hundred per cent cutting, a superior scenario and photography.

The romantic interest of the play centers in Arthur Haviland and Margaret Saxby, lovers who despair not even in the face of the marital chaos about them. The former is interpreted with T. Roy Barnes’ most perfect and hilarious pantomime, while Lily Lea leaves nothing to be desired in the heroine.

The Saxbys, Margaret’s parents, form perhaps the most perfectly proportioned team of domestic “battlers” included in the script. The aggressive, talkative wife just seeseth opportunities which Lillian Leighton fails in no instance to develop to their greatest value. Her natural spirit is obvious and a subtle spouse is filled equally as well by Tully Marshall, whose mere appearance evokes unrestrained mirth from the audience. Zsa Zsa Gittins strikes a remarkable balance between the comic and the pathetic in Mrs. Wilbur, the merry wife, with five or six devices to de-villify her character, which characteristically defends to the last ditch. Arthur Hoyt is very good as her “bitter” half.

Sylvia Ashton and Otis Harlan play the Pearsons, while Lois Wilson and Walter Hiers are seen in the Hoyts, all highly amusing positions.

Adolphe Menjou in a “legal mind,” Charles Ogle and Ethel Wales end the list of players.

This type of production, well done in all respects, would raise the standard of more companies than Lasky. It is a valuable departure.

"POLLY OF THE FOLLIES"

Kinema

Just to prove that there is a rural flapper and that she is equally as deadly as the metropolitan variety, Constance Talmadge presents us with "Polly of the Follies," a John Emerson-Anita Loos story directed by Mr. Emerson.

In every imaginative and much abused young resident of Bowing Green is led to the great city where she enters Florenz Ziegfeld’s employ only to step quickly out of her job and into a jazzy romance. "Polly of the Follies" has been given a typical Schenck production, and may boast at least two original comic situations which are handled with mastery and keep the audience in a continual uproar.

Constance Talmadge plays Polly Meacham with her customary fire, which is a bit more attractive than usual in this material.

Kenneth Harlan has a straight lead to his credit as Bob Jones for whom she collects much sympathy.

Billie Dove makes a good “other girl,” while Horace Knight as Polly’s melodramatic old uncle proves as convincingly antagonistic as possible.

Thomas Carr, Harry Fisher, Frank Leder, George Fawcett, Isla Horke, Milkerd Arlen, Paul Donec, Thesera Conover, James Gleason, Bernard Randall and John Daly Murphy portray remaining roles with attendant satisfaction.

"BE MY WIFE"

California

Max Linder’s current comedy, “Be My Wife,” offers a fair amount of diversion to the comedy lover, more perhaps through one or two clever gags and mechanical devices than through the possibilities for mirth which its characters afford. Being an amusing chronicle of the difficulties of an ingenious young man in winning his bride over the head of an impossibly auburn, put over in slapstick fashion, and interwoven with the rather usual dream, it is forced to depend at times upon often-used material and an abundance of vase throwing activity. In any event, all is reclaimed for entertainment in the imaginary fight incident near the end which displays a remarkable degree of originality upon the part of Mr. Linder, Horace Fisher, and Tully Marshall.

In the star role he is seen as himself an energetic sweetheart, bridgegroom and husband, Linder’s characters vary little, yet they always beguile and have gained for him an enthusiastic following.

Alta Allen makes an attractive blonde-opposite for the French comedian and with Lincoln Stedman as Max’s fat rival, forms the rest of the almost fatal triangle peculiar to comedies of this order.

MENTCALFE ASSOCIATED WITH HUGHES

Earl Metcalfe has been engaged by Goldwyn to portray a leading part in "The Bitterness of Sweats," by Rupert Hughes. Hughes and Metcalfe are not strangers, having served together as Majors in the 69th New York Regiment during the war. Metcalfe is the Vice-Commander of the Lambs Club Post of the American Legion and Hughes is the Post Historian.

HOWE JOINS ROACH DIRECTORIAL FORCES

Hal Roach has added J. A. Howe to the directorial forces at his Culver City plant. Mr. Howe is one of the old timers in the picture game, beginning in 1912 as assistant director at the old Reliance-Majestic with Griffith as director-general of five-reel comedy dramas, featuring Lillian Gish, Blanche Sweet, the late Bobby Harron and others.

For the past six years Mr. Howe has been directing on various comedy lots and has 101 comedies to his credit.

NELAN ENGAGES WAYNE

Marshall Nellan has secured Dick Wayne to enact a principal role in "Her Man," Nellan's forthcoming production for Associated First National.

DEANE JOINS FOX

Doris Deane has just been signed to play the lead opposite Clyde Cook in his new Fox comedy, which went into production this week.

DUGAN SUCCEEDS BALSLEY

During the recent stay of the Katherine MacDonald company at Truckee, where some of the snow scenes of "The Woman Conquers" were filmed, J. D. Dugan, known in directorial circles as "Jimmy," succeeded Capt. Clyde Balsley as assistant to Tom Forman, who is in charge of the MacDonald production.

GORDON OPPOSITE ROLAND

Bruce Gordon has been engaged as leading man for Ruth Roland in the Pathé serial, "The Riddle of the Range," which recently went into production at the United Studios.

PERRIN IN WALTON'S LATEST

Jack Perrin, star of the Universal series of "Pob of the U. S. N." will play opposite Gladys Walton in her forthcoming starring vehicle, "The Trouper."

Tom D. Guise is included in the cast of "The Trouper," starring Gladys Walton, just starting production at the Universal Studios.

Ernest Warde will both direct and play a part in "The Riddle of the Range," the Pathé serial, starring Ruth Roland, which is now under production at the United Studios.

Edwin Stevens is handling an important part in "The Man Unconquerable," starring Jack Holt, which recently went into produc-

UNIVERSAL ENGAGES TERRY

Ethel Gray Terry has been cast by Universal to play the role of Madame Corona in "Under Two Flags." Priscilla Dean's present starring vehicle, which Tod Browning is directing.

ROSS TO DIRECT DENNY

Nat Ross has been made a director at Universal City, and will guide Reginald Denney, star of the Universal-Jewel police stories, the first of which is "The Red Rider."

Mr. Ross has served as assistant to many directors and was formerly private secretary to Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Company.

SARGENT IN "OLIVER TWIST"

Lewis Sargent will assist Jackie Coogan in the filming of "Oliver Twist," as he has been cast to impersonate the role of Noah Claypole.

VIDOR ENGAGES VAN DYKE

Truman Van Dyke, co-featured with Eleanor Field in the recently completed Selig-Irvin serial, "The Jungle Goddess," has been selected to play a principal role in Vidor's next cinemplay, entitled "The Shuttle Soul," which is slated to start production next week at the Vidor Studios.

SUNSET PRODUCTIONS SIGNS HOXIE

It is understood that Jack Hoxie has completed his contract with Ben Wilson and Arrow, and that he has been signed by Sunset Productions for eight pictures to be state righted. The first will be "Barbed Wire."

V. Omer Whitehead is playing "The Riddle" in Ruth Roland's serial, under production at the United Studios.

Jean de Briac and Clarence Burton are enacting "heavy" roles in Jack Holt's current starring vehicle for Lasky entitled "The Man Unconquerable."

Fritz Brunette, Helen Lynch and Josephine Crowell are portraying important roles in "Her Man," Marshall Nellan's latest photoplay for First National.

Little Philippe de Lacy, who is appearing in Famous Players' "Is Matrimony a Failure?", is playing a part in the current Monty Banks comedy under production at the Warner Brothers' studio.

Tiny Sanford, Percy Challenger, Alfred Gronell and Jerry Mandy will be seen in support of Neely Edwards in his forthcoming two-reel comedy entitled "Easy to Cop."

Florence Hale and Joseph Hazelton have been engaged to assist Jackie Coogan in the filming of "Oliver Twist," and will interpret the roles of Mrs. Redwin and Mr. Grimwh.

Jack O'Brien has been added to the cast of "The Black Bag," Herbert Rawlinson's latest vehicle, which Stuart Paton is directing.

Ashley Cooper is cast to play the part of his own daughter's father in the Garson production, "The Hands of Nora." Both he and Dulcie are frequently seen in Young vehicles.

“MICKEY” TO AID CHILDREN’S BENEFIT

Marshall Neilan will donate his portable generating plant to the Children’s Exposition at Exposition Park, April 8th to 16th. The electric plant will be used to manufacture direct current for a number of searchlights.

In addition to this Mr. Neilan will endeavor to arrange the “Freckles” Barry booking schedule so that the youngster, who is now making a personal appearance tour of the country, may be here to take part in the exposition.

VALLI PLANNING NEW YORK TRIP

Virginia Valli, who is playing the leading role opposite Herbert Rawlinson in “The Black Bag,” is planning a trip to New York as soon as she finishes the picture. Miss Valli came here from New York City, her former home, to make a series of pictures with Bert Lytell for Metro. It is expected she will return to Los Angeles to resume her work before the camera after a short stay in the East.

EDWARDS IN DUAL ROLE

Ted Edwards, who is co-starred with Billie Rhodes in “Daddy’s Love,” the new Roy H. Klumf five-reeler feature, essayed a dual role in this picture, portraying the characters of both the hero and the villain. The picture will be exhibited throughout the country during the spring and summer months.

ROLAND DINES PRINCE MOHAMED

Ruth Roland gave a dinner party at her home recently in honor of Prince Mohamed Ali Igrafim, nephew of the King of Egypt, who is here on a visit. The other guests were Mrs. M. L. Levy, President of United Studios, and Mrs. Levey; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Canfield and Mrs. Edith Thompson, Miss Roland’s aunt.

LAEMMLE OFF TO NEW YORK AND CONTINENT

Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, recently left Los Angeles for New York. The producer has been at Universal City for several months dictating policies for the season of activity which has just opened. Mr. Laemmle will sail for Europe within a few weeks to confer with European associates.

Louis Rivers and Dick La Reno are members of the cast of “Out of the Silent North,” the current Frank Mayo photoplay production at Universal City.

Winfield-Kerner Company will next week entertain the L. A. Athletic Club the Society of Illuminating Engineers and managers of the different studios.

Thomas Holding and Roscoe Karns are interpreting principal roles in “The Trapper,” starring Gladys Walton, which recently started production at the “L.”

Hal Roach was host this week on his cruise, the “Gypsy,” when his guests were the officers of the Tuna Club, including Keith Spaulding, E. A. Featherstone, Ray Thomas, Nelson Howard and B. O. Kendall.

DIXON ON CENSORSHIP

The following words of Thomas Dixon were published in a recent chapter of the Urban Official Movie Chat:

“Censorship is the silent work in history. It reeks with the memories of tyranny and of blood. God has not yet made the man wise enough to be clothed with autocratic power to restrain thought.”

ENTERTAINED AT WHITE HOUSE

Lillian and Dorothy Gish and David W. Griffith were guests at luncheon recently of Mrs. Warren G. Harding, the first lady of the White House.

Mr. Griffith and the Gish girls went to the capital city recently to be present at the opening of “Orphans of the Storm,” and while there the invitation arrived.

A pre-view of the new Owen Moore film, “Reported Missing,” was given recently at the Ritz Carlton in New York.

THE RISE OF IRVING CUMMINGS

In 1910, after several years spent on the legitimate stage, Irving Cummings made what was considered a dramatic move by throwing in his lot with the Lieurance-Majestic forces in New York City.

His stage experience, combined with his natural talents as an actor, stood him in such good stead that he soon became one of the leaders in the then small band of pioneer picture- makers whose untiring efforts eventually succeeded in bringing the film industry into its own.

Several years ago Mr. Cummings felt the call of the Southland, and on his arrival here was much in demand as a leading man. His ambitions, however, were at that time crystallizing into a desire to become a producer himself, and in his subsequent work that objective was ever in mind, awaiting the chance of fulfillment.

The long awaited opportunity came to Mr. Cummings some eighteen months ago, and he started producing a series of two-reel dramas dealing with the adventurous life of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police.

In this series of twelve pictures the role Mr. Cummings essayed was three in one—star, director and producer, and although he was called on to divide his activities into several different channels where, in justice to himself, they should have been concentrated on one phase of the work only, the series was a big success and brought Mr. Cummings one step nearer his ultimate goal in the producing of big features.

The two real series was followed by a five-reeler feature production of the James Oliver Curwood story—“The Man from Hell’s River”—in which Mr. Cummings was once again star, director and producer of a picture for which there has been keen and spirited bidding.

In his present picture, now in the making, under the working title of “Fires of Vengeance,” Mr. Cummings has been able to give all his attention to producing and directing, his star being none other than Lon Chaney himself, and consequent of the star’s fame and Mr. Cummings’ opportunity to concentrate his own creative genius on the work in hand, great things are predicted for this picture which it shall finally be completed and released.

After Rodolph Valentino completes “Blood and Sand,” his first starring photoplay, for Famous Players, and likewise a full release he will make “Amos Judd,” by John S. Mitchell.

A portrait bust in bronze of Madame Nazimova was recently completed by Renee Prall, a Bohemian sculptor. It represents the actress in the role of Nora in Ibsen’s “A Doll’s House.”

Miss Theresa Yates, musician and dancer from Texas, will make her debut in pictures in Douglas Fairbanks’ latest photoplay, which will start production shortly at the Mackey Ford-Fairbanks Studios on Santa Monica Boulevard.

“Prairie Jack” Edwards, a picturesque character of Casper, Wyoming, is en route to Los Angeles on horseback, bearing a petition signed by several thousand westerners asking Bill Hart to continue the making of frontier pictures. Hart has not been producing for more than a year.

AT LASKY'S

Balboa Beach will be used for some of the scenes in Jack Holt's new picture, "The Man Unconquerable," which will represent real desert fishing activities and waterfront scenes, supposedly in the South Pacific.

Before long Philip Rosen will take his company, making "The Bonded Woman," in which Betty Compson is to star, to San Francisco for harbor scenes and some shipboard episodes.

"Spectre" phenomena will be quite evident in Agnes Ayres' new picture, "Borderland," an original story by Beulah Marie Dix. Miss Ayres plays two roles—one of a girl of about the year 1850 and the other a modern young matron. Milton Sills, Casson Ferguson and others appear in leading roles, and Paul Powell is directing.

Sam Wood is drawing to a conclusion his production, "Her Gilded Cage," in which Gloria Swanson stars, with David Powell as leading man, and Walter Hiers, Harrison Ford and others in important parts.

Cecil B. de Mille will get under way with his new production, "Manslaughter," some time the latter part of this month.

Pending the return from the East shortly of Dorothy Dalton, who will be the featured player in "The Silent Call," an Irvin Willat production for Paramount, Mr. Willat has gone northward to look up a location where cabin sets, etc., will be constructed. Returning to the studio, he will begin work here, and then take his company to the already prepared location. Actual work will start about the tenth of this month.

April 17th is set as the starting date for George Melford's new production, "Burning Sands," by Arthur Weigall, adapted by Ogra Prinzhorn. Milton Sills and Wanda Hawley are to be the principal players in this picture. Mr. Melford is now at Palm Springs looking up locations.

BALBOA STUDIO NOTES

The Monarch Producing Company is following interest in their current story of the Northwest Mounted Series, featuring George Chesebro, supported by Vivian Rich.

The Commonwealth Producers will start production shortly on a seven-reel picture, featuring Jack Perrin and Josephine Hill. Fred Caldwell will direct.

"Bill" Thompson is at present filming exteriors for the Norcross-Leon Productions.

The Baby Marie Osborn Production Company will start producing a series of three-reel comedy dramas, in the near future, featuring Baby Marie and her four year old sister. Pathe will distribute the series.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Harry "Snub" Pollard has a few days work remaining on his two-reel comedy with the working title, "Grandpa's Will," which Charles Parrott is directing.

"Paul" Parrott has been a new comedy the coming week, which Al Santell will direct.

SHIPMAN WITH OTTAWA PRODUC.

The Ottawa Film Productions, Ltd., has been formed to film "The Man from Senegal," starring Rutland Barrington. Ernest Shipman is general manager of the company which has a capital of $150,000.

Kathleen O'Connor and Florence D. Lee are among those cast in Gladys Walton's next starring vehicle for Universal, entitled "The Tresper."

AT UNIVERSAL

Priscilla Dunn, star of Ouida's drama, "Under Two Flags," is busy making cafe scenes.

Frank Mayo and company have returned from location for "Out of the Silent North," and are now occupied in taking interior log cabin scenes.

Marie Prevost, after six weeks vacation, is now working on "Her Night of Nights," with Hallam Cooley, playing the leading male role.

Neely Edwards has just started another two-reel comedy, called "Easy to Cop," with Laura La Plante playing opposite the star and William Watson directing.

CALVERT CARTER

Craig Hutchinson and Allen Curtis are alternating in the direction of Roy Atwell and Ethel Ritchie, co-stars in domestic situation comedies. Separate casts are also alternated weekly, making two units in production.

Another unit production manager has been appointed to work with Martin Murphy and M. K. Wilson under the supervision of Irving G. Thalberg, director-general of the studio. Charles P. Stallings, who has been in charge of the location department for some time, is the new production executive.

He will have charge of the unit starring Frank Mayo and directed by William Worthington, making "Out of the Silent North," and one comedy unit.

The historical chapter play, "In the Days of Buffalo Bill," is on its way to the screen after seven months of hard work. The mass of film will be reduced to eighteen episodes of two reels each.

Three of the short reel westerns starring Tom Santscht has passed into the editor's hands.

Three special productions, "Human Hearts," "That Lass o' Lowrie's," and "The Storm," starring House Peters, Priscilla Dean and Peters respectively, are in the final stages of cutting and within two or three weeks will be shipped to exchanges.

A series of comedies starring Neely Edwards and another co-starring Roy Atwell and Ethel Ritchie, are also in the cutting rooms.

AT THE INCE STUDIOS

John Griffith Wray, with Cullen Landis, Noah Beery, Madge Bellamy and company, making "Someone to Love," a circus story, are finishing location work in Northern California. Pictures will be taken in a circus."Howe's Great London Shows," during its tour of Southern California.

Lambert Hillyer this week completed the final feature, "The Romance of Hate," with Frank Keenan, Lloyd Hughes and Marguerite de la Motte in the cast.

Director James Horne is to begin production next week on a Douglas MacLean comedy, "The Sunshine Trail," the continuity for which is being prepared by Bradley King.

C. Gardner Sullivan, the author, who recently completed the circus drama, "Someone to Love," has begun work on another feature drama to be filmed this year.

DILLON FORMS COMPANY

Edward Dillon has organized the Genius Film Productions and started his plans working by getting the subject ready for the screen. Mr. Dillon will make four productions a year. The first he expects to have ready in a few months and he is now making some of the interiors in the Tiffany studios, N. Y. Mr. Dillon is one of the pioneer directors, having had such players as Mary Pickford and Lilian and Dorothy Gish and Mary Marsh under his direction when he worked under the Griffith banner. His last picture was "The Beauty Shop," starring Raymond Hitchcock, which will be released in May by Famous Players-Lasky.

PREMIUM PICTURES ABOUT TO START

The Premium Picture Productions, of Portland, Oregon, is about to start filming eight five-reel outdoor stories, featuring Jack Nesbit. The story line includes:

Molly Malone, feminine lead; Al Ferguson, heavy; Hugh Saxon, characters; J. T. Zer-ath, characters; William Randolph, juvenile; Lottie McIntyre, in unities; and Mother Wainwright, characters. Harry Moody is the director. Eugene Voltaire, assistant director; Doc Cook, cameraman, and C. C. Cook, assistant cameraman, and H. G. Gunnings, technical director. The stories will be by L. V. Jefferson.

Premium Picture Productions is building a large studio in Portland, which is to be completed in June, and until that time the company will operate in Bisbee, Arizona, where the management has a large force of men building a temporary studio.

The first photoplay is entitled "The Range Patrol." All of these productions will be distributed by the Russell Productions, Inc., of Chicago, Ill.

OUIMET FORMS LAVAL PHOToplAYS, LTD.

1. Ernest Ouimet, president and general manager of the Specialty Film Import, Ltd., recently organized his own producing unit, Laval Photoplays, Ltd., of Montreal. It is John B. Clymer is editing "The Release," a five-reel western, with Alfred Caldwell, featuring Jack Perrin and Josephine Hill.

BURR TO PRODUCE AT GLENDALE, L. I.

Charles C. Burr has purchased the studio at Glendale, L. I., formerly used by the Emancipation Film Corp. It will be known as Burr's Glendale Studio.

Johnny Hines will make "Go-Get-'Em Gal- lagher," his next full length feature there, and Burr also plans to make there a new series of comedies.

JACK PICKFORD IN AN ORIGINAL

It is expected that Jack Pickford will start work shortly on a picture for United Artists McCutley. It will be an original by Jonston McCutley.

R-C will release "The First Woman," featuring Mildred Harris.

HELEN RAYMOND

RE-ELECTS DIRECTORS

The annual election of the stockholders of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation was held at the company's New York offices recently. The following directors were re-elected: Jules E. Bruijntour, Cecil B. De Mille, Daniel Frohman, Albert Kaufman and Sidney Kent. The following were elected to the finance committee: Frederick G. Lee, Gayor O. Dominick, Maurice Wertheim, Theodore F. Wilmars and Adolph Zakor.

FOX NEWS TO ELIMINATE AMUSEMENTS

The Fox News has decided to eliminate all pictures of sports, games and other amusements that might be considered competitors of motion pictures. This means that the twice-weekly issues of Fox News will not pictures which might tend to keep the public out of the theatres and send them to other amusements.

John Davidson and Stuart Holmes have been cast to interpret principal roles in "Under Two Flags," starring Priscilla Dean.

John M. Stahl has completed the cutting of "One Clear Call," his latest independent unit production for Louis B. Mayer. The film is now being prepared for shipment to Chicago. "One Clear Call" has an all-star cast headed by Henry B. Wallis, Irene Rich, Milton Sills and Claire Windsor.

Charles Reed Jones has charge of the Hamilton White publicity at United Studios.

Clarke Irvine, of Irvine Service, has just been appointed correspondent for The Silver-sheet, the U. S. Army Motion Picture Service magazine.
"ISLAND WIVES"
(Vitagraph)

"This picture is a variation of the South Sea formula and as such it doesn't offer much in the way of novelty. As a matter of frankness, it fails to carry any suspense for the steady patron who has seen the pattern used since the beginning of the multiple-reel feature. The author has pecked his story with conventional figures who are piloted through a number of scenes of arbitrary design—some of which strain credulity.

"The producers have given the story a colorful production. . . . The storm scene is highly effective, it being charged with Bratrate suspense and high class in a technical way. . . . The titles are written in an impressionistic style and as far as the plot is concerned, the producers have done their job. But the production is high class."—Motion Picture News.

"The acting of the entire cast in 'Island Wives' is excellent throughout and this serves to stem the tide when the story weakens."

"The story shifts from a beautiful tropical isle to San Francisco and then back again to the island, and in the city scenes Miss Griffin has an opportunity to wear many beautiful gowns.

"The photography is clear and the tropical storm scenes well handled."—Exhibitors Herald.

"It isn't a very new idea that Bob Dexter thought up for his 'Island Wives.' In fact, it comes very nearly being in the 'formula' class with some of the other familiar ones such as the eternal triangle, the officer of the Northwest Mounted, etc. But in spite of all this, Vitagraph has succeeded in making a picture that will probably please a great many. . . . The interiors are good but the painted drops used outside the windows are a bit too obvious, especially where the ocean is 'painted.' Otherwise production values are all up to standard."—Wid's.

"There is much in the picture that pleases the eye in 'Island Wives' that the shortcoming of what should appeal to the mind go by the board to such an extent that they are almost obliterated."—Moving Picture World.

"FAIR LADY"
(United Artists)

"There is one very bad give-away in this picture that will be detected by anyone that is at all observing. And for those who catch it, it not only discloses the ending long before it is reached but also lessens the interest in the incidents leading up to the conclusion. The mob scenes are well done and bring the action up to quite a pitch of excitement."

"'Fair Lady' is very different from anything else Rex Beach has written and not at all the sort that folks will likely think it to be in its handling of usual out-of-doors atmosphere."—Wid's.

"At the present time melodramas seem to be enjoying increased popularity. . . . It is ten, twenty, thirty, or all dressed up smartly. . . . This sort of melodrama always has universal appeal."

"'Fair Lady' is a new treatment of a familiar theme, the Italian vendetta. There are plenty of thrills and the suspense is maintained throughout. It grips you. Kenneth Webb directed the picture with such technical interest he has brought out the intrinsic values of the story, and has injected atmosphere that raises the picture above the average melodrama and gives it an unusual appearance of believableness."—Moving Picture World.

"Like all of Rex Beach's stories, 'Fair Lady,' based on his widely read novel, 'The Next,' seems constructed for picture purposes. It is well handled, the New Orleans atmosphere being most satisfactory, and the story cast doing good work."—Exhibitors Herald.

"ASHES"
(East Coast)

"Those patrons who are ever in search for life-like episodes on the screen and who delight in stories of human nature are likely to be well satisfied with 'Ashes,' a melodrama which carries a deal of novelty of plot, characterizations, and incident."

"In spite of the theme and situations growing out of it, there is nothing spacy or objectionable in the offering."—Motion Picture News.

"Had not the 'ashes remained on a man's cigar he would have been arrested for attempting to burn his wife's letters. He turned his anger to the woman and accused her and her male companion of blackmail. This furnishes the big scene and also the title of 'ashes,' a State right production, distributed by East Coast Productions, Inc., and directed by G. M. Anderson."

"As is frequently the case in productions carrying two distinct stories, there is a drop in the interest at the close of the first one, when the final threads of the other are also beginning to wind up. But a good portion of the chase scenes and many of the subplots are observed attempts at humor."—Exhibitors Herald.

"Elope If You Must"
(Fox)

"Elope If You Must," is an average screen comedy which would never have seen the light if there wasn't a great scarcity of good stories. . . . The story is too improbable from the start and depends upon a string of stock situations ranging from locking hotel detectives in closets to calling out the fire department and drenching everyone with water at the finish. There is too much repetition of the chase scenes and many of the subplots are obvious attempts at humor."—Exhibitors Herald.

"Eileen Percy engineers this comedy successfully through a story course of mismatch-making and match-breaking efforts. . . . Most of the fun lies in artful dodges, underhandedness, and continual skirmishes—all with the entertaining appearance of being meaningless, but with a definite purpose, which is finally achieved.

"A comedy that can be judged as fairly good entertainment. The story has in it enough good material to make a clever two-reeler but scarcely warrants or holds sufficient interest for long footage. Primarily it shows great possibilities but gradually loses itself in resorting to slapstick methods to keep the thing going. The situations are too often repeated and depend chiefly on some sort of chase for excitement."—Exhibitors' Trade Review.

"This feature looks decidedly better than the majority which have come from the Fox lot's starring Eileen Percy. While it boasts too much sparkle at the beginning to keep such a dizzy pace, it manages to finish with a fair burst of speed. The trouble is it starts off with a typical farce tempo and the high jinks give way to a zippy chase of the slapstick brand. There is hardly enough substance to extend through five or six reels. Condensed into a polite three reller, it would carry a spontaneity and compactness largely absent in this edition."

"The interest slackens when incidental by-play is introduced to keep it going. It's a helterskelter line of action which taxes the spectator because there is no single thread to keep him at attention."—Motion Picture News.

"OTHER WOMEN'S CLOTHES"
(Hodkinson)

"The original story of 'The Luxury Tax,' by Ethel Doncher, is adapted to the screen in the production of 'Other Women's Clothes.' The title is rather misleading, inasmuch as very little effort has been made to show any display of gowns as one might expect. There are numerous twists to the plot and most of them are unconvincing. The story manages to hold a fair amount of interest and occasionally some good comedy has been introduced to liven it up."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"The production values of this picture far surpass the story qualities. Indeed the theme of this offering has been ground through the movie mill on several occasions and even were it not burdened with improbabilities, so noticeable here, it does not carry enough substance to entertain beyond its pictorial appeal."

"The continuity is well arranged. In fact everything has been done to make this an exceptional picture, but alas, it is burdened with a weak plot—one devoid of any conspicuous highlight."—Motion Picture News.

"ROBINSON CRUSOE"
(Universal)

"What promises to be a crackerjack serial, provided the pace set in the first two episodes is maintained, is 'Robinson Crusoe,' produced by Universal. It is interesting, full of action, well produced and finely photographed. Based on Daniel Defoe's classic story of adventure, it will not only please the children but will take grownups back to their own days in the desert."

"Director Robert F. Hill desires commendation for the manner in which he has handled this production. It is well made and holds the interest. Particularly striking are the scenes of the storm at sea and mutiny on board ship when Crusoe finds he has set sail on a pirate ship."—Moving Picture World.

CHESTER TO SUPERVISE SCENARIOS FOR MAYO AND WALTON

George Randolph Chester, creator of "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford," and who is widely known as a magazine writer, has been engaged by Universal to fill an important position in the scenario department at Universal.

Chester will rank as a supervising editor, and we will have jurisdiction over the preparation of material for two producing units—those handling the pictures of Frank Mayo and Gladys Walton.

During the last three years, Mr. Chester has been editor-in-chief for Vitagraph, his last and most important work being the preparation and direction of "The Son of Wallingford," a current success.

ARROW FOREIGN DEAL

D. J. Mountain, manager of Arrow's foreign department, recently closed a contract with the Argentine Porlamar Film Co., of Buenos Aires, for 36 five and six reel features.

Arrow also has closed a deal whereby it will handle the foreign rights to all of the Anchor productions. These will comprise about 26 features, a series of 12 two-reel monkey comedies and a series of 26 one-reel comedies.

TO PRODUCE IN FAR EAST

The M. P. Utility Corp., will leave San Francisco presently for Japan, where scenes will be filmed for two stories written by Elena Jurado. Kenneth McCaffey, secretary of the company, will go along.

ALDER TO MAKE THREE MORE

W. F. Alder, producer of "The Fire Bride," a Wild Gunning release, recently announced plans to make three more pictures in the Orient. One will be "The Flying Fox," which Edwin Carewe will direct.

Scenario Market

The R.D. Film Corp., Balboa Studios, Long Beach, will consider original stories dealing with Royal Northwest Mounted Police or any other outdoor subject submitted in synopsis for all-star casts. Scripts should be addressed to R. S. Roussel, and if rejected scripts will be returned after a week.

Universal Film Mfg. Co. is in the market for stories for five-reel productions to be used for both star and all-star features. Scripts should be directed to the Scenario Dept., Universal City, Calif., and if unsuitable they will be returned within ten days.

Winther-Reynolds Productions, Mayer Studio, 3800 Mission Road, are in the market for two-reel comedies and an article for western atmosphere. Scripts should be addressed to the Scenario Editor, and will be returned as soon as read, if unavailable.

Lasky Studio will consider good stories, either published or original, suitable for their several stars, Betty Compson, Gloria Swanson, Dorothy Dalton, Thomas Meighan, Wallace Reid, etc.; and also unusual stories with big theme for all-star special features. Scripts will be read and reported upon in order of receipt, but should be heard from within three weeks.

Campbell Comedies, Fine Arts Studios, are in the market for two-reel comedies featuring children and animals, submitted in synopsis form. Send scripts to the Scenario Editor and a report from them can be expected within ten days.

The following studios and production companies are not in the market for stories at present: Talmadge Productions, Frothingham Productions, Louis B. Mayer Productions, Redfern Studios, R.K.O., Christie Comedies and Jackie Coogan Productions.

David Butler Productions, Hollywood, Los Angeles, is in the market for either original or published stories submitted in synopsis form for star who plays small town or country roles. Scripts will be returned as soon as read.

Chester Bennett Production, United Studios, requires stories, either synopsis or ideas, suitable for Jane Novak. Must be something very good with new twists. Outdoor stories of the north woods type and snow scenes preferred. Scripts should be sent to the Scenario Editor, and if not accepted, will be returned within two weeks.

Metro Pictures Corp., 900 Cahuenga Ave., can use outdoor stories for Bert Lytell and light comedies or comedy-dramas for Viola Dana. Scripts should be addressed to the Scenario Editor, and if not accepted, will be returned within ten days.

Cosmopolitan Productions, New York City. In the market for published stories only, submitted in synopsis form, for all-star casts. Scripts should be addressed to John Starbuck, Assistant Editor, Scenario Department.

persuaded me to sit down on his trick sofa, which is electrically wired and gives one a terrific shock. We all had a hearty laugh at this.

There have been other studios visited, including Christie's, Charles Ray's, Buster Keaton's, Rex Ingram's, Goldwyn's, Norma Talmadge's and Charlie Chaplin's, and these will be described next week. In the meantime, the committee on investigation of iniquitous Hollywood is hard at it, and if we don't find anything sensational it won't be our fault.

"And by the way, I attended a ball given by one of the rich people. It was a small affair, and nearly everyone of any note in Hollywood was there. I observed only two people who had been degraded enough to carry flasks.

"The other one was Mr. Arthur James, who is also in the magazine business in New York."

Carolyn Rankin in Aunty and Charlie McHugh playing Mr. Madame Corallie furnish some hilarious moments, while others in the wholly clever cast are Viera Daniel and Mme. Rose Dione.

C. H. Roach, secretary and treasurer of the Hal E. Roach Studios, leaves presently on a trip East. He expects to be gone for about six weeks.

WERE we content to rest upon the laurels of what the name "Hellman" has meant in the development of California, Hellman Commercial Trust & Savings Bank would still enjoy an enviable prestige. But we are not content.
